In order that they may take an appropriate part in the celebration of peace, the six old bells at Westminster Abbey are to be thoroughly restored, and new ones will be added to complete the octave. These old bells are of great historic interest. All except the treble (or smallest) were cast at the Whitechapel Bell Foundry of Messrs. Mears & Stainbank. The tenor, which is the largest, weighing one ton and a half, was cast in 1738; the fifth in 1598; the fourth and second in 1742, and the third in 1858. The treble is an early fourteenth century bell, cast probably by Richard de Wymbish, who was founding in the parish of Aldgate at that time. The treble and third must have been rung to celebrate the victory over the Spanish Armada in 1588, and one of them will ring again to signalize the greatest victory of history. When the Abbey authorities asked the foundry to overhaul the bells for ringing at the signing of the armistice, it was found that they were in such poor condition that only the smaller bells could be rung. Messrs. Mears & Stainbank reported that nothing less than entire rehanging would be of service. Fortunately two benefactors, who wish to remain anonymous, generously came forward and offered to bear the cost. Two smaller bells, to complete the octave, are to be added, and the old bells will be returned, the whole ring being rehung with entirely new fittings and framework. The old fourteenth century treble, while too small to take its place successfully in the octave, will be preserved, and a new bell cast in its place. The Abbey will then possess the heaviest ring of eight in London.

Told by Gen. Biddle.

Gen. John Biddle, commanding the United States forces in Great Britain, has been poking fun at the German Chancellor, who, in the Reichstag recently expressed his thanks to the neutral nations for their courtesy and kindness.

"Germany," said Gen. Biddle, "is now in a position where she is grateful for a kind word, no matter how gruffly spoken.

"In fact Germany's feelings to-day are very like those of the lady who sang 'Juanita' at a concert. She sang so badly that she was interrupted with a volley of cat-calls, but in the tumult a man yelled fiercely:

"'Oh,' she said, 'I'm so glad to see there's at least one gentleman in the house.'"

Depended.

Mother—Tommy, are you tall enough to reach that bottle on the kitchen shelf?

Tommy—Not if it's my cod-liver oil.

MUSEUMS ARE POPULAR.

Londoners Have Turned Attention to Culture.

London has laid down the sword literally, and more literally taken up the copybook. War as a popular entertainment, like all sensations, has snuffed out like a candle.

With the reaction the average Britisher has discovered himself lamentably ignorant. A mind culture boom is now well on its hind legs. Educational parties are more prevalent even than society women nurses in the picture papers. And mostly they take the form of visits to long neglected historical spots, picture galleries and museums. Here are the adventures of one such party on a visit to the Natural History Museum at South Kensington:

The "Natural History" is a go-ahead institution and beneath its camouflage of Latin inscriptions and long words there beats an almost human heart.

For example, not far from the statue of Prof. Owen and the large wax model of the common flea you will find for your delectation a pile of instructive pamphlets on Pickled Herrings and How to Cook Them."

The latest improvement is the installation of a guide, J. M. Leonard, B.Sc., who convoys the seeker after truth round the galleries from 12 to 1 p.m. and delivers entertaining lectures on the exhibits by the way.

The correspondent found him on the top floor, where the upper mammals live, explaining the Javan Pithecanthorpus to a lady officer, one school girl, five men and four small boys with large notebooks.

It was an interesting lecture on popular lines, and only once or twice did it stray above the level of the non-scientific mind.

"Those of you who have read Prof. Somebody's 'Ancient Hunters' ——" said Mr. Leonard, and though we all tried to look as though the book was part of our daily food it wasn't a great success.

"The most interesting part of the world to the anthropologist is the Philippine Islands, for there you find traces of nearly every race on the globe." The schoolboys made a note of that, and one of the men nodded his head.

"Next below man came the apes, of which the most intelligent is the Gibbon." This, by the way, is not the gentleman who wrote the "Decline and Fall." Anybody could see that.

It was only too true. Some of the specimens had arms even bigger than our old friend Coincidence, and could do that touch-your-toes exercise prescribed by medical board without bending.

"Now we come to the Eskimo. The Eskimo has no word for 'quarrel' in his language. When a difference of opinion arises, the contestants meet and make rhymes about each other. These they sing until good feeling is restored."

Next we come to the Red Indians. The boys pricked up their ears.

"These Red Indians," said the lecturer, pointing to the colored busts in the case, "are neither red nor Indians. They are mongoloids, and their color is brown.

"Here we have the natives of the Purus river in Amazonia, a race of which we know little. Three expeditions have gone to explore that river, and not one man has returned. All were murdered by the natives." The boys crowded to the front, licking their pencils.

"On my left are the Negritos, of the Andaman Islands. A low-down lot! I mean in the evolutionary sense. They have not risen, and I don't suppose they will. They are born tired and bone lazy."

It was an interesting tour, for Mr. Leonard has a way of making those old dry bones live again. Although to-day was his first trip round, he did not lose one of his audience.

Rat Plague in England.

London and the other great cities of England would pay willingly today the demands of modern Piper of Hamelin who would relieve their warehouses from the present plague of rats.

Marsh rats have increased lately by millions, and a great migration is in progress from the country to the town, and the loss arising from damage by rats is piling up rapidly.

While a portion of the increase is due largely to the war and the absence of preventive measures, there is no doubt that the regulation prohibiting rat baiting is the main cause for the present condition.

William Jones, the well-known London rat catcher, stated that before the order prohibiting rat baiting was made it was worth his while to spend a night or two on the marshes outside London for a bag of 300 live rats, which would find a ready market on Sunday morning at Club Row, Spitalfields, at eight cents apiece.

Since the prohibition this rat catcher has sought his livelihood in established buildings, where his attentions may be occupied for several days in clearing out a mere handful of rodents. He estimates the annual loss to the country from rats' depredations at more than $35,000,000.

The City of London Corporation has just appointed an inspector of vermin, with powers to take all measures to cope with the plague.

Britain's Live Stock Trade.

During 1918 the pedigree stock breeders of Great Britain and Ireland exported 2,757 head of cattle valued at $705 each. Sheepmen exported 4,840 head at the declared value of $135 each. Pigmen sent away 97 head at $285 each.

During last year 600 head of pedigree cattle were exported from Great Britain and Ireland to the United States at an estimated value of $350 each. Canada took 313 head, said to be worth $450 each. In 1918 the United States bought 1,181 sheep from Britain at a declared value of $85 each, and Canada took 244 head worth $65 each.

The Volcano and Modern [illegible]

A YOUNG man who wishes to make a name for himself and little or no money could hardly choose a more promising career than that of volcanologist, according to Calvin Frazer writing in Popular Science Monthly. "There are brilliant discoveries to be made and the field is not a bit crowded."

However, the aspiring volcanologist must, we learn, be in possession of certain attributes before he can hope to attain success. These are "an aptitude for scientific [illegible] the physique to endure rough mountaineering and the courage to face the risk of being engulfed in the fiery lava."

Touching upon the general lack of knowledge in regard to volcanoes Mr. Frazer says: 'Our grandfathers knew a great deal more about volcanoes than we do, but what they knew was nearly all wrong. They declared that the interior of the globe was a 'molten mass.' It is almost certainly a dense solid, more rigid than steel." And the facts which prove this, he says, are "its weight (as determined by astronomers), the way it transmits earthquake waves, the resistance it offers to the distorting effect of the sun's and the moon's attraction, etc. But the interior of the earth, as far as we can determine, is so intensely hot that if at any place far below the surface the stupendous crushing force of the rocks above is, by any means, somewhat reduced, the solid must change to a liquid, or even a gas."

How earth tides cause eruptions is thus described:

"Various circumstances do, in fact, bring about an easing up of this pressure here and there and from time to time. The whole globe is shrinking as it cools, and its surface is warped into folds and creases. Moreover, there are regular tides in the earth's crust—a rise and fall of about a foot, on an average, twice a day. These things cause variations in pressure underneath, and the melting of deep-seated rocks probably takes place on a vast scale. It is only occasionally, however, that a little of the liquid rock known as magma rises to the surface and gives us a volcanic eruption.

"How does the magma get to the surface? That is one of the things we do not know about volcanoes, but we have a strong suspicion that what happens is this: Imagine a large mass of melted rock miles underground. It is subject to tidal and other stresses, through which the magma will be squeezed out as far as possible. Suppose one of these fissures directly upward to be nearly filled with the magma. Through the magma stream gases, generated from the more volatile elements of the rocks, and these gases accumulate at the top of the column, where they are under such great pressure that they become excessively hot, according to a well-known law of physics. It is probably this hot gas which, by melting the adjacent rock, eats its way through the strata, forming a vent for the magma. The liquid rock may come forth in a quiet flow at the earth's surface, as in the case of the volcanoes of Kilauea and Mauna Loa, in Hawaii, or it may burst forth in a great explosion. The explosive effect is probably much intensified by the presence of steam. Specimens of volcanic gas collected in the crater of Kilauea and pumped from the lava into collecting tubes without coming in contact with the air were found to be heavily charged with steam.

"Can the eruptions of other volcanoes be predicted? If so, then volcanology is one of the most important of the sciences in terms of human welfare. This practical problem is not yet fully solved, but it is in process of solution. A sudden succession of earthquakes at a volcano portends an eruption, and the few volcano observatories of the world are all equipped with seismographs—instruments that record the slightest earth tremor. When an eruption is in progress the chemical composition of the volcanic ash gives some indication as to how long this eruption will last."

MUSIC SUPPLANTS GOAT-RIDING AT THE LODGE

It will be recalled that in those droll cracks Mistress M'Lerie had with Mistress Munro, the former was quite disturbed when her old friend broached the subject of Mr. M'Lerie's being a Freemason. No wonder Mrs. M'Lerie became anxious when it was explained to her how those secret societies carried on. It was definitely charged that the members of the lodge spend much of their time "ridin' aboot on a nanny-goat in their stockin' soles," and it was insinuated that their evil and heathenish practices were in the same class as "nillats and gun-poother plots." No wonder the Freemasons were sworn to secrecy!

Were Mistress M'Lerie living today she would be hearing a great deal of the splendid speeches delivered at the lodge and of the fine music that finds a place on every programme. The truth of the matter is that these same secret societies have some of the very finest music at their proceedings. Usually a special committee is charged with responsibility for providing music and in many cases this committee goes to no end of trouble in arranging for excellent songs by prominent soloists. And many songs well sung never fail to appeal to a group of men. One gentleman of the writer's acquaintance not long ago took great pride in the fact that "he wasn't enough of a ladies' man to forego his pipe and slippers for any recital at which he would hear the trala-la-la-ing of So-and so." Yet no other than this Mr. So-and-so tra-la-la-ed a rollicking sailor song at the lodge a couple of weeks later and r friend thumped the table so loudly in applause that a glass of water toppled over causing himself a disconcerting minute or two.

Music also finds a fitting place in fraternal ritual for which many organizations have their own well-trained choirs. There is no social meeting complete without music and the lodge is no exception.

The school boy who begins his day with music enters upon his appointed studies with more enthusiasm because of the stimulus of the music.

SINGERS SHOULD BE ABLE TO PLAY THE PIANO

At a conference of music teachers, the statement was made and allowed to go unchallenged that amateur singers are poorer musicians than any other class of musical performers. One of the chief reasons is that while a pianist, for instance, usually has begun his or her studies at the age of eight or so, the vocalist is prevented from starting in so young on account of the prevailing idea that until the voice is matured it is better not to take up singing. The real process of voice training is rightly left until later, though great opportunities are missed in many public schools to give the children a start in singing. Unless the violin he or she is at a disadvantage a young man or a young woman has previously been studying the piano or age when entering upon a course of vocal study.

It is therefore a good policy for parents to anticipate the future by giving their children lessons on the piano or violin while they are children. Galli-Curci has given her approval of this idea. The great soprano, who is also an excellent pianist, said: "A girl who desires to be a fine singer must not begin vocal study too young. She should not even be singing much at sixteen or seventeen years of age, but should wait until she is at least eighteen. But those early years should be well used learning much piano, for a singer must be able to play her own accompaniments."

Sembrich, when a young girl, studied the piano and violin. Melba has frequently played her own accompaniments. And these are but three outstanding examples to emphasize the statement that a singer will be a better singer for having studied the piano or violin as a child. The mistake must not be made though, that this appears not to those singers who aspire to places of preeminence in the public's affection. The ordinary member of a choir is going to master her part of the new anthems more quickly for having had training in piano or any other instrumental music. The amateur singer, whose only public appearances are the rendering of drawingroom songs among friends will sing all the more acceptably and will be able to master a varied repertoire of songs from having studied the piano. It is good advice to vocalists of all kinds to recommend their taking training in piano, violin, 'cello or some other instrumental music.

A MUSICAL SPOOL HUNT

The average woman marries and has children. She has had the privilege of "taking" some music in her youth but as the household duties increase and social calls multiply, the music is very often neglected until the piano becomes a silent instrument. Of course this is a mistake. It is a great mistake. For the husband's sake, for the children's sake, for their friends' sake as well as for the mothers' own sake, the music should not be let drop. But if this mistake has been made the mother becomes all the more anxious to make sure her children get a good musical education.

Many mothers today are doing all in their power to surround their boys and girls with a musical atmosphere partly because they know that the lack of ability to sing or play means in later years and partly because they know how it helps young men or young women to be able to sing or play especially when their work takes them away from home. A mother of this type is doing a great deal for her own family and for their little friends. Whenever the opportunity affords she gets them interested in a musical game. The other Saturday it was not fit for the little folks to play outside so this woman had them all come in the house for a "musical spool hunt." A number of empty spools were commandeered. On each one was pasted a letter so that when all the spools were put together they would form the name of some familiar piece. One little girl was chosen to hide the spools while all the others were out of the room. There was great merriment finding the hidden spools and when all were found in putting them in order to spell the title of a well-known hymn or a piano piece they had been practicing or a song they frequently sang in school.

Later on the game was varied instead of forming the name of a piece the spools represented the name of a great musician or composer, one that all children should know. This sort of game kept the children occupied caused them to concentrate on musical names and made the Saturday afternoon a profitable one.

REMEMBER THE SOLDIERS

When you sing patriotic songs—when you play patriotic music, you are helping to win the war. You are inspiring the men at the front. You are giving courage to those who have sent their men to the front.

This is the real work which the phonograph records are doing, and for that reason they are helping to win the war. But—is it fair that you should enjoy all this wonderful music? Don't you know that the soldiers at the front will heartened and encouraged by hearing good records which are sent to him by those "over there"?

Send him some now.

And remember that the selections the soldier likes best are the popular ballads of the day, quartettes, stirring marches, etc. This is the critical year War weariness must be dispelled patriotic music will dispel it.

MUSICAL BRIEFS

The hands, heart, feet and mind must co-operate to give piano playing its true value.

Snobbishness in music is as dangerous and as uncalled-for as snobbishness in social life.

Did ever a mother say the lullaby with which she soothed her child was a luxury or a non-essential?

As Shakespeare said the devil may quote scripture, bad men may use music; but there is no bad music. By its very nature it can never debase. It has always been a close ally of religion.

Public speakers take music as a matter of course. They expect a band or orchestra, or soloist or music in some other form to prepare the way by making people's minds receptive. Take away the music and the orator's work of arousing enthusiasm would be doubly difficult.

Did you ever play "music authors"? The players sit in a circle. One person is judge and keeps the records. The players rise in turn and name some familiar musical composition. The first one to call out the name of the composer receives a point. The game continues until interest lags and the one who has guessed the most composers is the winner.

DIED—In Cavan, on Monday, March 24th, 1919, John Hunter, aged 82 years. The funeral took place from the family residence on Thursday, March 27th. Interment at Presbyterian Cemetery, Millbrook.

Pte. George Freelove.

Pte. Freelove returned to Millbrook last week after serving over four years in England and France. He enlisted in Nov. 1914, with the 21st Bn., went overseas in April, 1915, and to France in Sept. same year. He was on transport duty all the time, but saw much fighting and came under fire many times. Their transport only turned back once and that was at Passchendaele, when it was utterly impossible to go through if they had tried to do so they would have been annihilated. The gunners themselves had extreme difficulty at that time but they saved their guns. Pte. Freelove returned on the Royal George. He said they received good treatment coming over. He is glad to be back in good old Canada again. We join in welcoming him.

Pte. Harold Donaldson

A large number of the friends of Pte. Donaldson were at the Depot Saturday evening to give him a welcome home from the great war. He enlisted in December, 1915, with the Queen's Battery, Kingston. He went overseas in February, following, and went to France in July, 1916. In November 1917, he was wounded in the right arm, at Passchendaele, and was in the hospital for some time and was back with the battery for three months; afterwards he was teaching in Khaki University, near Vimy Ridge, and was with the Canadian equipment corps at headquarters for some time. He went overseas on the Metagama and returned on the Olympic. We join in welcoming him back home.

Sergt. Roy Dawson

Sergt. Dawson enlisted in March, 1916, with the 202nd Sportsmen's Bn., of Edmonton, went to England in August, sailing on the Muritania and went to France on March 8, 1917 and was transferred to the 10th Bn., 1st Division, Canadians. After six months in France he was shot in the leg at Hill 70, near Lens. He was sent to England and was in hospital three months. He was then put on instructing casualties in physical training at Bramshott Camp, 2nd Command Depot. Sergt. Dawson was at Rhyl, Wales, when the riot occurred. There were several reasons for the riot, the main one being that the third division was getting home first. The boys had no money and the food was poor. Roy returned on the Minnekahda, and made the trip to Halifax in 7 days. The service on the boat was very good. Quite a number of Sergt. Dawson's friends met him at the depot Monday evening and gave him three cheers and a tiger. We are all glad to welcome him home again. He says he never felt better and is sure glad to be home.

Agricultural Society Elects President

Mr. Joseph Hamilton is a son of the late Mr. John Hamilton, and was born on the homestead, lot 5, con. 3, Cavan, and has lived there all his life. His mother was Miss Sarah Love from near Kingston. Mr. Hamilton received his education at Zion School. His wife was Miss Emma Debertha Osborne, of Bowmanville. Mr. Hamilton spent three years in the Royal School of Infantry, Toronto, has been trustee of Zion School for twelve years, member of Cavan Board of Health for 8 years, Deputy District Grand Master of East Durham L.T.B.A. for four years, a past Grand Master of I.O.O.F. Red Cross member of R.B.P. and member of Peterboro Encampment and of L.O.L. No. 40, Fallis Line.

At the January meeting of Millbrook Agricultural Society, Mr. Hamilton was elected President for 1919. Under his able supervision as President the Society will no doubt continue in its good work, and we predict that with good weather, the Millbrook Central Exhibition of 1919 will be the best ever.

War Relief Society

A meeting of the War Relief Society was held on Tuesday, March 25th in the Waverley Inn, to discuss the future plans of the Society. The President, Mrs. Eakins opened the meeting with a few well chosen words, after which the minutes of the last meeting and reports of the different officers were given. The business of the meeting was then proceeded with. It was decided not to disband the Society at present but to close the work room. Wool for knitting will be given out and articles taken in by Mrs. Eakins and Miss Vance, at their homes, on the last Tuesday of each month.

Foreign Credits for the Sale of Canadian Wheat.

J. A. Maharg, M.P., says that Canada cannot expect to export to the United States wheat of the 1919 crop. The fixed price in that country will keep out the Canadian product, for the Americans would not allow cheaper Canadian wheat to undersell their own, which remains at the 1918 fixed price.

This means that Canada's exportable surplus of wheat must find a market abroad, which further means that it must be sold on time. Mr. Maharg says that many solvent nations want it, but that they cannot pay cash, so if sales are to be made large credits must be granted.

The Dominion Government is willing to grant these credits, but its ability to do so is dependent on the extent to which it can borrow money from its own people. If the money is forthcoming all the credits required will be granted but Canadians must make these possible. For Canada to borrow money abroad for this purpose would be out of the question.

War Savings Stamps help solve the problem of credits, for they enable the Government to borrow at home the money it requires. Besides, the price of the stamps is placed so low, $4, that every person earning wages in Canada can afford to buy them. The farmers of the West should be eager to get them for they are vitally interested in seeing that foreign credits are granted.

The ideal musical life is that of the well educated amateur. He is the one who can come to his music as a pleasure and a recreation and yet because of his knowledge of the art, is not satisfied with low grade music. Music is sweetest when untinged with any color of business, consequently the amateur of good musical standing can take uncontaminated enjoyment from his music free from the commercial spirit that sometimes enters the life of a professional musician.

This is the Program of One State to Offer Unemployed Work.

Springfield, Ill., April 2.—First definite steps in the state's $100,000,000 hard road building plan were taken yesterday, when the department of public works asked for bids on approximately 115 miles of federal aid highways in norther Illinois. Action of the department is considered in the nature of a "show down," inasmuch as it was stated that the bids will be rejected unless they are "reasonable." They will be opened here April 24.

Lincoln highway—DuPage county, 11 miles; Kane, 18 miles; Dekalb, 15; Ogle, 3; Lee, 19; Whiteside, 6.

Three Materials Suggested.

The roads are to be constructed of cement, brick or bituminous concrete and alternative bids are asked on each of these materials. The width will average between 16 and 18 feet.

Simultaneously with the sending out of the call for bids came advices to local dealers that a reduction of 6 cents on the barrel had been agreed on between manufacturers of cement and the war industries board. The best quotation the state has been able to get on cement heretofore, it is said is $1.80 a barrel whereas Gov. Lowden has expressed the belief that the state could manufacture the product at $1 a barrel.

In Addition to "Bond Rates."

The program of federal aid road construction contemplates building about 700 miles of highways. This is in addition to the $60,000,000 bond project and building by counties with state aid under the provisions of the Tice act.

It is expected that bids will be asked next week on considerable stretches of county and state aid high ways.

FOCH, SOLDIER, PHILOSOPHER; BIOGRAPHY OF MAN OF ACTION

Modest in bulk, but full of meat, this biography of a man of action has been written in the manner best calculated to give a portrait of its subject in the round—by a study of its actions and of their consequences but it also inferentially, if not to a certain extent of set purpose is marked off from the man of ideas. With us the active characters the practical men, the individuals who, whether in public or in private affairs "get on the job," have always held the first place in esteem; the theorists and philosophers a place very secondary by comparison. It is not easy to account for this common estimate. For one thing, as soon as inquiry is made into it, the belief proves to be without foundation—just one of the idols of the market place. Greatness in action is always found when looked into to have sprung from greatness or boldness in ideas; in a word, from exceptional grasp of or faith in some theory. The Cromwells and Napoleons alike in art of war and in that of government are on analysis discovered to be philosophers, inventors in the first instance over disbelief. Without true, that is to say applicable, ideas, energy is nothing—mere fuss, ending in futility. True ideas, however, imply a power of thinking at once clear and deep and it is the only power which ever has moved or ever will move the world. Greatness in action is greatness in design, and to profess admiration of the one while condemning the other is of all self-contradictions the most unreasonable

Of the life of Marshal Foch, and of any sketch of him, this is the moral He bulks large in the public eye as the successful general, the man of the hour, the commanding military genius of his epoch. But he is these things because, like others of his type he is pre-eminent as a thinker and a theorist, and because the hall-mark of the philosopher properly so called is the faculty of penetrating to realities; of getting past conventions shams, and current delusions; of distinguishing fact from fiction. The term philosopher conjures up a black gown gown or a desk rather than a uniform and a marshal's baton; the scratching of a quill rather than the thunders of a battle. Yet the manner in which great powers of thought may translate themselves depends upon the circumstances of the time. In a time of profound peace, present and prospective, the translation will not be that of an era of storm and stress. The power makes the form most serviceable. Thus from the disastrous year 1871 onwards the ultimate need of France was that her genius should run into the mould which would ensure her salvation for the menace of Gothic dominnation remained suspended over her like a cloud ever deepening in its gloom. By themselves her material resources would not stave off servitude and ruin. They must be handled with consummate skill: embodied in some master mind the genius of France must outmatch her sworn foes in the art of war.

Hence it is no accident that most of the great Frenchmen of this generation should be soldiers, for the situation of France gave to military studies a reality of purpose which attracted to them the strongest heads. And in that lay the assurance that among a people so endowed the master mind would not be found wanting when the need arose.

In the war of 1870-1 Joffre took part in the defence of Paris, as a subaltern of artillery: Fosh a volunteer, as a private in the 4th Regiment of Infantry. Both were then youthful students. Probably, had conscious search been made, the very last quarter where a future generalissimo would have been looked for was among the solid population on the French side of the Pyreness. But here too the boy was father of the man. It was surely no common taste for a boy to read through Thiers' History of the Consulate and Empire. Did that perusal and its impressions start the train of meditation upon Napoleon and the adaptation of Napoleon's methods to modern war? Almost certainly the question may be answered affirmatively! Though the idea only shaped itself by degrees, it was fertile, and Foch set out on his career, having at the back of his mind the key to the future triumph of France. He, however, was not one of those precocious brilliancies who appear as if blocked out at one stroke. His character presents itself rather as a stout edifice built up stone by stone. Nor, though he held it strongly, and time went on, and as he studied and developed it, did he thrust his view upon others. No man was more aloof from the tricks of "influence" and self advertisement.

Foch never for a moment thought about easy ways of bringing his name before the public and the political world, or even about acquiring a name for military insight among the chiefs of the French army. He never posed as a central figure at public functions; he was never interviewed by the Press; he made no use of professional reviews to bring his name before military readers . . . From the day he received his first commission as a hard-working student of war patiently preparing himself to do his duty when the opportunity came, and meanwhile content to put all his energies into the work assigned to him.

At once modest, reliable, and a man of ideas— qualities which in combination marked him out, while they disarmed opposition— he was, after various regimental, divisional, and staff experiences, appointed Assistant Professor of Military History and Strategy at the Ecole de Guerre. That was in 1894, and it was the turning point. He knew his subjects as few men knew them, and he taught them after a fashion as original as it was effective. It was during the six years of his professorship that there were published the two volumes containing the substances of his lectures—the "Principles of War," and "The Conduct of War." Of the latter, the more advanced treatise of the two, Captain Atteridge gives a synopsis clear, sound and sensible.

For the next seven years Foch went back to active service, with successive advances in grade. So little, however, had he sought personal fame that when the directorship of the Ecole de Guerre fell vacant he did not apply for it. It was bestowed upon his as the best man fitted for the position. The selection could not have been more fortunate. On the mind and moral of the French Army his influence and his teaching now had the widest effect.

The rest we know, and we know how that influence and teaching have stood the test. To follow the author of this rapid and faithful pen portrait through his account of the campaign of 1918 is not necessary. It is enough to say that the campaign was once more a proof that the true man of action is the man who, being master of theory, can design and originate. Captain Atteridge's summary is balanced and accurate; sober veracity over flashing anthithesis. The personal traits of the mashal his simplicity, his reserve, his unaffected piety, his tireless industry, his inflexible decision and his kindliness— are brought before the reader, but with the touch and intention of friendly revelation not in the mood of curiosity.

Perhaps the most difficult period of Foch's career was that in which while Chief of the French Staff he was asked to combine with its duties those of military adviser to the Allied Council at Versailles. He found the two functions impossible, and delegated the second. The arrangement, in truth, was unworkable. Military opposition to a real unity of cammand there never was. The opposition was political. It gave way before the ill-fortune of the Allied arms: its consequence. Those who distrusted theory thought they could get on better with a cumbrous substitute. They discovered their mistake, and the monumental achievement of Foch is that he cleared up this mess besides launching and sustaing his victorious offensive.

MRS. NEWHALL ON VERGE OF DESPAIR

OSHAWA WOMAN SAYS SHE IS FEELING FINE AFTER TAKING TANLAC.

"Tanlac was the only thing that gave me any relief, and I am convinced that it is the right medicine for people in the condition I was in," said Mrs. Elizabeth Newhall, of Oshawa, Ont., recently.

"I had been in a general run down condition for over a year," she continued, "was extremely nervous, had no strength nor energy, and the least little exertion would so exhaust me that I would feel real faint. I ached all over and felt half dead all the time. I had no appetite and would skip meal after meal. Nervous, blinding headaches would almost drive me distracted; my nerves were shattered so that the least little thing would upset me and I'd get up in the morning feeling so miserable I could hardly keep on my feet.

"After taking Tanlac a few day I began to feel better. My appetite is now splendid, and nothing I eat hurts me at all. Those terrible headaches are all gone, I have more life and energy and my work is a real pleasure to me."

Tanlac is sold in Peterboro by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield, by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowler's Corners, by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

SCOTS TO DEVELOP POWER RESOURCES

WATER IN LOCHS CAPABLE OF GENERATING ELECTRIC ENERGY.

The water power resources of the country have been investigated by a committee appointed by the Board of Trade, and the interim report of the committee, dealing principally with selected schemes in Scotland, is published in the "Board of Trade Journal."

Nine water-power stations at a number of lochs, &c., described by the committee are capable of generating a continuous supply of 183,300 electrical horse-power, corresponding with an output of 1,200 million Board of Trade units per annum. These powers, it is considered, can be developed on a sound commercial basis, and it would be practicable to transmit the energy to Glasgow, the Clyde Valley, Edinburgh, Aberdeen, and Dundee. It is estimated that the average cost, including running expenses and capital charges, should not exceed 0.7 of a penny per unit at the water-power stations. The energy could be delivered at a price considerably lower than the present cost of electricity. —From the point of view of large waterpowers, the topographical features of England and Wales are less favourable than those of Scotland, and the water resources of areas like the Lake District and Mid-Wales are already utilized to a considerable extent for the domestic requirements of large towns in the Midlands and the North of England.

THAT IRISH-AMERICAN FUND

Points Which the Philadelphia Convention Overlooked but Which Americans Might Considar.

Frank Dilnot, in a communication to the New York Times says:

There can be no doubt as to the regret with which England will receive the news that a body of Americans, many of them responsible and respected citizens have subscribed over a million dollars for what is euphemistically described as the "freedom" of Ireland, but which means in plain language, secession from the British Empire.

I would like to see every one of those subscribers go across the Atlantic and examine conditions in both England and Ireland and then form their judgments. In reading the reports of the Philadelphia convention an English Home Ruler receives the impression of a flaming idealistic nationalism, a hatred of England based on sores long ago healed, and a total lack of recognition of many hard facts in relation to England and Ireland which an impartial adjudicator—say a man like the President of the United States—would have to take into account.

In the first place there was a resolute ignoring of the fact that the vast majority of the English, Scottish and Welsh people desired Ireland to have home rule, a home rule which should give her self-government only short of the power to negotiate with foreign countries a home rule in fact such as approximates generally with that enjoyed by the States within the Union or with that of the British dominions overseas.

No mention was made of the fact that a section of Ireland's population —not less Irish than the rest—and numbering some 25 per cent of the whole, are so passionately opposed to separation that they proposed to resist by force of arms, even Home Rule, which they feared might remove them from British affiliations and British protection.

The gathering shut its eyes to the fact that devoted and courageous Irish leaders like John Redmond and John Dillon and Joseph Devlin who were on the spot, knew Ireland from end to end and England also, had not merely accepted but had fought for Parliamentary Home Rule within the empire as the surest way of securing freedom and happiness for Ireland.

The denunciations of tyranny drawn from pictures of the past, but meant to apply to the present, overlooked the fact that the Irish chose to remain outside the operation of conscription for the recent war and were able to do so.

There was no realization of the fact that Ireland, within a few miles of the coast of Britain, conducts her daily life in the English language, is linked up by a multitude of business and personal relationships, and whatever her troubles, tragedies and aspirations has been for many hundreds of years a constituent part of the country comprised by the British Isles.

One finds in the reports no suggestion that the conference was ready to face the fact that anything from 90 to 99 per cent of the population of England, Scotland, and Wales is prepared to resist to the limit the setting up of a separate Irish republic with the power it would have to establish relations with foreign Governments with the possibilities of elaborate hostile bases within touch of English shores, although this resolution goes with the strong general desire that Ireland shall have power to manage her own affairs by local self-government.

In the ardency for complete separation there was apparently no reference to the recent Irish conference, composed of leaders of varying shades of opinion asked by the British Government to formulate a scheme for Irish Government—a conference which, while it did valuable work could not agree on a plan.

All these points, and others besides are in the minds of people in Britain and they take them into account when they read the impassioned determination, backed by money, or enthusiasts in America for secession. The Irish problem cannt be solved by rhetoric, however sincere the feeling behind it. There are a lot of practical considerations.

FRANK DILNOT.

New York, February 25, 1919.

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

TRY GRANDMOTHER'S OLD FAVORITE RECIPE OF SAGE TEA AND SULPHUR

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the additions of other ingredients, at a small cost.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.

FLO-FLO

Paris Boulevards or New York's Fifth Avenue never saw a more spectacular array of beauty and fashion than that which adorns John Cort's phenomenally successful musical comedy "Flo-Flo", which comes to the Grand Opera House on Saturday, matinee and evening. "Flo-Flo" had an entire season's [illegible] Cort in New York where it proved a veritable magnet for theatre-goers fond of good music and clever comedy.

A notable cast, a comedy chorus—every member of which is a "Perfect 36"—effective scenery, striking costumes and two comedy teams either one of which would have been a show in itself, are only a few of the more obvious reasons why the Cort was sold out every night during the "Flo-Flo" engagement.

Flo-Flo is the most beautiful corset model in the exclusive Bride Shop, owned by Mosher and Simpson, who are preparing the trousseau of Miss Angelina Stokes, whose mother is endeavoring to compel her to marry a bogus Spanish Count against her will.

Just about this time Billy, Angelina's child sweetheart from Oshkosh, arrives in New York, but when Mrs. Stokes finds him with her daughter she separates them sternly and orders Billy away, Billy, his hopes blasted, falls for the wiles of Flo-Flo to drown his sorrow and as he has sought and found employment with Mosher and Simpson, he finds this a convenient, but not a lasting panacea.

Flo-Flo realizing that Billy still loves Angelina, relinquishes her claim on him. The theft of Angelina's trousseau by Pinky and Aloysius, two youths who dance themselves into favor aids in a happy denouement. To "Flo-Flo" Silvio Hein has given a number of song hits among which are "Good Bye Happy Days," "Would You Say No," "I don't Know What You See in Me," "On the River Nile," "Don't Trust Them," and the "Ziegfeld Girl."

Included in "Flo-Flo's" all star cast are Louise Kelly, Jere Delaney, Carl L. George, William Cummings, Rose Southern, Mildred Beverly, Augustus Buell, Rhea Norton, William Burton Burns, Edward Lynn and other favorites and the "Perfect Thirty-Six" Chorus. An augmented orchestra is said to add greatly to the general excellency of this offering.

MISS LOUISE KELLY,

who will sing the Prima Donna role in John Cort's big joyous musical furore, "Flo-Flo," coming to the Grand Opera House Saturday, matinee and night.

Petrarch and Laura.

Petrarch's romance with Laura is one of the curiosities of literature. He first saw her on Good Friday, April 6, 1327. Whether or not his devotion to her, which inspired all his love poetry and set a standard for ages to come, was inspired by any passion of the heart is firmly disputed. In fact many believe that Petrarch and Laura never met. That she appeared to him, however, as the perfect woman no one can deny after reading his impassioned lines.—Christian Science Monitor.

Tit for Tat.

Stevie and Robbie were cousins, and although very fond of each other, did not always agree. One day Robbie's mother entered the room where the little ones were playing, and was immediately appealed to by her son. "Mamma, mayn't Stevie tell me my faults?" "What do you want Stevie to tell your faults for?" asked Robbie's mother in astonishment. "So that I can tell Stevie his," was the unexpected reply.

Proper Care of Cellar.

Cellars will acquire a musty odor after being closed for some time. To remove dampness as well as to disinfect the cellar, sprinkle chloride of lime on the floor and close up the cellar for a few days. Then open the windows and let in the air until the chloride of lime odor disappears and your cellar will be ready for storing vegetables.

Served Him Right.

A Bangor newspaper man, bringing from his garden at Hampden a lot of potatoes in an old suitcase, was stopped by a deputy sheriff, who insisted that he should open the suitcase. When he did so all the potatoes rolled out on the sidewalk. The crowd made the unwilling deputy pick all the potatoes up and pack them in again.

Futility of Lying.

Whatever convenience may be thought to be in falsehood and dissimulation is soon over; but the inconvenience of it is perpetual, because it brings a man everlasting jealousy and suspicion so that he is not believed when he speaks the truth, nor trusted when perhaps he means honestly.—Wisconsin News.

Our Gifts.

As the Magi came bearing gifts, so do we also bear gifts that relieve want; gifts that are sweet and fragrant with friendship; gifts that breathe love; gifts that mean service; gifts inspired still by the star which shone over the City of David two thousand years ago. —Kate Douglas Wiggin.

Political Corruption.

Corruption in political life is really skepticism. It is a distrust, a disuse which has lasted so long that it has grown into disbelief of political principles, of the first fundamental truths of the sacredness of government and the necessity of righteousness.—Phillips Brooks.

Breathing Cold Air.

A person breathing cold air obtains as much oxygen in six inhalations as he would in seven taken in hot weather. This increase of oxygen is a matter of great consequence to sufferers from lung trouble and also to the person enjoying good health.

Insects and Forest Fires.

Insects cause the destruction of more timber that would otherwise be available for building purposes than do forest fires, according to investigations made by the bureau of entomology at Washington.—People's Home Journal.

Miners as Gardeners.

The growing of leeks is a favorite occupation of the miners of Northumberland, England. They are skillful gardeners and particularly proud of their leeks, in the cultivation of which there is keen competition.

Good Motto.

Phillips Brooks once said, "Come take that task of yours which you have been hesitating before and shrinking and walking around, and on this very day lift it up and do it."

Chinese and Telephones.

In spite of the fact that the average Chinese is fond of using the telephone, it has been found difficult to obtain enough subscribers to support local lines in that country.

A Change for Them

"What do professional fishermen do when they take a vacation?" asks the writer of a sport column. Maybe they tell the truth, brother.—Boston Transcript.

No Chance for Him.

When you see a man who is willing to let well enough alone you see one who will never occupy any of the room at the top.

Generally Has That Idea.

"De man dat says: 'Let de bes' man win,'" said Uncle Eben, "mos' always thinks dat he's de bes' man hisself."

Daily Thought.

What's gone and what's past help should be past grief.—Shakespeare.

Women in War Work.

The vast extent to which British women replaced men in industry and commerce during the war is disclosed in a White Paper issued recently. Not only did the number of women ordinarily employed show an increase, but more than 1,600,000 additional came forward to take the place of the men. Making all necessary deductions and additions, it is estimated that the net increase in female workers employed outside their own homes was 1,200,000.

The number of females employed in industrial concerns and Government establishments in April, 1918, were: Munitions, 701,000; other Government work in industry, 774,000. The number of females employed as permanent work people in agriculture in July, 1914, was 80,000; in 1918 the number was 113,000.

The number of women employed in Government hospitals had risen from 700 in July, 1914, to 13,600 in January, 1918, and the number in hospitals under the Red Cross Society increased from 6,300 to 28,600 in the same period.

In July, 1914, there were only about 1,500 women employed in banks; there are now 37,600 engaged in such employment.

Bulldog Beatty.

"Early in everything." That is the motto of Admiral Beatty, Britain's naval hero. In the service he is known as "Bulldog Beatty," by reason of the tenacity with which he fastens on to any job he is called upon to tackle.

The navy swears by him, and he is proud of his men. After Jutland the Huns boasted of the destruction of his ships. Beatty simply replied: "The battle-cruiser fleet is alive and has a very big kick in her." Fortunately for them, the Huns did not wait for the kick.

Beatty's naval record is amazing. He was a commander at 27, a captain at 29, and rear admiral at 38—the youngest on record. Nelson was a year older when he was promoted rear admiral.

His Punishment.

Lawyer—Don't you think $25,000 cash would be punishment enough for his breach of promise?

The Aggrieved—No, indeed; I want him to marry me.

Said the facetious observer: "One of the principal differences between the frugal woman and the fat one is that one tries to reduce expenses and the other expanses."

One Definition of Envy.

"Envy," said Uncle Eben "is one of de unpleasant symptoms 'sperienced by folks dat has been tryin' to git somethin' foh nothin'."

It Depends.

Whether a woman is good-looking depends largely on whether you are speaking of her face or to her face.—Wilmington News.

IN MEMORIAM.

These lines are written on the death of Mrs. Joseph A. Northey, of Burleigh, who died February 13th, 1919:

A precious one from us is gone,
Her pain and suffering past;
And all her work on earth is done:
She is numbered with the blest.

Dear Mother, she has gone to rest;
We miss her from our home;
She's gone to dwell where angels dwell,
Where sickness ne'er can come.

Her relatives far and near may meet
To spend a social hour,
But Mother's face will not be there
To meet us any more.

But she had learned to trust a Friend
Who is a Friend indeed,
And, leaning on His mighty arm,
She trusted Him to lead.

And many times when tempted,
No doubt she's heard him say,
"Fear not, for I am with thee,
And will be all the way."

Calm she sleeps in Jesus now:
The warfare, it is past—
The battle's fought, the victory's won
And she is crowned at last.

Her lot was cast 'midst trouble,
And oft her heart made sore,
As one by one her loved ones
Passed on the other shore.

But now she's crossed the river,
Her face no more we'll see;
But in the bright forever
A starry gem she'll be.

Heaven retaineth now our treasure,
Earth the lonely casket keeps,
And the sunbeams long to linger
Where dear, sainted Mother sleeps.

Peaceful be thy silent slumber,
Peaceful in thy grave so low;
Thou no more will join our number,
Thou no more our sorrows know.

Yet again we hope to meet thee
When the day of life is fled,
And in Heaven with joy to greet thee,
Where no farewell tears are shed.

Oh, the hope, the hope so sweet,
That we soon in Heaven may meet,
There we all shall happy be—
Rest from pain and sorrow free.

CENTRAL ONTARIO BALL LEAGUE IS ORGANIZED

Belleville Applied for Admittance but Other Places Objected to Granting This.

Baseball was formally revived for the season in this district when representatives from all the chief cities and towns met at Port Hope yesterday afternoon and formed what will be known as the Central Ontario Aminclusion in the league, but was reincluded teams from Oshawa, Port Hope, Bowmanville, Cobourg, Peterborough and Lindsay.

Refused Admission.

Belleville made an application for inclusion in the league but was refused on account of the difficulty of getting to that point by rail from Peterborough and Lindsay and the extra time required. It was decided however, that the executive of the C. O. L. will assist Belleville in forming an Eastern Ontario League in which, no doubt, Kingston will be included.

J. J. Solomon, of Peterborough, presided at the meeting in Port Hope, yesterday afternoon and M. J. Dedman, of Lindsay, was chosen secretary.

The Johnson Cup.

The Mayors of the towns included in the Central Ontario League were appointed Honorary Presidents as well as Mr. A. T. Johnson of this city, who donated a cup for the team which carries off the season's honors.

The Executive.

Officers elected were:

President—A. Lockington, Port Hope.

1st Vice-President—A. Kinnell Cobourg.

2nd Vice-President—Mr. J. Knott, Oshawa.

Secretary-Treasurer—Mr. J. Dedman, Lindsay.

Honorary Presidents—A. T. Johnson, Peterborough; Jno. Storey, Oshawa; J. B. Mitchell, Bowmanville; S. B. Burnham, Port Hope; S. Denton Cobourg; George Duncan, Peterboro; B. L. McLean, Lindsay.

Councillors—Lindsay, Ford W. Margutts; Peterboro, J. J. Solomon; Port Hope, A. Mark; Cobourg, A. Kinnell; Bowmanville, G. James; Oshawa, J. Knott.

It was decided that the opening games of the league would be played upon May 24th. A draw was made to decide where they would be played and resulted as follows:

Port Hope at Lindsay.

Peterborough at Oshawa.

Bowmanville at Cobourg.

Return games will be played on July 1st.

Adopt O. A. B. A. Rules.

The single umpire system was adopted, and it was decided to play strictly amateur ball on O. A. B. A. rules and the winner to compete for The News Trophy, emblematic of the Ontario championship.

Residence rules for players as approved by the meeting provide that none can play who becomes a resident of a city or town later than May 15th with the single exception of soldiers returning directly from overseas.

Ask For Change.

An effort will be made to have the local half holiday changed from Thursday afternoon to Wednesday afternoon so that games can be played upon Wednesday and Saturday. The reason for this is that every other city or town in Central Ontario observes Wednesday afternoon as the half holiday except Peterborough. The reason that this city chose Thursday for this purpose was on account of the market, which at one time was held here on Wednesday, but as this is now a thing of the past, it is felt that there is no reason why the day should not be changed to one which would be more convenient for sport and other activities.

HORSE BREEDER SUICIDES.

Poor Health and Grief Over Loss of Son the Cause.

Springfield, Ills., April 3.—Edward Smoot, wealthy farmer of Petersburg, Ills., and widely known all through the state as a breeder of thoroughbred race horses, committed suicide at a hotel here by shooting.

Poor health and grief over the loss of his son, with the A. E. F. in France, is said to have been the cause of the act. Searchlight, the famous stallion, was one of the string of horses owned by Mr. Smoot.

Mr. Smoot was about forty-eight years old and is survived by a widow and daughter.

U. S. League Club's Suit For $50,000

EVIDENCE PREPARED TO REFUTE THE CHARGES OF MONOPOLY.

Washington, D. C., April 3.—Organized baseball interests defending the Baltimore Federal League club's suit for $900,000 damages in the District of Columbia Supreme Court prepared to produce evidence in answer to the charges of monopoly which have been made.

George Wharton Pepper, counsel for the American and National League interests, said that a motion for an instructed verdict would not be made until after testimony for the defence had been placed before the jury.

Lt.-Col. S. S. Janney, former counsel and director of the Baltimore club, testified concerning negotiations prior to the "peace pact" which closed baseball warfare. Garry Herrmann, chairman of the National commission, according to Col. Janney, said that during the negotiations transfer of the St. Louis National club franchise to Baltimore was considered. Col. Janney also stated that the Baltimore club received an offer of $50,000 with the club to retain its grounds and players. A counter proposition for $75,000, he said, was rejected.

Austrian Naval Coup Frustrated

Rome (delayed)—According to a statement published in the Rome newspapers, a former Austrian naval commander has just related how, in June of last year, the Austrian Naval Staff had made all its plans for an attempt to force the Straits of Otranto; but the scheme never materialized. On June 14 the entire Austhrian fleet was to be assembled at Cattaro, from which harbor it was to set out in three groups. The first squadron, including four Dreadnoughts was to arrive before Brindisi with the object of enticing the Italian fleet to come out and engage in battle; a second squadron of lighter and speedy warships was to bombard the Italian coast at selected points in order to attract the attention of other Italian naval units, and simultaneously a squadron of cruisers and destroyers was to attempt to force the Straits and destroy the defences there.

The Austrian commander states that the heroic act of the Italian Commander Rizzo in destroying the mainly responsible for the dislocation of the Austrian plans.

SUBSIDIES FOR UNEMPLOYED

Rome, April 3.—The Official Gazette publishes the decree establishing subsidies for the unemployed. It is in conjunction with the decree of last November, which recognised unemployed officially and established bureaus for finding work. The latest decree regulates the subsidies which will be granted to workingmen or women and to the laborers who are out of work involuntarily. The subsidy will run from the eighth day of idleness, and whenever the worker already has obtained an indemnity for release from auxiliary establishments it will begin eight days after such indemnity stops.

Persons will not be considered involuntarily idle who refuse to accept any work offered by the bureau of employment at the prevailing wages. Women also are excluded who return to household duties after having performed work in a factory or done other war work during the period of hostilities.

The subsidies are of three kinds. They include communes with less than 20,000 inhabitants, [illegible] 000 and above 60,000. In the first place, the provision is for 2 and 1.50 lire respectively to men and women more than 21; in the second it is 2.50 and 2 lire; in the third 3 and 2.50 lire. The amounts for minors are smaller.

Subsidies are awarded through the workingmen's unemployment banks, or from the bureaus or commissions appointed to find work. Whenever any of these are not ready for business subsidies may be granted by the mayor of a city.

GERMAN GOVT. IS SAFE UNTIL PEACE IS SIGNED

UNLESS SPARTACAN LEADERSHIP CAN ORGANIZE WIDESPREAD MOVEMENT.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Berlin, April 3.—If the Spartacan leadership is not able to organize a widespread movement, the government probably will be able to maintain itself until peace is signed. As to the peace treaty, the members of the government and their publicists are announcing firmly, perhaps sincerely, that no preliminary treaty not in accord with their interpretation of President Wilson's armistice terms will be signed, particularly if it involved the alienation of what is called purely German territory.

This announcement probably is correct so far as the cession of the Saar district, the political alienation of the west Rhine bank outside of Alsace Lorraine, and perhaps the incorporation of Danzig in Poland are concerned. But the pressure of public opinion, which would not easily understand or accept any failure to obtain peace, and the desperate food situation, probably will force the government to modify this recalcitrant attitude in case of need, and sign any terms of peace presented by the Allies except those mentioned above.

BOOZE SENT CARE FARMERS' CLUB OF INDIAN RIVER

INSPECTOR STEWART SEIZED LIQUOR ADDRESSED TO MAN NAMED GEO. MORRISON.

Inspector Joseph Stewart on March 24 seized a consignment of choice whiskey at the C. P. R. station at Indian River addressed to George Morrison, in care of the Farmers' Club. This morning, after hearing his testimony in connection with the case, Magistrate Langley gave him permission to forward the liquor to the Government's warehouse in Toronto, as the owner had not been found.

Under False Colors.

The choice of the fictitious address was probably prompted by the idea that the case of whiskey would arrive safely when addressed in care of such a respectable organization, but Inspector Stewart, who had just seized another consignment at Peterborough which was addressed to a party in Bethany, took the train to Indian River and seized the chest addressed in care of the Farmers' Club.

Alcohol for Lakefield.

A week ago Inspector Stewart seized another shipment consisting of three gallons of alcohol addressed to John Orr at Lakefield. It never got by the Canadian Express office here and Mr. Orr never called for his precious consignment of concentrated Montreal cheer, nor do the people of Lakefield know of any man rejoicing in such a name.

Devolved From Passing Idea.

It was a passing idea which gave to the world the discovery of galvanic electricity, so useful in transmitting vocal or written language. Mme. Galvani simply happened to notice the contraction of the muscles of a skinned frog accidentally touched at the moment her husband took a spark from an electrical machine, and that was the whole thing!

Snakes in Ireland.

There are snakes in Ireland, but only two or three species. The popular idea that Ireland is snakeless arose from an error made by a compositor in the translation of Horebrow's "History of Iceland" in 1758. The compositor made "Iceland" into "Ireland," and the sentence has remained. Iceland is too cold for snakes.

EDITOR'S MAIL

THE BANKRUPTCY ACT

Editor Review:

Dear sir:—

It will be of considerable interest to the Commercial world to know that at last a practical bankruptcy act has been introduced into Parliament. It has just received it's second reading in the House of Commons and in a very short time may be expected to become law.

The Mill as drafted provides that in case any debtor has an execution levied on his goods and it remains unsatisfied for fourteen days, or if he makes a statement to any meeting of his creditors that he is unable to pay his debts, or if he assigns or moves or hides any of his goods or attempts to do so with intent to delay his creditors, or if he makes a bulk sale of his goods without complying with the bulk sales Act, he commits an act of bankruptcy, which means that he has placed himself in the position of being liable of being made a bankrupt. The Bill, does not apply to wage earners or farmers. On committing an act ofbankruptcy any creditor of $200.00 or upwards, or a combination of creditors to that amount may by petition make him a bankrupt.

The Bill provides for vesting in a Trustee the property of any person made bankrupt, and the Trustee has power in the discretion of the creditors and the Court, to sell all the property of a bankrupt, and after paying expenses and making some provision for the maintenance for the bankrupt and his family, dividing the proceeds of the sale between the creditors rateably. There are some curious provisions in the Bill which are intended to protect creditors for instance; the husband or wife of a bankrupt will not be able to collect from the bankrupt's estate any debt due to him or her from the bankrupt until all the other creditors have been paid and any relatives who work for the bankrupt, can only get three months wages.

A debtor is liable to arrest if he fails to make a proper statement of his debts and liabilities or attempts to conceal his books if he absconds or avoids examination or tries to embarass the proceedings in bankruptcy or if it is shown that he is about to do so, or if he removes any of his goods after service of a bankruptcy petition on him. The Court is given full power to examine and inquire as to everything owned by a bankrupt and there are many safeguards to prevent a bankrupt from making away with his property to defeat his creditors.

Perhaps one of the most important features of the proposed law is that after a man has surrendered all his property to a trustee in bankruptcy whether it is enough to satisfy the creditors or not, he will have power to apply to the Court for a discharge which means that if the Court makes the order his debts are extinguished so that if he gets property afterwards his old creditors cannot touch him. The policy of the proposed act seems to be that where a man pays 50c on the dollar, and acts honestly he will be entitled to a discharge as a matter of course, but if he can be shown to have omitted to keep proper books, or to have traded after he knew he was insolvent, or that there are suspicious losses, or if he has been unjustifiably extravagant, neglectful, or speculative, or has brought or defended actions frivolously, or given undue preferences, or wilfully incurred debts so as to make his assets up to 50c on the dollar, or that if he has been guilty of fraud, the Court is to have the power to refuse to give him discharge or to postpone it.

There are a number of provisions relating to the disposal of property of the debtor by way of settlement on his wife or family which will make it very difficult for the man to avoid paying his debts by putting property in the name of his wife.

Upon the whole, the Act if passed, will be a great benefit to the commercial world because whenever a debtor is unable to pay his defts in full all his creditors will be entitled to share equally in his assets, men will have to be honest in dealing with their creditors, as a number of offences are provided for in the bill for the imprisonment of the debtor which will make fraudulent traders in great peril. One thing in particular where traders fail to keep proper books and become bankrupt they will be liable to go to jail for a term not exceeding one year and this will make it encumbent on every one to keep such books if they wish to avoid trouble.

On the other hand great injustice is now suffered by honest but unfortunate men who fail in business and who are never able again to hold up theirs because they have unsatisfied debts which cannot be paid by them and they have no incentive to begin over again, the discharge of such men, in their bankruptcy will give them courage to start again unfettered by the incumbus of a load of debt and the fear that the fruits of their labor will be snatched from them before they can make any headway.

So far as it goes this is a salutory change in the law that has long been wanted and Parliament has only now to pass a satisfactory divorce law to bring us in line with the other civilized nations of the world who have long since understood and provided for the necessity which these enactments are intended to satisfy.

Yours truly,

JAS. J. GUISE-BAGLEY

TRIED TO TAKE LIFE OF THE WOMAN HE ADMIRED

Hides Under Bed and Shoots to Kill—Sends Bullet Through His Own Heart.

Chicago, April 2.—Albert Bottenhagen made good his love-made threat to end his life today. A few hours after he had tried to kill the object of his affecton, Miss Jennie Bodeen, a nurse, and failed in an attempt to send a bullet through his own brain he saw police hiding in the door of his home at 1646 Hudson avenue. He turned his revolver against his own body again. This time he succeeded and a bullet tearing through his heart sent him to the floor lifeless.

Miss Bodeen is in the Augustana hospital with a wound in her side. She will recover, surgeons say. She was not informed of Bottenhagen's suicide although she knew he contemplated it. A nineteen page letter from him found in her room, was filled with threats to kill himself.

"In no event," he said, "will I hang on later than Wednesday."

Hides Under Her Bed.

The shooting of Miss Bottenhagen took place in her room at 2236 North Clark street. The nurse came in from a case at 3.30 a.m. She prepared to retire and was on the point of turning out the light when she heard a rustling under the bed. Albert's head appeared, then he emerged bodily, got to his feet and drew a revolver.

"Now you're going to marry me," he said, "or something big's going to happen."

"But," protested the nurse, "I can't marry you. You're too young for me. And I'm engaged to another man. You know that. Won't you please go away?"

"If you won't marry me then you won't marry anybody," exclaimed Bottenhagen. Whereupon he pointed the revolver at the nurse and fired twice.

Attempts Sucide.

The first bullet went through the woman's side and she fell to the floor The second lodged in the wall. Bottenhagen, believing her dead, then turned the weapon against his own head and pulled the trigger twice. The cartridge failed to explode. Hurrying steps on the stairs warned him that awakened members of the household would be on him in a minute and he dashed to the window, through which he escaped to the porch roof and thence to the ground.

John and Joseph White, brothers occupying a room below Miss Bodeen's, were the first to reach her side. They saw her on the floor with blood flowing from her side. They hastily summoned the North Halsted street police and a doctor and she was taken to the hospital, while the police began a search for the boy.

Victim Engaged to Soldier.

Miss Bodeen, when questioned at the hospital by Detective Sergeant Rowan and Rusch, told of the unflagging courtship which the young teamster had waged. She declared she was engaged to George Haas, a soldier now in France. Haas, she said had lived with a married sister on Southport avenue, near Waveland avenue. Mrs. Dorothy Suchow, 3729 Ward street, a former patient of Miss Bodeen, confirmed the story of the nurse's engagement, declaring she had talked constantly of her finance and of her plans to establish a home upon his return.

Senator Beaubien, speaking in support of his bill, said that daylight saving was in the interest and for the benefit of all the population that it was a great economy in public health, that it saved hundreds of millions of tons of coal, and that the farmers should not be permitted to withhold such a boon from the people.

Senator Murphy, who followed, said that in the Maritime Provinces ninetny-nine per cent of the people favored daylight saving.

The bill, being read a second time stands for consideration in committee on Thursday.

BOLSHEVISM IN AUSTRALIA; DRASTIC ACTION DEMANDED

Labor Paper Applauds the Carrying of the Red Flag by the Russian Demonstrators

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Brisbane, April 4.—(Via Reuters)—A Labor newspaper, which applauded the carrying of a red flag by Russian demonstrators, has had its windows smashed by angry crowds. Russian shops were also damaged.

All Hotels Closed.

All Brisbane hotels have been closed until further notice. Returned soldiers and others have passed strongly worded resolutions demanding deportation of Bolshevist Russians and sympathisers, including two Labor members of Parliament. They also urge that the State Government cease its apathetic attitude towards traitors and that the Commonwealth Government abandon its tolerant attitude. Otherwise, they declare, the returned soldiers will take drastic action.

BRITAIN WILL PROTECT FRANCE

NO DISSENSIONS BETWEEN THE TWO COUNTRIES REGARDING GUARANTEES.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, April 4.—In a statement to the Petit Parisian, Premier Lloyd George denies there are dissensions between France and Great Britain, regarding guarantees for France against Germany. He declares that the understanding between the two Governments is complete and that Great Britain is ready to make fresh sacrifices if necessary to secure the peace and importance of France.

No Third Time

"I have seen the scourge of war twice loosed on France by Germany," the Premier told the Petit Parisien. "We do not intend that there shall be a third time, and should it be fifty years hence France will again find England by her side with all her wealth and power for, mark my words, the wild beast must be mastered.

"It is mastered at present, but if one day it raises its head ready to spring, it will find itself again faced by France and England united in brotherhood."

TO PRISON MAY 1

Washington, D. C., April 3.—Unless pardoned by President Wilson, Eugene V. Debs, socialist leader, probably will begin serving in the penitentiary at Moundsville, W. Va., his ten year sentence for violating the espionage act, about May 1. According to Clerk James D. Maher of the Supreme Court, which on March 10 affirmed Debs' conviction, the mandate in the case will be sent to the federal district court in Ohio, where Debs was tried, about April 15.

Acting Premier Sir Thos. White told Parliament he expected the whole Grand Trunk System would become the property of the people.

1,535,471 States Troops Released

Washington, D. C., April 3.—Figures made public today by the war department show that the signing of the armistice to March 21 1,535,471 of the 3,670,888 officers and men under arms when the war ended had been discharged from the service. Since the end of hostilities 573,474 officers and men had sailed from France to March 26 and of this number 502,830 had arrived in the United States. This left 1,409,789 soldiers overseas. The total under arms in this country on March 25 was 603,178.

Curtain Is Raised On Russ. Situation

THREATENING BOLSHEVIK MOVEMENTS GIVE CAUSE FOR ALARM.

London, April 3.—The curtain was raised for the British public on the position of the allied armies in North Russia for the first time this afternoon. The serious situation in the Murman region and the attempt by the Bolsheviki to drive the allied troops on the Archangel front into the sea are the cause of much anxiety. The London afternoon papers with startling phrases, of which "the circulated posters through the streets British army imperilled" was typical.

The public bought the papers eagerly, having no idea which army was referred to. Some of the papers declared that another Kut surrender or Khartum tragedy threatened.

Sir Ernest Shackleton, Director of Equipment and Transport of the Northern Rusian Expeditionary Forces, has just returned from Murman and Archangel. He declares in an interview that both front are in danger, and that the Bolshevist peril is a very real one, because the Entente forces are outnumbered by disciplined and well-armed and well-equipped troops in close touch with the allies' extended but by no means strong front.

"We must avoid the possibility of another Khartum," says Sir Ernest. He urges the need of sending reinforcements immediately. These, he asserts can reach Murman from England in less than a week.

OVER MILLION QUARTS LIQUOR SOLD UNDER PROHIBITION ACT

More Than Million and Quarter Dollars Collected in Fines—J. D. Flavelle's Statement

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, April 4.—Since Ontario went under prohibition in September 1916, and up to March first of this year, over one million quarts of liquor, have been sold under physician's prescriptions by the legal vendors, under the Ontario Temperance Act.

This was an estimate furnished to the public accounts committee of the Legislature this morning by J. D. Flavelle, chairman of the Ontario License Board. This is exclusive of the liquor issued by druggists, vendors and distillers for sacramental or industrial purposes.

Mr. Flavelle further stated that it did not included liquor obtained by physicians for their own use.

Over Million in Fines

Mr. Flavelle said he believed that despite the fact that the department had collected more than a million and a quarter dollars in fines for infraction of the act, there was no comparison in the conditions of sobriety of the Province now as against conditions before the act went into force.

The amount of liquor consumed, he asserted was undoubtedly immensely less under the act.

GERMANS WOULD RATHER BE BOLSHEVISTS THAN SLAVES

Is Declaration of Hun Ethical and Religious Societies—Allies Provoked Bolshevism—President Wilson Warned That United States is a Fertile Field For Communism.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berlin, April 4.—Leading ethical, philosophical and religious societies of Germany have addressed an appeal to President Wilson, giving warning against a disregarded of those principles to which Mr. Wilson has pledged himself, which, they claim, induced Germany to lay down her arms. The appeal declares that "if the Germans are driving to desperation, they would rather become Bolsheviks than slaves."

Allies Provoked Conditions.

It is maintanied that the Allies provoked an archistic conditions in Germany by refusing to relax the blockade.

President Wilson Warned.

President Wilson is warned that the United States, "with its great private fortunes and billion dollars trusts," is a "fertile field for communism, and it is suggested that the wealthy Americans, had better support the League of Nations."

CONSUMER MAY LOOK FOR LITTLE REDUCTION IN THE COST OF MILK

E. H. Stonehouse, in Addressing Local Meeting Last Night, Expresses This Opinion.

E. H. Stonehouse, president of the Provincial Milk and Cream Producers' Association and president of the National Dairy Council addressed a representative meeting of the milk producers of the district and the non-producers in the Council Chamber last night in the interests of the movement which has been inaugurated for the purpose of effecting a rapprochment between the three great factions interested in the industry, namely, the producers, dealers and consumers.

Mr. Rogers Presides.

Mr. R. B. Rogers, who has been interested in the movement for some time and was active in connection with the holding of meetings to discuss the local situation in the past presided last night, and stated that he was sure meetings representative of both producers and consumers would produce a better understanding.

Mr. Stonehouse's Address.

In outlining the object of the movement, last night, Mr. Stonehouse, in explaining the estrangement which seemed to have grown up of late years between the producer and consumer, drew attention to a reason which is not generally appreciated and which without a doubt, is largely responsible for the suspicious attitude maintained by the two parties vitally concerned in the dairy business when he stated that, in his opinion, the producer had been largely to blame for assuming the attitude that the consumer was well acquainted with conditions obtaining upon a dairy farm when, as a matter of fact, this element of the people knew very little of the work entailed in conducting the producing end of the business.

He felt that, had the dairy farmers taken the consumer into their confidence to greater degree and explained to some extent the conditions responsible for the increase in the cost of production, it would have resulted in a better mutual understanding.

Co-operative Attitude.

Mr. Stonehouse, in his address, drew attention at the outset to the fact that the purpose of the movement in the interests of which the meeting was being held was not of a selfish nature but to get a square deal for both producer and consumer.

Before this could be done he was sure that the consumer would have to be made acquainted with the conditions which had caused the increase in the price of milk and which were practically of the same nature as those which had affected the prices of all food stuffs and had as a result combined to bring about the present high cost of living.

Given Reasons.

In outlining these he referred to the scarcity of labor for farm purposes. The curtailment of working hours and increases in wages of the tradesman and laborer had effected this industry by attracting the men from the farms to more congenial occupations. Naturally in order to obtain help the dairy farmer had been forced to pay much higher wages which of necessity added to the cost of production.

Added Expense.

Cost of distributing the product had increased to a great extent as was true of all other lines of business. This added still more to the cost which had to be borne by the consumer.

Mr. Stonehouse did not express much confidence in the popular idea that the returning soldier would take up farm work to any great extent. He drew attention to the well established fact that the history of former wars did not show that the veterans had been disposed to take up farm work to any extent. The life of the army was not such as would influence a discharged soldier to leave the city with it attractions and features of interest for the quite life of the rural community.

Soldiers Indifferent.

He felt there was little hope of the existing scarcity of farm labor being relieved by an influx of veterans to the farms of the land. Dairying was an occupation of such a routinary nature and demanded such a steady application of the time of the man that it was little wonder that it did not appeal to one who had returned after years of service in Europe.

Reduction Unlikely.

The speaker held out little hope for a fall in prices of dairy produce this year. He was of the opinion that the price obtaining last season would remain during 1919 as there was no immediate signs of a re-adjustment of the conditions which had forced the cost of production upward.

ANNEX CANADA TO UNITED STATES

THIS WILL HAPPEN IN TEN YEARS, ACCORDING TO SENATOR.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, April 4.—Two New York morning newspapers, The Tribune and The American, published the following today from Atlantic City:

"Canada will be annexed to the United States within the next ten years," is the prediction made here today by Senator William C. Edwards, for more than thirty years a member of the Canadian Parliament, and one of the foremost business men in the Dominion.

"Economically and industrially, there is every reason why the two great American countries should be united under one Government. Old ideas on the subject have been swept aside by the close association of the Governments, business men, and men in service during the war. There is the strongest sentiment taking deep root throughout the Dominion in favor of amalgamation, and from observations that I have made everywhere in Canada there is every reason to believe that annexation will have been accomplished within the next ten years."

Senator Denies Report

Ottawa, April 4.—Senator Edwards has stated, according to a despatch published here, that the statements attributed to him, by the New York papers respecting Canada's annexation with the United States are entirely untrue.

U. S. CITY OFFICIAL HELD FOR THEFT

Chicago, April 3.—Judge Hugh R Stewart in the South Clark street police court this morning ordered that James Spencer, second vice-president of the city board of examining engineers, and George M. Hall, 5709 Giddings street, both of whom are charged with being involved in the theft of an automobile belonging to M. A. McDermott, 8027 Morgan street, he held to the grand jury on bonds of $3,000 each. Hall, who first gave his name as Evans when arrested Monday night, as well as Spencer, sought to evade the direct questions put to them by the court.

Spencer testified that he drew the money out of the Hibernian Banking association's bank two days before he met a man named Jacobs, from whom he purchased the car for $1,000. of which he put up $750 and Hall supplied $250, which was drawn on March 17 from the Jefferson Park bank. Spencer and Hall admitted making conflicting statements regarding the ownership and the price they had paid for the automobile.

Hammond, Ind., April 3.—Charles G. Hohman, one of Hammond's wealthiest men, was brought home from St. Petersburg, Fla., in a critical condition. While swimming at Pass-a-Grille he stepped on a stingray, which buried the spine of its tail in his leg, piercing an artery and causing blood poisoning. The accident happened last month and Hohman has been in a critical condition ever since. His mother, Caroline Hohman, was Hammond's first white settler and owned half the town at one time.

NO SOLUTION OF BRIDGE PROBLEM

COMMITTEE, LIKE THE APOSTLE, SEES AS THROUGH A GLASS, DARKLY.

Another meeting of the Board of Works is being held tonight, at which it is thought the engineers will be prepared to submit a comprehensive report upon the tenders received for the construction of the new Hunter street bridge.

No information has been furnished the press in regard to the matter since the tenders were opened, except assurances that they were being considered and that some progress was being made towards a decision of some kind.

Are Non-Committal.

Most of the members of the Board when asked for an opinion upon the matter show painful signs of a terror of committing themselves and refuse to make even a casual observation in connection with the terrible problem.

Several of them have admitted, however, that practically no progress has been made, which is largely due to a divided opinion in regard to the kind of a bridge which should be constructed. Other members of the committee feel that this is a late date at which to think of a matter which, in their way of looking at the proposition, should have been one of the first question settled.

There is no doubt that the lack of information which has been furnished the people up to the present time is in a great measure attributable to the fact that most of the members of the committee are themselves to a certain extent at sea as regards the relative advantages offered by the different tenderers, and will not be able to come to a decision until an examination of a report by the engineers will place the conditions of each tender before them in a concise and intelligible form.

Dangerous Alien Taken Into Custody

dangerous alien shrdlu shrd

Toronto, April 4.—After a decidedly interesting few weeks in Toronto among radical labor groups, Charles Charnie, who delivered a number of startling addresses of a revolutionary character, was taken into custody by immigration officials for a breach of the immigration laws. Charnie, it is claimed, was expelled from the College of the City of New York and Columbia University and refused admission to Princeton University for his radical views. It is also alleged that he was warned away from New York City by police officers for his utterances when the United States entered the war. Finally, he is believed to have evaded the United States draft for army service.

ERZBERGER AND FOCH MEET IN CONFERENCE IN PRIVATE CAR

Populace Acclaims Marshal Foch on His Arrival at Spa—Erzberger Shows Signs of Emotion.

Spa, April 4.—Marshal Foch arrived in Spa at 8.20 o'clock this morning and immediately informed Mathias Erzberger, head of the German Armistice Commission, that he would confer with him in his private car at 9.30 o'clock.

The conference took place at the appointed time in the presence of Major-Gen. Weygand assistant to the Marshal Foch, and a French interpreter and lasted forty minutes.

Marshal Foch laid before Herr Erzberger the decisions of the Entent. Erzberger after the conference hurriedly returned to his train. He appeared deeply moved. After a conference of one hour with Gen. Baron von Hammerstein, a member of the German Armistice Commission, and his technical advisers, Erzberger returned to his hotel, where the German members of the Armistice Commission are lodged.

COMMUNITY CENTRES IN THE COUNTY.

ALWAYS SOLICITOUS for the welfare of the farmers, the Legislature proposes to make possible the establishing of community centres in the rural districts so that those who live in the country can enjoy more of the advantages that go with city life. The bill, introduced by Minister of Agriculture Henry, provides that in the building of such places the Province shall aid the municipalities to the extent of thirty per cent. of the cost of construction. It is likely, however, that this amount will be increased before the bill is finally adopted.

At present, the only community centre in the rural districts is the school house or the church. The latter are, however, unfortunately becoming less and less in number. The schools were never large enough for the purpose, being at the best so many makeshifts, and the result has been detrimental to the social life of the rural sections of Ontario.

Is it not just possible that the consolidated school now in fair prospect will solve the problem of the community centre at present before the Legislature, and that the new schools will prove a boon to the adults as well as to the rising generation? All the extra outlay required to fit them for the purpose would be entailed by the erection of shelter for teams. Even in the cities of the Province it is felt that the best possible use is not being made of the school buildings? Why put up costly structures to be kept open a few hours a day five days a week and closed entirely about three months of the year, while the people suffer from the lack of facilities for holding social entertainments? The auto, the radial, the telephone and other modern methods are making life in the country more and more tolerable to the young who crave society. The consolidated school and the community centre will bring city and country still closer together.

THAT DIFFERENCE IN TIME.

OF COURSE, al recognize it as a matter of general regret that this difference of opinon with its resultant confusion has arisen over the problem of daylight saving. It is hard, however, to follow the process of reasoning which attempts to saddle upon Parliament the responsibility for the muddle. Since when has it been made clear in this country that other than the majority is to rule? By a vast numerical mandate, daylight saving as a national instituion was defeated in the House after a full and fair discussion of the question in all its aspects. The demands of the farming element simply prevailed, as every demand should, provided it is fortunate enough to secure the required number of votes.

The argument that is used in support of daylight saving, that it is necessary to adopt it in Canada because it has been given effect in the United States, may be an excuse for a contention, but it is certainly not a convincing reason. It is not so long ago that there was a difference of one hour in some places, twenty-eight minutes in others, and thirty-two minutes in still others, in this country and across the border. Passengers for the Michigan Central Railway running through Canada were under the necessity of taking into consideration the fact that their time was exactly one hour ahead of the American road's timetable. And yet the comity of the two nations was not seriously marred nor was commercial intercourse beween the countries destroyed.

Even with daylight saving a Federal fixture in the United States, the transcontinental lines in that country are under three separate systems of time-keeping making one trip from ocean to ocean, and still the traffic continues.

In Canada, infinitely worse conditions than a difference in time has often confronted the people, and the heavens have not yet fallen. Of course, there is bound to be dissatisfaction and inconvenience over the difference in time, but there is no use making mountains out of molehills, when there are so many other matters really serious to worry over. There will always be dissatisfaction and discontent. The man, for example, who works up to six o'clock will always envy the one who quits at five. The worker in field or factory can never be made to believe that the world is running just right so long as a portion of the population lie in bed a couple of hours in the morning after he himself has started his daily labors.

HARTLEY DEWART'S CHARGES.

HARTLEY DEWART, as a member of the Legislature, has brought against a servant of the people and employe of the Government, one of the most serious charges, short perhaps of murder or arson, that could possibly be laid at the door of any man. In brief, Mr. Dewart's allegation is that the chief of the Dominion License inspectors, charged with the enforcement of the Ontario Temperance Act, hired private detectives to run down violators, and that these men shared with the officials the generous fees that they were allowed for their services. Anyone at all familiar with criminal law knows what would be the probable fate of an employe in civil life who was convicted of anything of the kind.

But the Provincial License Inspector has not yet been convicted, and the public, knowing as they do how often such charges blow up on investigation, owe it to the accused to suspend judgment until the evidence on both sides has been produced. The Government has afforded every opportunity for a full and fair probe of the charges, and, following the usual custom in such cases, the accused official has been supended pending the hearing.

The outcom eof the case possesses a double interest for the public. If the accused is guilty, he deserves punishment. If he succeeds in refuting the grave charges made against him by Mr. Dewart, then the latter should be requested to resign his seat in the House, and failing that, should be expelled and driven for all time out of public life. That would be his fate in nine cases out of ten if he had pursued the same course in private life. He would at least be answerable to the courts on a charge of slander. But Mr. Dewart's public position renders him immune from this penalty. Even if his charges fall flat, the victim of his calumny has no redress.

Every member of Parliament or Legislature who uncovers a grafter or reveals a plot against the welfare of the community deserves to be regarded as a public benefactor, just as much so as the officer who runs down [illegible] he makes his charges he should be sure of his ground, and should not be permitted to elevate himself by trampling upon the reputation of another. The freedom of Parliament has in the past been grossly abused, as the political history of Canada shows on its almost every page. What in the heat of an election campaign or a debate in legslative hall has been made to appear as a monstrous iniquity, has in the clear light and calm judgment of history been set forth as a perfectly honorable busines stransaction.

But Mr. Dewart is ambitions. Even if he fails to make out a case, he is not likely to resign, even though men in the past have lost their public standing for less. At all events, he has not pledged himself to give up his position as a legislator if in this matter he falls down.

But such pledges have been made by Mr. Dewart's confreres before, only to be ignored when the time came to make good the promise. Only six years ago the present leader of the Ontario Opposition, at that time a private in the ranks, as Mr. Dewart is today, laid charges just as serious against a member of the Ontario Cabinet, the right-hand man of the late Sir James Whitney. He asserted that if given the opportunity he would prove his charges or resign his seat. The opportunity was not denied him, he failed to make out a case, but, instead of resigning, was rewarded by promotion in the party when a vacancy occurred.

That is not the entire story. The Minister referred to has since died, and it fell to the lot of Mr. Proudfoot to follow Premier Hearst in eulogising the dead statesman. In his remarks he praised the probity of the private and official life of the deceased, whose integrity he assailed with so much partisan virulence only a few years ago. Another case of pelting a living man with rocks, and then with maudlin grief heaping flowers on his grave.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

UNLESS SOLDIERS remain on guard, the League of Nations will legislate in vain.

WOMEN ARE TO BE recognised by the League of Nations, and that without seeking the approval of some members of the Local Board of Education.

• • • • •

WHILE SOME DREAM of the millennium, all that others, who are more blase, can hope for is harmony between the City Council and the Board of Trade.

• • • • •

NOT THE LEAST of the post-war evils is the opportunity the tragedy of four years of strife has given for the playing of party politics of the lesser variety.

• • • • •

THE MUNICIPALITIES have been shieking for a greater measure of home rule, and when they get it in the matter of daylight saving they are far from satisfied.

• • • • •

IS THE CLAIM that Hartley Dewart is worth all the other Toronto representatives, Federal or Legislative, put together, to be taken as a boost for the one or a knock at the other?

• • • • •

OPPOSITION to the Ontario Temperance Act may come from both sides of the legislative chamber, but a glance at the array is sufficient to confirm the suspicion that birds of a feather flock together.

• • • • •

OH, HARTLEY, Hartley, if you had but lashed the slackers and shirkers in 1917 with half the seal you lambast the Legislature that did so much for Ontario soldiers, you would not now be piling up mounds of trouble for yourself.

FILL THE FLARING BOWL.

(Chicago Tribune.)

It is admitted that some substitute for alcohol must be found, in order that life may not be utterly undecorated; and various recipes are going around. We like best a tipple which Philip Hale ascribes to John P. Squibob: "Three parts of root beer and three of water gruel, thickened with a little soft squash and strained through a canebottomed chair."

THE PROBLEM OF RUSSIA.

(New York Tribune.)

Peace will be a misnomer if it is made before the Russian problem is solved. The first duty of the Conference is to end this war. The prevention of other wars is a task of the future. The Paris Conference has been loath to acknowledge this truth. A clear Russian policy is one of the pre-essentials of peace. The foundation must first be laid before superstructures can be safely erected.

A USEFUL MEMORIAL.

(Simcoe Reformer.)

Many suggestions have been made in the way of war memorials of the "useful" sort. We have heard of hospitals, libraries, parks, plagrounds, nurses' homes, community houses, auditoriums, town halls, gymnasiums, railway terminals, driveways, groves, etc. But the latest, which hails from Bowmanville, has it over them all. A memorial co-operative factory is proposed. "A company organized on a sound business basis that would do great things for Bowmanville." Can you beat that?

PATCHWORK RECONSTRUCTION.

(Vancouver Sun.)

From the mouths of many well-meaning persons comes forth an insistent demand for some sort of readjustment of social and industrial affairs that will allow of the workers obtaining a greater participation in the profits of industry. All sorts of patchwork schemes are suggested, each a trifle more ridiculous if such a thing is possible. But without exception those who suggest the proposed reforms or readjustments appear to be totally ignorant of the problem in hand.

HOME TO ROOST

All evil things come home to roost, and cause much anguish and distress so I give righteousness a boost, through selfish motives, more or less. A man must have a fair renown if he'd enjoy his journey here; must have high credit in his town, and in the country far and near. A chap may think he'll put across, unmarked some little crooked game; but all his profits are a loss for he has soiled his snowy fame. Some day when he would make the race for coroner or county clerk, his misdeed swats him in the face, and spoils long years of goodly work. I'm old and full of virtue now, but never do I cease to hear of how I kidnapped Johnson cow, upon a distant bygone year. I stand up in the Sabbath school and hand out saws and maxims fine, and while I thus expound and drool, I hear kids whisper "Johnson's kine!" I might be honored, now I'm gray, and have a halo o'er my brow, but for that dark and fateful day when I eloped with Johnson's cow. We say a man can live it down, if he should cheat or lie or steal, but better is the white renown that has no blemish to conceal. The evil birds are all unloosed in our old age, a noisome host, and they come flying home to roost, just when the blamed things hurt the most.

STORIES OF BRITISH SUB AND K-BOAT ADVENTURES

The Navy was flooded by initials during the war, and the mania spread to the ships. There were P-boats and Q-boats. Submarines in the early days were called E-boats, but as our inventors progressed other letters of the alphabet came into use, and in the last few days one of the closely guarded secrets of the trade, the K-boats, have been publicly described.

I happen to number among my personal friends in the service several young submarine officers, and from them I have heard many good stories of the adventures of these large steam-driven, heavily-armed submergible cruisers, more remarkable examples of naval architecture than ever the much-boomed Hun shipbuilders thought of.

The K-boats are high-sea craft, and operated with the Grand Fleet, so their base, naturally, was Scapa Flow in the Orkneys. In the long evenings, particularly in the summer, there was much opportunity for skylarking. The young bloods of the battleship ward room invented a great sport. They formed "K-boat raiding parties." In the falling dusk they crept up in a dinghy to the anchored submarine, where everybody was probably peacefully below, with hatches open. The raiders stormed down the coming-tower and the available hatches, and proceeded to play "rough house" with their unwilling hosts.

The K-boat men held a council of war. The thing was getting beyond a joke. They arranged a game of their own which they called "raiding stations." Now for the sequel.

A Bath for the "Big Noise."

On the first evening after they had rehearsed their parts the look-out on the coming-tower reported a rowing boat approaching. It was quite early in the evening, but apparently the raiders meant to make a night of it.

So the crews of the K-boats went to their stations. All hatches were closed. They waited. The senior officer of the flotilla heard someone scramble from the rowing boat on the iron plates of the submarine's deck. He gave the order "Drive."

Down went the submarine about six feet stopped there a minute or two, and came up. The hatches were opened, and the delighted K-boat men tumbled up, roaring with laughter as they fished their ducked visitors out of "the ditch."

And then they discovered that it was a four-stripe captain, a very senior and important officer, who had come to pay them an official visit.

More grim was the adventure of another of that tribe which also tried a stunt that was not provided for in the regulations.

The skipper, while on patrol at a certain area, intercepted a signal that an enemy submarine was operating not far away, but in waters that were outside the K-boat's beat. The chance was too good to be raised, and the captain pushed off in the direction of the enemy, only to be mistaken by our surface craft for the enemy when he got there.

He promptly dived to avoid the gunfire that concentrated on him and found himself in a worse plight still, for our surface ships put down a heavy barrage of depth-charges the under-water bombs that earned 500 pounds of explosive, and were destructive if they exploded 75 feet away from the target.

Taking Notes About Death.

Fortunately for the K-boat, the skipper had followed a zigzag course as he dived, and the depth-charges exploded some distance away. Our surface craft, however, stuck to their prey. As the depth-charges seemed to produce no result, they put down sweeps, long hawsers that trailed along the bed of the ocean until they caught, the destruction being the submarine. And they found him.

Then, down the sweep they let small charges slide, but, by the mercy of Providence, they all went off some time before they actually reached the hull of the K-boat.

It was an awful position for the friendly crew of the submarine; but the captain, with extraordinary presence of mind, made a careful log of all the effects of the explosions, in order that the experience might be of use to our anti-submarine experts if ever he came out of the adventure alive.

He did. The pursuers exhausted their stock of charges, and by skillful navigation the K-boat was at last disentangled from the sweeps, but she had to make her way home by guess work, for every one of the delicate instruments on board had been shattered to fragments by the force of the explosion.

Another grim story is that of K 13 the submarine that sank in the Firth of Clyde, while on her trials with a large complement of civilian experts on board, as well as her regular crew. One of the ventilating cowls failed to close before she dived, with the result that the engine room was flooded, and all the people there were drowned.

Those in the forward part of the ship were saved, because the water-tight bulkhead, in the centre of the ship, held, and only a thin trickle of water came through, which was kept under by an electric pump. It was after K 11 had been down twenty-four hours that Commander Goodhart made his attempt to escape, in order to guide rescuers to the spot and was killed.—"Tarpantin," in Montreal Star.

In the first week of August, 1914, an eminent member of the German General Staff went to dinner with a well-known American who was then in Berlin, and told him with a very long face that the position was extremely serious for Germany, and for two reasons. First, that England had unexpectedly come in; and, second, that the Kaiser and Bethmann-Hollweg had spoilt the General Staff plan by temporizing at the last moment and delaying mobilization. The first catastrophe would have been less serious without the second, for the British Army was of no great consequence at that moment, and the swift stroke which German strategy had planned would probably have finished the war before it could affect the issue But if the rush to Paris did not succeed and the French held on, the British bull-dog tenacity was a formidable thing which it was folly to underrate. The argument led up to a formidable denunciation of the Kaiser, whose weak, backward glances at peace might possibly prove to be the ruin of Germany.

At the same time the story was current that the Kaiser, after signing the mobilization order on the fatal Friday, flung the pen across the table and said: "Gentlemen, you will rue it." Whether this is true or not it is pretty certain from other evidence that the Kaiser had a moment of vacillation, if not of repentance, when it became clear that he had to reckon with Great Britain, and his frequent protestations that he "did not will the war" have been interpreted as meaning that, if he had been a free agent and not under the compulsion of the military clique which had planned the campaign, he would have stopped the war at the last moment. If the question ever comes to trial there may possibly be a good deal of evidence to confirm this view and though it would not touch his final responsibility as War Lord—and the less so since he has loudly claimed absolute power in the sphere of war—it would probably affect judgment on the narrow issue of his moral responsibility at this particular stage

For that reason Mr. David Jayne Hill does well to broaden the issue in his extremely able and closely reasoned book, "Impressions of the Kaiser." This takes the Emperor William from the beginning to the end of his reign, and shows how, from first to last, he fomented the aggressive, swaggering, militarist spirit which finally exploded in 1914. He may have thought the explosion untimely or have planned it differently, or have shrunk back at the last moment from the inevitable catastrophe, but he was the generator-in-chief of the gases which made it inevitable. Mr. Hill is one of the American Ambassadors to Germany who have had an opportunity of seeing the Kaiser intimately, and he bears his testimony with reticence and good taste and a scrupulous desire to be fair which makes it the more damning The man presented to us is by no means all-devil. He is scarcely even Jekyll and Hyde, for Hyde was consistently villainous, and nothing. He was alternately very clever and astonishingly stupid, versatile and attractive, like a gifted child, vindictive and overbearing, like an ill-bred man, a fanatic for absolutism and divine right with the manners and methods of a smart modern bagman So far as he had any governing idea it was probably to produce a unique combination of new and old, of mediaeval sovereignty and twentieth-century commercialism, and thus to justify the Hohenzollerns and their claims to the burghers and to the world. The result was that commercial greed gave a new and uglier face to militarism, and all parties, Emperor, Generals, manufacturers, merchants, and common citizens, started together on the road to ruin with professors and theologians applauding, in the conviction that war was good business as well as glorious patriotism.

Mr. Hill's analysis of the process and of the Emperor's indefatigable energy in beating the big drum and rallying the crowd to his martial standard is both subtle and just. We need not go over the ground for it is all too familiar, and the royal oratory of those times is now but a tragic monument to human vanity. Up to a point the Kaiser seemed to his people to be enormously successful. He had kept the peace—thanks to the wholesome fear that he inspired of the German Michael—and given them an amazing prosperity. Had he died in 1913 and the catastrophe taken place under his son, he would undoubtedly have been William the Great of affectionate and lamented memory. But the crops were of his sowing and the harvest inevitable. As Mr. Hill's shows, his ideas of statecraft were intrinsically shallow and stupid according to their own premisses.

Bismarck had the wit to see that no nation could take on the world in arms. His three wars were masterpieces in the cunning that knows how to divide enemies and smash them in detail. His after-war diplomacy was an endless scheming to keep possible memories apart, to "reinsure" with Russia against the risks of the Austrian Alliance, to keep Italy in tow, to keep France apart from Russia, to live on tolerable terms with Britain. The Kaiser not only threw France into the arms of Russia, but at the same time challenged Britain at sea and lost the confidence of Italy. To each in turn they administered some diplomatic snub or cuff, and then, when they drew together in self-protection, complained that he was being "encircled." No one dealt with him long without having to complain of his fickleness, and those who flirted with him did so at their peril, as the unhappy "Nicky" discovered on the morrow of their effusive correspondence. This was perhaps not so much a personal duplicity as the working in a shallow mind of the incorrigible doctrine that everything is lawful for the glory of the State. In Bulow alone among his Ministers he found his match, and we almost sympathize with him when that astute fox threw him over to save his own skin in the commotion that followed the publication of the Telegraph interview. The last chapter of all is still, to a certain extent, a matter of conjecture, and it will be interesting to know for certain whether, as one school maintains, he was a rhetorician who was forced into action by his war-party, or whether, as another alleges, he definitely made up his mind about the year 1913 to break the peace. In either case his responsibility for the course of events which led up to the catastrophe is beyond dispute, and at almost any time since he came to the throne he had it in his power to order events in such a way as to make peace secure for Germany and the world.—From "Impressions of the Kaiser," reviewed in the Westminster Gazette.

LAST CALL ON SHAREHOLDERS

Vancouver, April 3.—As part of the preparation to announce a division in the Dominion Trust liquidation, J. C. Gwynn, liquidator, has obtained leave from Mr. Justice Murphy to make a final call on the shareholders of the Dominion Trust who owe unpaid balances. About 173 individuals are affected. The calls are for the payment of the unpaid premium of $35 a share, aggregating about $60,000.

You cannot begin to measure its goodness alongside of others, the quality being INCOMPARABLE.

Labor and Capital To Act Unitedly

Ottawa, April 3.—Appointment of a Commission, composed of five or seven men commanding the complete confidence of the nation, including Labor and Capital, to proceed to all centres of industry in the Dominion, survey the situation in all its aspects, ascertain all the facts and report to the Government before May 15 upon the possibility of the joint control and operation of certain industries by Capital and Labor—such was the momentous announcement made to the Senate yesterday afternoon by Hon. Gideon Robertson Minister of Labor. Mr. Robertson whose announcement of such a far-reaching step was made in the course of a statement replying to an interpellation by Senator Michener as to what steps the Government was taking to secure greater co-operation between Capital and Labor, did not disclose the personnel of the Commission he has in view, but he emphasized that it would be composed of men who have the confidence of the whole Canadian people. It is understood that the names of those composing it will be announced almost immediately.

National Liberal Convention to be Held Next August

PURPOSE TO DRAFT AND ADOPT LIBERAL PLATFORM FOR CANADA.

Ottawa, April 4.—The Parliamentary Liberal party held another caucus yesterday and gave further consideration to matters connected with the holding of the national convention at Ottawa in August next. Decisions arrived at were as follows:

Purpose of convention—First, to draft, discuss and adopt the platform of the Liberal party of Canada; secondly, to deal with the question of party organization; thirdly, to select a leader in succession of Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

Representation at convention—Following as closely as possible the plan adopted for the national Liberal convention of 1893, the representation at the forthcoming convention will be as follows:

1. All the members of the Senate and of the House of Commons, who desire to co-operate with the Liberal party, and all the Liberal candidates who were defeated at the last Dominion election.

2. The Liberal Premiers and the leaders of the Liberal Opposition in the several Provinces.

3 The presidents of the nine Provincial Liberal associations.

4. Three delegates from each Dominion constituency, who will be elected at a local convention, to be called for the purpose. In the case of constituencies having two Parliamentary representatives six delegates will be elected. Women will be eligible for election as delegates in all constituencies.

5. The Liberal members of each Provincial Assembly and the Liberal candidates defeated at the last Provincial election in each Province, acting jointly, shall have the right to select from among themselves a number of delegates equal to one-fourth of the total number of representatives in each Provincial Assembly.

In addition to the foregoing, it was further decided, that, owing to changed conditions arising out of the war and to the desirability for co-operating among all ranks of Liberal democracy in dealing with grave national problems nvitations will be extended to the Canadian Council of Agriculture, the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress, the Great War Veterans Association and the Canadian Railroad Brotherhood sto send representatives to the convention, for the purpose of presenting such views as these national bodies may desire to present, prior to the drafting and adoption of a national Liberal platform.

When all the details connected with the holding of the convention have been settled, they will be embodied in a call to be issued to the Liberals of the Dominion by the temporary leader of the party, Mr. D. D. McKenzie.

Bolshevist troops in Pinega area have withdrawn seven miles under pressure of the Allies.

BEAUTIFUL HAIR THICK, WAVY, FREE FROM DANDRUFF

DRAW MOIST CLOTH THROUGH HAIR AND DOUBLE ITS BEAUTY AT ONCE.

SAVE YOUR HAIR! DANDRUFF DISAPPEARS AND HAIR STOPS COMING OUT.

Immediate? — Yes! Certain? — that's the joy of it. Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's after an application of Danderine. Also try this—moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or excessive oil, and in just a few moments you have doubled the beauty of your hair. A delightful surprise awaits those whose hair has been neglected or is scraggy, faded, dry, brittle or thin. Besides beautifying the hair, Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating, stimulating and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow long, strong and beautiful.

You can surely have pretty, charming, lustrous hair and lots of it, if you will spend a few cents for a bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and try it as directed.

THAT CHANGE IN WOMAN'S LIFE

Mrs. Godden Tells How it May be Passed in Safety and Comfort.

Fremont, O.—"I was passing through the critical period of life, being forty-six years of age and had all the symptoms incident to that change—heat flashes, nervousness, and was in a general run down condition, so it was hard for me to do my work. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended to me as the best remedy for my troubles, which it surely proved to be. I feel better and stronger in every way since taking it, and the annoying symptoms have disappeared." — Mrs. M. Godden, 925 Napoleon St., Fremont, Ohio.

Such annoying symptoms as heat flashes, nervousness, backache, headache, irritability and "the blues," may be speedily overcome and the system restored to normal conditions by this famous root and herb remedy Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If any complications present themselves write the Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for suggestions how to overcome them. The result of forty years experience is at your service and your letter held in strict confidence.

GYPSY MARRIAGE IS NOT BINDING

SAD ENDING OF ROMANCE OF A GYPSY PRINCESS.

Montreal, April 4.—A romance of gypsy bands, with scenes set in the Far West the East, the Montreal appears on the records of the local police force.

Two gypsy bands lived near Saskatoon. One was ruled by a "king," called Frank Marcovitch, the other by one styled Stevenson Demetri. The former had a daughter. King Demetri has a son. On the son's behalf he made an offer to his fellow-king for the hand of the princess, then 15 years old. The offer was accepted, it being agreed $2,000 was to be paid to "King" Marcovitch for the loss of his daughter

A gypsy celebration of marriage was held, and the princess moved to the other camp. Matters did not proceed as smoothly as she desired and the bride appealed to the North-West Mounted Police, who held court and decided that there had never been a marriage.

The next proceeding was that Assistant Inspector of Detectives Harry Cowan received a telegram from the Saskatoon police asking him to hold Macovitch on the charge to be laid by Demetri of getting $2,000 from him that did not belong to him.

PROSPECTS FOR EXPORT ROSY

ANNOUNCEMENT OF BRITISH PREFERENCE WILL BOOST TRADE.

Ottawa, April 4.—The Canadian Trade Commission's work has grown surprisingly in the last two weeks. Daily inquiries for information on market openings abroad are a feature of the correspondence, showing a healthy readiness among firms to take up a new field of activity made apparent by the Canadian example in munition-making and other war work. The Commission acts as a clearing house for such information, working hand in hand with the Canadian Mission in London and receiving cable and mail news from several other sources.

A second class of inquiry relates to the changes, complex in their rapidity, in British and foreign restrictions by the war to peace transition regulations. To meet these difficulties a hand-book setting forth existing conditions in over fifty British and foreign countries has been compiled. It is intended primarily for exporters and merchants who request it. Each of the self-governing British dominions and colonies had to be dealt with as a separate country. Many neutral countries come under regulations due to the measures taken by the Allied Governments.

Prospects for export trade are now rosy. The announcement of a British preference to Empire-made goods promises a fillip to trade and commerce, and agreements with foreign countries are in a satisfactory stage. That between the Canadian and Rumanian Governments for the allocation of the $25,000,000 credit is already in Ottawa; Grecian and Belgian agreements, each for $25,000,000, have been signed and are expected on this side shortly while a French credit of the same amount is pending and an Italian credit is under consideration.

Says Prohibition Plot to Destroy

INTENDED AS A DEATH BLOW AGAINST ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH.

Montreal, April 3. — Prohibition is intended as a death blow to the Roman Catholic Church in North America by the Methodists, Hon Napoleon Sequin, Minister without portfolio in the Provincial Government told an audience at the Garneau-Taschereau Club. He said:

"The prohibition cry is simply camouflage, and in its passage in the United States, including the exclusion of wines, the Methodists believe that the coup de grace will be given to the exercise of our religion. We learn from good sources that during the jubilee celebration of Cardinal Gibbons at Baltimore last autumn an important bishop in the United States submitted to his conferees the original of a letter which was intercepted, and which was written by a high dignitary of the Methodist Church, and which letter declared, among other things, that if prohibition could be realized in all America the coup de grace would be given to the Catholic religion.

"It is upon this revelation that the clergy of the United States changed their stand. We can see the result in the election at Baltimore yesterday, where only one prohibitionist candidate was elected.

Mr. Seguin talked of conditions in Toronto and the Canadian West. There was hidden drunkenness and men bought thousands of dollars worth of liquor and then preached prohibition to the workmen, he said.

Inland Revenue Act Amended

Ottawa, April 3.—A number of important amendments to the Inland Revenue Act have been given notice of by Hon. J. D. Reid, acting Minister of Customs. It is proposed to enact new provisions governing the manufacture in Canada of alcohol without the admixture of any denaturants and denatured alcohol, intended for use in the arts and industries or for fuel, light and power purposes, with restrictions as to the place of manufacture, sale, delivery and transport.

Another proposed amendment provides that no less quantity than five thousand cigars shall be entered for warehouse by one entry, and except for export, no less quantity than two thousand cigars shall be ex-warehoused by one entry.

It is proposed to place an excise duty upon acetic acid produced in Canada by the destructive distilliation of wood or by any other process. The duty will be 4 per cent. on every gallon of six per centum acid, and it shall apply in similar proportion for any great or less strength.

Under prescribed conditions there is to be a remission of duty on malt used in the manufacture of vinegar and the Department will be empowered to authorize the preparation of tobacco and cigars in packages of such size as may be advisable.

British People And Americans Are Still Saving

The people of the leading Allied countries who, under the pressure of the war began to save, fortunately have shown no marked tendency to discontinue since the actual fighting ceased. In the United States the per capital sales of War Savings and Thrift Stamps during December were about 83 cents.

In the United Kingdom during the week ending February 1, 2,308,810 War Savings Certificates were sold More than 500,000 buyers took single or £1, Certificates. In a recent statement the National War Savings committee of the United Kingdom says:

MEAT INJURIOUS TO THE KIDNEYS

Take a Tablespoonful of Salts If Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid says a well-known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork; they get sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys ache and feel like lead and you have stinging pains in the back or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night; when you have severe headaches, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, acid stomach or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending urinary and bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.

Copenhagen, Denmark, April 3. — The Finnish Government has resigned in consequence of its defeat at the recent election, it is announced in a dispatch received today from Helsingfors.

(In mid-December Gen. Mannerheim, who was leader of the white guard forces in Finland last year and who left the country temporarily while the reds were in the ascendancy, returned to Finland from England, was chosen premier by the landtag and later was elected regent. Reports of the Finnish election mentioned in the foregoing dispatch have not reached this country.)

Gained Immortal Renown at Vimy

Paris, April 2. — The French press, in commenting on the announcement that the French Government intended to offer as a gift to Canada the Vimy Ridge, speaks with great enthusiasm of Canada's war effort. La Liberte writes as follows:

"Vimy is indeed the spot where the gallant troops of the Dominion have acquired an immortal renown."

The Canadian Ministers attended a dinner at the Inter-Allied Press Club last evening, when the delegates of the British Dominions were the guests of the press. The Prime Ministers of Canada, Australia and New Zealand, responded to the toasts. Sir Robert Borden, who was first called upon to speak, emphasized the importance of Canada's part in the final victory, and alluded to the ties which unite France to Canada. He spoke amidst great applause.

SPLENDID WORK BY LAKEFIELD SOLDIERS' COMFORT CLUB

Secretary and Treasurer Submit Comprehensive Reports—$2,870.93 Expended.

At a meeting of the Lakefield Soldiers Comfort Club, the secretary, Isabella I. Johnson presented the following report of work accomplished.

Unfortunatel[illegible] complete detailed account [illegible] be given as the records for almost two years were destroyed in the fire that consumed the town hall.

When the lamentable news that Britain was at war reached Canada and that her sons in the homeland and in the colonies had armed themselves in the cause of freedom and righteousness and, in a measure unpreparedly, faced the foe, our women armed themselves to provide comforts for the brave lads.

No sacrifice was considered too great, no thought of self intruded; as one voice came the words "Our soldiers must not suffer from lack of food or need of warm suitable clothing."

It is to the credit of the women of Lakefield and of the surrounding vicinity that the needles were plied that opportunities were seized, that gifts were presented, that donations were given, and all in the most generous spirit.

The sons of such noble women could not be other than heroic. We cheerfully give all due credit to the heroic conduct of our soldier lads, and we also bear in mind that the mothers of those lads were Spartan like in their silent suffering. We honor the mothers as we honor the lads who saved our homes for us, and we cheerfully pay this tribute to their worth and unselfishness.

On September 30th, 1914 an organization known as "The Soldiers' Comfort Club" was organized with a membership of thirty, as the need became greater and the interest increased. the membership became eighty-six.

Money to carry on the work was needed and various methods were resorted to. Donations were sent to the club from interested friends. The Peterboro Cheese Board sent three cheques of fifty dollars each. The Curling Club gave several entertainments on behalf of the club. The members gave afternoon teas from which a goodly sum was realized.

In April, 1916, a knitting machine which was greatly appreciated was presented by Casement.

As stated our report cannot be given in full.

The last meeting of the club was held at the home of the Misses Griffin on March 13th. The President was in the chair. After the introductory part of the meeting it was moved and unanimously carried that a vote of thanks be tendered Messrs Casement, Redpath, Braden, Sherin and Morrison for their hearty co-operation, no appeal was ever made to them in vain.]

Our thanks are due also to the members of the Curling Club, the Boy Scouts and the returned soldiers for their help and cheer.

The president, Mrs. Marling, in a few well chosen words thanked the officers and members for their hearty cooperation and kind sympathy extended during her term of office.

A vote of thanks was moved by Mesdames Sherin and Bygott to all the officers for giving so much of their time and energy to the work.

The treasurer reported a balance of thirty-five dollars. It was decided to send this to Mrs. Van Koughnet leaving it to her choice of placing it where she deemed it most needed.

Afternoon tea was served by the hostesses and the organization disbanded.

The secretary communicated with Mrs. Van Koughnet gratefully acknowledging her help, kindness and personal interest in all the details of the work. In reply she received the following letter which we publish in full.

Toronto, March 15, 1919

Dear Mrs. Johnson:

I am writing to thank you for the three cartons containing 189 pairs of socks, which arrived safely this morning. Also for the generous gift of $35.00, which, unless we hear to the contrary, we will place towards a lounge chair for a semi-paralyzed soldier. The chair is made of wicker and is something between a sofa and a chair. As the price of this chair is $35.00 we feel that it will be a nice tribute to the men from the Lakefield Comforts Society that has done so much for these men, as well as a tribute to your work.

Your kind resolution of thanks has touched me very much to receive. Will you say to all the members of your society how much I appreciate this vote of thanks as well as the sympathetic co-operation and tremendous assistance given from Lakefield, since the outbreak of the war.

Their work has been a definite assistance to the shipments of soldiers' comforts work which I have had the privilege of convening. With kindest messages and warm good wishes believe me. Yours sincerely,

Gertrude Van Koughnet

GERALDINE FARRAR WEARS SPOILED TO ORDER GOWN

It is not usual for Geraldine Farrar to appear in rags either in opera or in her series of Goldwyn Pictures. When she found that a few scenes in "Shadows" required her to don old clothes she was at a loss to know where to find them. It is well known that the diva doesn't keep any of her costumes longer than is required for a single production, and as for owning any sort of garment which shows signs of wear—why she would more readily furnish a fur coat which had served its purpose and which she would be willing to have slashed and torn. But it was a simple dress that was needed and it she must have.

In such cases it is customary to draw upon the large wardrobe room at the Goldwyn studios, but Miss Farrar invariably has all her dresses made to order and she did not care to deviate from her rule in this case. There was but one thing to do—have the thing created for her with all the care and artistry employed on her magnificent new gowns.

Henri Bendel of New York, who is solely responsible for Miss Farrar's sartorial triumphs, was called into consultation and told to make the dress. It must be absolutely plain, yet of good material and must fit Geraldine Farrar perfectly. Accordingly the proper material was selected—a figured crepe—and work begun. The gown was put together in short order by Bendel's skilled workers, laughingly. Of all people they know the usual lavishness of the star's frocks. The greater part of the work, however, was to mutilate it. Carefully, yet with seeming absence of care the dress was stained, torn then mended and rent some more. In the end it was nothing more than a rag—and a perfect counterfeit of a garment worn a thousand times yet it had never been used once.

This is the only frock that is not a marvel of gorgeousness that Geraldine Farrar wears in "Shadows" when it comes to the Grand Opera House, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Matinee daily.

FLO-FLO

John Cort is bringing "Flo-Flo," his sensational musical comedy hit to the Grand Opera House "Flo-Flo" tomorrow which is known on Broadway as John Cort's "war bride" show drew capacity houses to the Cort Theatre from the opening to the close of last season.

With its "perfect 36" chorus, its eccentric dancers, lilting lyrics, beautiful girls and magnificent fashion parade "Flo-Flo" held the interest of New York theatregoers more firmly than any other musical comedy of the year.

The plot of Flo-Flo which is the work of Fred De Gresac concerns the love affair of Angelina Stokes, daughter of a match-making mother who wishes to marry her to a bogus count. Angelina, however cherishes the memory of Billy her Oshkosh (Wis.) sweetheart.

Mrs. Stokes has ordered her daughter's trosseau from Mosher and Simpson, owners of the Bride Shop, where Billy is employed. There Angelina accidentally meets her childhood playmate. She rushes into his arms, but is discovered by her mother who orders Mosher and Simpson to discharge the young man.

Billy, having been rejected by Angelina, falls for the wiles of Flo-Flo, the beautiful model of the Bride Shop. Angelina discovers this and is broken-hearted. But her wedding to the false Count is not to be. The supposed nobleman is unmasked and Billy and Angelina reunited through the strategy of the Sherlock Holmes and Watson of the piece, otherwise known as Pinky and Aloysius. Some of the Flo-Flo numbers that have hit the popular fancy are "Would You Love Me," "Don't Trust Them," "Good Bye Happy Days," "On the River Nile," and the "Ziegfeld Girl," a symphony adds to the delights of Silvio Hein's score.

ORGANIZED BALL FELL FOR BLUFF

PLAN TO SCARE ORGANIZED BASEBALL INTO SUING FOR PEACE.

Washington, April 4.—Organized baseball was "buffed" into making peace with the Federal League, according to testimony given yesterday by James A. Gilmore, former president of the latter organization, in the Baltimore Federal club's $300,000 damage suit against the National and American Leagues and of officers of the Federal League.

Mr. Gilmore, who is one of the individual defendants in the suit, was the first witness called for the defence. He told the jury that he originated the plan for what he termed "a gigantic bluff" to force peace in baseball by inducing the American and National Leagues to compromise with the Federal League when it no longer was able to continue. His plan, he said, was to scare organized baseball into suing for peace by threatening to "invade" New York.

The major league officials, Mr. Gilmore testified, "fell" for the bluff and made overtures which resulted finally in peace and dissolution of the Federal League. The first overtures, he said, were rejected, but later he said he advised his Federal League associates to accept. His first demand for $200,000 for Baltimore in the peace negotiations, Mr. Gilmore stated, was laughed at by the major league officials. An offer of $50,000 subsequently was made but rejected by the Baltimore interests and referred to a commission of seven members, including one from Baltimore. President Rasin of the Baltimore Club was present during the peace negotiations. Mr. Gilmore stated, and did not dispute that the Federal negotiation commission had full power to act.

At the Water street alleys last night the High Rollers won all three games from the Grocers, in a 10-pin league fixture. The Grocers were somewhat off color, and the breaks were also against them. Y.M.C.A. CIRCUS AT THE GRAND

A MOST UNIQUE PERFORMANCE WHICH WILL BE REPEATED AGAIN THIS EVENING.

The fourth annual presentation of the Y. M. C. A. Circus was staged at the Grand Opera House last night and will be repeated tonight. It was all that the advertisements claimed for it, and more, and the people of the city who were not at the theatre last night and are desirous of seeing a performance which is unique amongst the many attractions of the year are advised to be on hand this evening when the function will be repeated.

"The Big Show"

P. T. Barnham had nothing on the organiser of the Y.M.C.A. circus as was demonstrated at last night's performance. From beginning to end the audience were absolutely at sea as to the nature of the next number upon the program and a series of pleasant surprises was the result.

The Grand Entry

First the grand parade in which all the performers, clowns gymnasts and coons appeared in procession and marched around the stage led by a band which would make any assembly of musicians which ever sat upon the top of a circus van sound pale and insignificant.

A dumb bell drill was perhaps the most spectacular number upon the program last night. In this the proformers kept perfect time and showed the results of careful training.

Acrobatic Stunts

There were exhibitions of tumbling by the clowns, performance upon the high bar and other apparatus, wand and calisthenic drills, and pyramids in which the junior and senior members of the Y. vied with one another in forming all manner of strange shapes by getting into every conceivable position which never failed to produce a result which might well make an architect feel envious.

The Circus Orchestra

One musician gave a selection upon the ukelele, another upon a cornet and when the orchestra under direction of the Emperor of Syncopation was heard the musical appreciation of the audience was stirred to the uttermost and they encored the colored musicians again and again.

Surgical Demonstration

Even a surgical operation was included in the program last night when Doctor Bunion after chloroforming one of his comrades who was suffering from the effects of a bunion proceeded with the aid of a hammer and a pair of pinchers to remove the growth which looked remarkably like a parsnip, from the foot of the sufferer who seemed immensely relieved as he arose from the floor the minute the doctor had finished with him.

The Final Number

The final number was entitled fireflies. Upon the lights being switched off the junior members of the company appeared upon the stage bearing Chinese lanterns and to the strains of a popular waltz went through a most complicated drill.

Again Tonight

To appreciate to any extent the Y.M.C.A circus one must be on hand to witness it. Tonight it is being repeated and everyone who was not at the Grand last night should not miss this opportunity of attending and seeing a big show which Barnham and Forepaugh in their best days could not surpass.

GATHERING UNEXPLODED SHELLS

Rome, April 4.—General Badoglio, under chief of the general staff has presented the Minister for Reconstruction of the invaded territories Signor Fradeletto, his report on the recovery of unexploded projectiles and bombs in the zone of war and in the localities where the principal battles occurred. From the beginning of the war to October 17, 1918 7,800,000 unexploded. Up to November 1, 1917, there were collected about 7,000,000 unexploded bombs.

From 1917 to the end of hostilities, about 7,700,000 unexploded projectiles were found. The raking of the ground to find them goes on actively but it will be a long time before the work generally has been completed.

BRIDGENORTH'S RETURNING MEN WELCOMED HOME

CORDIAL RECEPTION TENDERED FOUR VETERANS IN FORESTERS' HALL.

A meeting of great interest was held in the Foresters' Hall, Bridgenorth, last night at which the Foresters and the people of the neighborhood generally tendered a public welcome hom to four returned soldiers, namely, Major Kelly, Pte. Wesley Nichols, Pte. W. Trew, Pte. Ross Nichols, Pte. Rollie McMahon Pte. Chas Avery Pte. Bruce Telford.

The chair was occupied, as was most fitting, by Col. Johnstone, who thus had the double satisfaction of having something definite to do both with their going forth and their coming back.

Addresses Delivered.

Addresses were delivered by the Rev. Mr. Webster, of Bridgenorth Methodist Church, and the Rev. John Galt, of Gilmour Memorial Baptist Church, who between them managed happily to mingle the grave with the gay.

Unable to Attend.

Rev. Father McAuley, of Ennismore, had planned to be present, but was compelled to send a message to the effect that all he could do was to send his greetings as duty called him elsewhere.

Attractive Program.

A varied and interesting program was submitted in the course of the evening and at the close an address to the soldiers was read by Mr. Telford, of Bridgenorth, as given below The presentation was most gracefully made by Miss Dorothy Kelly, a niece of one of the soldiers, Major Kelly D.S.O.

The Address.

"Soldiers of Bridgenorth and the Empire, returned to us, by the grace of God. In honor from the blood-stained fields of France and Flanders where for long years you have withstand "wild war's weary blast." We the very men and women for whom you sallied forth as the true knights of the twentieth century; we your debtors for all time do ourselves honor in greeting you in this public welcome home on the spot of all the earth most dear to you; your own home land and the land of your own people. Thanks to you, and to such as you, our homes are inviolate, our liberties are secure our fears quelled. We have always believed in you—that you would quit yourselves like men, that if ever brute force hacked its way to Canada it would be after you had paid down the uttermost even life itself. We wish to assure you that all through we have believed in you and trusted in God to give you the victory which has so gloriously crowned your efforts. We have as it were heard you speak to over the saying after the immortal words of John Guard:

"Mothers cease your weeping.
Calm may be your sleeping,
You and yours in safety now—
Canadian men are keeping.

Sure as Sun is high in heaven
They you fear, by panic riven,
Shall like frightened sheep be driven
By Canadian men.'

"We greatly rejoice in you and in the part that you have played and in the fact that Bridgenorth and the Empire will for all time to come have amongst their most cherished traditions the story of your going forth of your daring and your doing, of your sufferings, of your glorious victory.

"We are proud to know that Bridgenorth and district now counts among its sons men who proved themselves to be the peers of the best of mankind; that you have come back to us laden with honors manifest in the scars of many wounds, and in the splendid distinguished service order.

"There is nothing that we can do that would adequately indicate our feeling of the debt that we owe to you for what you have done and suffered for us nor the debt we owe to God for hearing our prayers and bringing you back to us again.

"We feel, however, that something must be done so in order that it may be quite apparent that there is no kind of comparison between our little gift to you and your heroic service to us we beg your acceptance of a simple signet ring, which will be presented by one of the fair ladies of our own and your own Bridgenorth on the Lake!"

BOLSHEVIK FLEET ORDERED TO SEA AND ATTCK ALLIES

Crews Will Be Shot Should They Refuse to Obey—Situation in Northern Russia Distinctly Worse—Odessa May Be Evacuated.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, April 5.—Leon Trotsky, Bolshevik minister of war and marine, has ordered the Russian Baltic fleet to put to sea and attack the Allies, threatening to have all the crews shot if they disobey the order, says the Mail.

Situation Worse.

London, April 5.—The situation in Northern Russia has recently become distinctly worse, from an Allied viewpoint, mainly owing to a shortage of food, according to despatches.

May Evacuate Odessa.

It is not feared that military reasons will compel the Allies to evacuate Odessa, but there is a possibility, it is said, that the city will become so short of food that it will be unable to support an occupying force.

DEFECTION OF FINNS.

Important Developments on Murmansy Front Expected.

London, April 5.—Important developments on the Murmansy front in Nortnern Russia may be looked for in a few days, owing to a threatened defection of Finnish troops, according to the Mail. It is said that it was to meet this danger that U. S. detachments were sent on two cruisers, which will reach Murmansy the early part of next week.

DUTY OF EMPLOYERS OF LABOR TO THE EMPLOYEES

Must Pay Wages That Will Make Families Self-Supporting.

Toronto, April 4—Rev. Father P. J. Beach, Superintendent of Catholic Charities, addressed the Neighborhood Workers' at St. James' Parish Club yesterday afternoon, and in the course of his remarks, said: "The normal family in a community is self-supporting. There are families, however, who for one reason or another are not self supporting, but are dependent on other for the mere necessities of life. This dependency, according to the circumstances whereby it was produced may be either temporary or permanetn. So long as those in distress can be relieved by relatives or kindly disposed neighbors the matter is usually not one of general social concern, but when by force of circumstances the needy are obliged to turn to strangers for assistance, the matter then becomes of vital interest to the community as a whole. The social conscience of the community is then aroused to a realization of its responsibility to relieve distress and not only to give emergency relief, but to devise and formulate effective and curative methods for relief for its dependents.

"In the feverish evolution of our modern social and industrial life, the problems of distitution and relief thus confront us in both our individual and collective capacity, steadily loom larger and larger, and increase in extent, complexity and intensity. In our efforts to grapple with these problems our machinery grows not only in size and extent but also more varied and complex in character, scope and purpose, until today we find in nearly all our large cities, a multiplicity of agencies, private and public, working in the field always with the best intentions and actuated by lofty motives, but frequently at cross purposes, through lack of a well defined policy.

"Everyone knows that we are living under artificial economic conditions, the direct results of which have been that wealth greater than the world has ever known is held in the hands of the few, that the cost of living has advanced; that in a thousand gatherings over this great land men mutter their discontent; false leaders have arisen and false doctrines are taught; that Socialism is spreading; and that as the struggle for existence grows keener, the weaker units in the world go down and their families go with them.

"There are unscrupulous and unprincipled employers of labor, who would not hesitate to pay a wage below the normal self-supporting standard, in the expectation that the deficiency would be made good from charitable sources. Such a vicious practice cannot be too strongly condemned and relief-giving agencies should be no party to its encouragement and continuance."

ENGINEERS MAKE REPORT TO THE BOARD OF WORKS

Bridge Tenders Were Again Considered at a Long Session Held Last Night.

From 8 o'clock until after 12 last night the members of the Board of Works were in session considering the thirteen tenders which were submitted for the contract of constructing the proposed bridge on Hunter street.

Engineers Barber and Parsons had prepared a report in which the important features in each tender were set forth, and copies of this were distributed to each member of the Board.

Reputable Firms.

Engineer Barber felt that it would not be out of place to congratulate the city upon the number of reputable firms which had tendered for the contract. Chairman Phelan was of the opinion that these companies had only shown ordinary business sagacity in doing so, as the contract would be a most remunerative deal for them, should they succeed in securing it. He could not see that Peterborough should consider itself under any obligation to them because they had asked for the job.

Ald. Murray's View.

Ald. Murray, who appeared at the meeting for the first time since his sickness, thought that Chairman Phelan was under a misapprehension as to Mr. Barber's meaning. He agreed with his statement that the city was fortunate in having so many large contracting firms tendering on the contract, and was sure if the committee continued to pursue the dilly-daily tactics which seemed to have characterised its action as regarded the bridge proposition throughout, these firms would become disgusted and would refuse to have anything further to do with the matter.

Withdrew Tender.

The firm of J. H. Tromanhauser, which had submitted a tender for the contract, wrote the Board last night to the effect that in view of the strange manner in which they were proceeding with the consideration of the tenders and the apparent lack of unanimity which characterized the Board's deliberations, they

ITALIAN HOME GOERS HALTED

STRIKE DETAINS STEAMER AND 1,400 PASSENGERS WITH $2,800,000.

New York, April 5.—At least 2,800,000 real American dollars, in the money belts of 1,400 Italians booked to sail on the liner President Wilson for Trieste are being held in port here by the harbor strike—at a cost of $2,100 a day to the Union Navigation company which has been unable to start the vessel on its way for lack of tugs.

This amount of gold represents the savings of years of toil in America. Each of the 1,400 passengers, eager to return to Italy after the war, has at least $2,000 in his possession.

The vessel, originally scheduled to sail March 20, now is due to leave next Saturday. In the meantime bankers for the steamship company have paid to the Italians approximately $28,000 for subsistence, at the rate of $1.50 per day for each emigrant.

Now, to add the last straw, customs officials have announced they are considering an eleventh hour investigation to determine if any of the passengers owes the United States government an income tax.

POLICE OFFICER IS ASSAULTED ON GEORGE STREET

GOOLEY BROTHER ARRESTED AFTER BEATING UP CONSTABLE BOYD LAST NIGHT.

Joe and Dan Gooley, two returned soldiers, who went overseas with the 93rd Battalion, after making several ineffectual attempts last night to enter a house on George street where a dance was being held, from the guest list of which their names had been omitted, gave Constable Boyd a most unmerciful beating up after which they ran away.

Constable Boyd caught one of them, however, and he reposed for the night in the cells, while this morning the other brother was taken into custody at one of the hotels of the city.

On Three Charges.

This morning Dan and Joe appeared upon three charges. The first was that of assaulting the police. To this they pleaded guilty and were fined $20 and costs each, the total amounting to $60.20. The remaining two charges were of being drunk and disorderly and having liquor in a public place.

On these charges the prisoners did not plead. They would not tell where they got their liquor, and were remanded for a week.

Attack Officer.

When Constable Boyd, who had been summoned by the people whose home the Gooleys had tried to enter, arrived upon the scene last night, he states that two men attacked him and after striking him on the back of the head threw him upon his back, after which one of them jumped on his face with his heavy boots.

Ran Away.

Both assailants then sought safety in flight, but Joe was caught by the officer and locked up and this morning Dan was arrested.

Constable Boyd's features show signs of the treatment he received last night. His face is badly lacerated and one eye completely closed.

OVERSEAS MEN NOT CREATING ANY PROBLEM

THEY HAVE RETURNED FROM SETTLING GREATEST PROBLEM WORLD EVER SAW.

"It might be well for some of these persons who have occasion to refer to the returned soldier problem to use a few qualifying words in connection with some of the statements that are being made.

"One might almost draw the conclusion that the returning of the men from overseas was creating a problem in this country that had no precedent. Here is a sample statement taken from an exchange. 'Every man who returns to this country from the army adds to the problem.'

"In the first place the returning soldiers are not creating a problem. They have returned from settling the greatest problem that ever faced the world.

"They are our own men. They belong here. Their homes are here, and in hundreds of cases there are positions waiting for them as soon as they are ready to go back to them.

"Were Canada able to induce men of equal calibre to leave Europe and come out as immigrants the country would consider itself in good fortune. Why, then, even on that low plane, should the return of our own Canadian army be a matter of fear and trembling?

"Canada owes a lot to the returning soldier—in fact a great deal more than he will ever be able to collect. Never let him get the idea that his return is creating a problem.' "—Brantford Expositor.

NATIONAL MUSIC WEEK TO COMMEMORATE PEACE

Citizens of Peterborough Preparing Program of Seven Days' Vocal and Instrumental Entertainment—School Children's Song Competition For Trophy Shield.

One joyous, stirring week of music—vocal and instrumental—will be offered citizens of Peterborough this coming Easter in commemoration of peace. The program in sight for the seven days, beginning Easter Monday and ending the following Saturday includes choral competitions by the six Public and four Separate Schools; gramophone concerts in hospitals Children's Shelter, the Orphanage Protestant Home and House of Providence; concerts by massed and individual bands; and probably repititions of Easter music by church choirs. The music dealers will loan the machines bear whatever expense is necessary for the project and decorate profusely.

This was the decision reached last evening by a number of musical ladies and gentlemen, who gathered in the Board of Trade chambers to plan for Music Week. It was a citizens' meeting of lovers of music, commendable enthusiasm prevailed and the will to carry out the arrangements in mind was evident.

A National Event.

Mr. Frank Whitehouse, in explaining the object of the meeting, said that at the recent convention of music dealers and industries in Toronto where delegates from coast to coast were present, one member had made the suggestion that a Canadian National Music Week be inaugurated the coming Easter, the same to be held each year in perpetual commemoration of this first Easter of peace after over four years of bitter war. Without any thought of business benefit, the suggestion was readily adopted, and it is expected that every town and city in Canada will do something in celebration of this initial National Music Week. Therefore, this meeting had been called to discuss ways and means for preparing a program for Peterborough, commensurate with the aims in view. The music dealers had in mind the following, A chorus of children, say 50, from each school to compete in glees or oratorios for two trophy shields—one for the Public schools and another for the Separate schools—donated by the local association of music dealers. The right to these trophies to be contested each recurring Music Week. It was proposed that the contesting schools render programs in the Armories, one or more each night, and that Saturday evening judgment passed and the shield awarded. There would be two competitions, a Separate school one and a Public school one, the Board of Education, Mr. Whitehouse continued, its Advisory Board and Inspector Mowat. All heartily concurred in the proposition, and the music trades are looking forward to musicians and those fond of music to co-operate generously in forwarding the project. The Ministerial Association will also be invited to participate.

Citizens' Project.

Mr. J. M. Greene said this should be a citizens' effort. The music trades will stand behind the scheme with money and their instruments. He suggested that the meeting appoint its chairman and secretary, a school committee, a church committee and a hospital committee. The churches would porbably offer their services. The hospital committee should arrange for musical entertainment in the hospitals and the institutions before named at given hours each day.

The Executive.

Mr. R. J. Devey was here the meeting's choice for chairman. He congratulated the music trades on their energetic work toward advancing the education of music and its more general adoption in the home. All should be interested in this effort and in the project for a Music Week in Peterborough. However, he thought it impossible to train children in Ontario in two or three weeks.

Mr. Whitehouse replied if they only sang simple productions like "Fight the Good Fight," it would be worth while, to get the trophy shield contest started this year.

Mr. Walter Stocker concurred in this. He had heard 75,000 English children in similar contests and they only sang simple hymns, for which any body of children could be trained in three weeks.

Mr. J. H. Renwick pointed out that while three of the schools are already trained for a Teachers' Guild concert after Easter, still simple numbers might be adjudged the best. The committee might decide on some test which would equalise conditions. He was heartily in accord with the movement as one which would offer a great impetus to music, and which should be started this year.

Mrs. Rupert Gliddon was here appointed secretary.

The Committees.

The following committees were here agreed on:

Schools—(To assist the music dealers in the competition)—Mr. J. H. Renwick, chairman, to name his own committee. Miss Rennie, musical supervisor in the schools, will be asked to assist.

Church Choirs—(To arrange for repetition of Easter music at schools' competition tests each night)—All the city organists, to select their own chairman Hospital—(To arrange for concerts in hospitals, Children's Shelter, Orphanage, House of Providence, Protestant Home)—Mrs. R. J. Devey, chairman to name own committee.

Bands Committee—The bandmaster of each band and conductor of orchestras. Dr. Amys and Mr. Walter Stocker were appointed to interview the bandmasters and secure their co-operation.

THREE BURNED TO DEATH AT SIMCOE

VICTIMS ARE RETURNED SOLDIER, HIS SISTER AND INFANT.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Brantford, April 5.—George Wisson, a returned soldier and bachelor aged 34, his sister Mrs. J. Wark, and her infant child, were burned to death in Wisson's little dwelling at Simcoe, Ont., about midnight.

Flames had licked up three rooms in the place before they were got under control. Firemen found the remains of Wisson between the bed and a keg supposed to have contained hard cider. The other bodies were lying in the kitchen.

FOUND DEAD WITH BULLET IN HER BRAIN

POLICE NOT SATISFIED THAT SHOOTING WAS ACCIDENTAL —CARTRIDGES DEFECTIVE.

Chicago, April 4.—Mrs. Black was found dying yesterday afternoon in the basement of her home. A .22 bullet from a rifle with which she and Mr. Black practiced on a miniature target range in the basement had entered her mouth and gone to the base of the brain. The bullet was of the hollow nose variety much used in target practice and had mushroomed like a dum-dum.

Mr. Black immediately declared her death the result of accident, asserting there was no conceivable motive for murder or self-destruction. This conviction he has held in spite of the doubts of the police. He called attention to the fact that the weapon his wife was using had been broken and might have been accidentally discharged.

Defective Cartridges Found.

The extractor of the rifle was broken, and it was customary to jar cartridges from the bore by striking the butt against the floor. Mrs. Black evidently had found a number of defective cartridges yesterday, for several that were unexploded, though marked by the firing pin, were found on the floor. It was in seeking to eject a cartridge that had failed to explode that she is supposed to have shot herself.

Mr. Black came home from Chicago yesterday afternoon and was met at the station by his Filipino servant, who accompanied him to the house. Mrs. Black was not in the living rooms and Mrs. Black told the Filipino boy to look for her. The boy went to the basement, and a moment later came rushing upstairs with the information that Mrs. Black had shot herself.

Dies in Hospital.

Mr. Black found her on the floor unconscious. Dr. Margaret N. Levick was called to administer aid, and the woman was removed a few minutes later to the Evanston hospital. An operation was attempted, but before it could be completed Mrs. Black died. A nurse at the hospital is reported to have said that the nature of the wound pointed to suicide. On the other hand it is said that powder burns on the face substantiated Mr. Black's belief that the gun was discharged while she bent over it trying to unload it.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

SATURDAY, APRIL 5, 1919

THE COUNCIL AND THE BRIDGE.

THE CITY COUNCIL, with duly vested authority, instructed Engineer Barber to draw up plans according to specific instructions which were furnished him, for a new bridge at Hunter street. It seems that for the style of bridge which the Council had in mind, these were perfectly satisfactory. The probable cost, however, was a surprise to the aldermen when bids for the construction work were received.

New tenders were called for and different plans were suggested, thus calling for a number of bids from the various contractors who offered to do the work.

For a week or more the Bridge Committee and the Board of Works have been wrestling with the complex problem that they have brought upon themselves, deeming it the part of wisdom to meet in camera, like the delegates to the Peace Conference, who have been struggling in secret all these months to little apparent purpose.

The aldermen of the city have been elected to transact the business of the people. They are the duly appointed servants of the people, and as such have no right to lock out the press, the representatives of the taxpayers, from their deliberations. Public business is supposed to be transacted in public. The Council is charged with the duty of expending something like $300,000 of the taxpayers' money, and the people who will be required to pay for the bridge are entitled to be informed as to every step taken in the negotiations. Owl sessions of aldermen, no less than secret diplomacy, were supposed to go out with Prussianism and similar iniquities. For their own safety in a matter of so much public moment the aldermen should court the fullest publicity in the handling of this matter.

The Review has no exaggerated idea of the rights of newspapers to make a record of public events. In this regard a journal has the same prerogative as a taxpayer, no more and no less. The taxpayer has just as much right to be informed at any time what his civic representatives are doing as a private employer has to demand an accounting from the man whom he engages to perform a certain line of work for him.

Perhaps there is a reason for the dark lantern methods in this case. It is of common report that two of the city's servants are in favor not only of changing the entire plans for the bridge, of putting up a steel instead of a concrete structure, but are also desirous of having the new plans drawn up by another engineer, not a resident of the city, as one would naturally suppose, but an outsider like Mr. Barber himself.

Would there be any justice in such a course? Mr. Barber is an engineer of established reputation. His record speaks for itself. He has been as successful in the past in steel as in concrete structures. He has at all times been ready to meet the local aldermen more than half way and to change his plans at any time to suit the views of those interested. His counsel in this matter has been valuable, and if plans are to be prepared for a steel bridge, there appears no valid reason why he should not be given the new task.

ONE WAY TO SAVE.

THE LEGISLATURE has shown commendable business ability in deciding to increase the set remuneration of county judges, while at the same time saving the taxpayer from additional expense by reducing the number of officials on the bench. The reduction is to be made slowly, and only two counties in Ontario are to have junior judges. The latter officials are to be promoted as vacancies occur, so that the new system will not work any hardship to any judges now in office.

If the present indemnity of the members of Parliament is regarded as inadequat, why should not some such system be put in operation as that which it is proposed to apply to the judges of Onatrio? The present membership of the House of Commons could be reduced by one-half without marring the efficiency of the service. All that would be necessary would be to insist that every member devote all his time to his public duties instead of making the latter, as so many do, mere adjuncts to his private concerns, and making a holiday of the months that he is called upon to spend more or less [illegible] at [illegible] every year. [illegible] could upon those occasions look as closely after the welfare of a constituency twice as large, either in extent or [illegible], as he does today.

Take a comparison: The State of Michigan and the Province of Ontario are about equal in wealth and population. Michigan has in the Federal Houses thirteen congressmen and two senators, each of whom is paid a yearly indemnity of $7500. Ontario pays $205,000 for its eighty-two members of Parliament, and on an average another $25,000 for senatorial salaries, the number of members of the Upper House from this Province varying from time to time on account of vacancies which are not always promptly filled. The Michigan congressman or senator probably gives all his time to his duties, and besides this the congressman has to face the worry and bear the expense of an election every two years, the senator running that public gauntlet only once in six years.

The Dominion Parliament has been in session now for nearly two months, and mighty little in the way of actual business has been accomplished. A reduction of the number of members, by an amendment to the B.N.A. Act, would make for celerity in the transaction of public affairs. The same condition, too, holds good in the Legislature, where so much time is frittered away in useless debate, the real business of the session being rushed through in the closing hours of the session.

IS HISTORY TO REPEAT ITSELF?

HENRY WATTERSON, one of the most distinguished of American editors, in a series of reminiscences now running in a magazine in the United States, says, with reference to the war between the North and the South:

> "We live in a world of sin, disease and death. The ways of God to man are indeed mysterious and past finding out. Why the long and dreadful struggle of a kindred people, the awful bloodshed and havoc of four long years, leaving us at the close measurably where we were at the beginning, is one of the unsolved problems which should prove to us that there is a world hereafter and beyond, since no great creative principle could produce one with such dire inequalities and contrasts through so short a span of human life."

Mr. Watterson speaks from the experience of eighty years of active life, in which no man noted more closely the current of human events. He took an aggressive part in the war to which he refers, fighting for the cause that was lost. What he says in his reminiscences is at once an excerpt from history, a comment on contemporaneous events, and a prophecy of what fate has in store for humanity. The world has not changed much since the days of the bloody and unrighteous Civil war. The temper of the people is much the same. That war was fought—and up to the time it was one of the most intense and sanguinary in history—to decide what was really the leading issue between the two parties as to whether an American state, once it had become a part of the Union, had the right to secede. That question was debatable then, and is in the same status today, after four years of hostilities. All the war did settle was the fact that no state or number of states can secede from a federation so long as the opposing force is strong enough to hold them in leash.

Adopting the words of Mr. Watterson to more recent conditions, the late war has left the world at its close measurably where it was at the beginning. Six months of an armistice, with the conquering nations striving all that time to agree on lasting terms of peace, finds millions of soldiers still sleeping on their arms, prepared for the not improbable event of a revival of hostilities. Old time diplomacy and statesmanship failed to avert the late war. That same diplomacy is still groping in the dark for a solution, following practically the same methods as those which resulted in the sanguinary disasters of the past four years.

The hopes that were created when the armistice was signed six months ago have to a great extent been shattered. The faith which was born at the same time has been weakened. The world is growing skeptical of the wisdom of statesmanship, a wisdom that was supposed to have been enhanced by passing through the fiery ordeal of experience. Measurably, at least, the close of the war leaves the world where it was at the beginning, so far as the prospects of perpetual peace are concerned.

Take a leaf from history, going back no further than the beginning of the present century, not yet two decades old. The Hague Convention was composed of all but the identical elements that make up the present Peace Conference. The same program was followed, to all intents and purposes. The object of the Convention was to prevent war, if possible, and that failing, to have all international conflicts conducted according to a so-called Christian code. There were to be no hostilities without arbitration of the questions at issue. Women and children were to be assured such war-time safety as was never accorded them before. Unfortified towns and cities were to be safer than ever. So far as humanly possible, all the brutal elements were to be eliminated from strife between nations.

The late war was started in spite of the solemn obligations entered into at The Hague Convention, without even a pretence at arbitration. In all history there is not recorded a conflict so barbarous, none in which womanhood so suffered, in which so many helpless children and aged non-combatants were murdered, in which so much property was wantonly destroyed. The bombardment from the air and under the seas was introduced for the first time. Seven million men fell in lawful battle, thousands of others were murdered, and every country that had a hand in the cataclysm is caring for its scores upon scores of war cripples.

Prussianism has, it is true, been checked, if not crushed, but the Peace Conference seems unable to agree upon a plan to prevent that menace of militarism from being rebuilt as powerful as ever, or to have the peace of the world menaced by another such danger under a new name. Nations that promised the abolition of compulsory military service in the event of victory over Germany are recalling their pledges. Armies and navies are still to be maintained as a guarantee of peace. That reason for the existence of armies and navies was urged in the past, and the world has had four years in which to study the falling down of the system.

There was failure to enforce the obligations imposed upon the civilized powers by The Hague Convention. Similar failure is not improbable in making good the edicts of the League of Nations, the same elements of enforcement to be relied upon. Some one has said that the present system of government has failed. As much can be asserted for diplomacy. There can be no peace assured until the masses who bear the brunt of all wars are given a voice in their prevention, instead of leaving it to those who have really nothing but academic theories to guide them.

CANADIAN PENSION BILL

Estimates issued by the Minister of Finance show a yearly pension bill of approximately $30,000,000.00, and this, through a minimum figure has provoked questionable comment.

How this vast fund is administered and where this money goes, are the queries advanced by an interested public. Here is the official answer: Pensions to the thousands of deceased soldiers' dependents and pensions to an equal number of incapacitated veterans.

Sailors and soldiers in war, are citizens delegated by their fellows to perform a public service—the destruction of a public enemy. Therefore, sailors and soldiers incurring detriment to their pensions while on service are recompensed by a grateful country as a reward for their patriotism and this is done in a material manner so that they may suffer no more severely than the average citizen by reason of the enemy's action.

With the return of Canadian units we are to realize the toll that has been exacted and the demands that are to be made upon the Dominion Exchequer through the ravages of war.

An outstanding example, though perhaps not a typical one, of the extent to which the financial resources of the country are to be taxed has been illustrated with the return of Canada's first complete unit "The Princess Pats." Here some slight indication of the excessive war casualties is shown in the high death rate in this one regiment alone. Possessing an original strength of nearly 1,000 we have a unit returning approximately 100 strong, showing a casualty list of nearly 900 men—the majority of which are entitled to pension.

Many, no doubt, are merely disability pensions, men who have been wounded on active service and who draw a yearly stipend to offset the disadvantages accruing to them through their injuries, but the fact remains that there are nearly nine hundred pensions to be paid and the money must come from the coffers of the Dominion Government. This fact moreover, might in truth be told of almost every battalion seeing service in the first years of the war, and there were in all four hundred of them.

Automatically upon discharge a soldier is considered for pension. Granted this comes the question of what he shall do. He has stepped out of his sphere and the moment is a critical one for all concerned. To quote the words of a famous French delegate to an English commission—"When the soldier vanishes the civilian appears," and one can only envy his optimism.

In actuality the invalid or demobilized man is classified under five distinct types: (1) The man with a permanent disability, whose future life necessitates complete change of occupation and to whom an outdoor environment is often peculiarly attractive. (2) the soldier suffering from shell shock and neurasthenia or other kindred nervous complaints. (3) The unqualified or partly qualified man. (4) The man desirous of a change of occupation. (5) The man who is fully qualified who has a profession to return to Ways and means are being provided to accommodate these five types.

A large percentage of those typified in the first class are given courses in Vocational Re-education and are eventually established in occupations introducing a certain amount of necessary outdoor exercise.

Men classified under the second heading constitute a difficult problem and one which as yet has not been definitely decided upon. Pensions are not granted to soldiers suffering from shell shock, at least not until a cure has been effected, the popular idea being that they retard recovery, are not on incentive to ambition, and in many ways lessen the man's initiative.

Then there is the third class, boys who "joined up" when still in their teens, attending the local university or public school. These have come to the stage of manhood, through the hard school of adversity, and though old in the experience of war are virtually children in the affairs of peace. Vocational training, which affords distinct advantages and numberless openings is proving the solution of this difficulty.

Again we have the fourth class—men desirous of a change of occupation. Human perspective is liable to change and in the person of the returned soldier this is often the case. A man finds that his views have altered and that in many instances the work which claimed his undivided interest previous to enlisting has now become singularly unattractive.

The Civil Service has a ready solution here in its issuing of an order-in-Council, giving to returned soldiers every preference in the awarding of Government positions, and the Department of Land Settlement opens up a vista of farm life to those to whom city life has become distasteful.

Last but not least we have the man who is fully qualified and who is returning to an established profession, and to all intents and purposes his is an enviable position. But such is not the case. He has come back with the expectation of "carrying on" where he left off and to his dismay he finds that his brain fails to respond, that his faculties are dulled and that time and patience are needed if he is to regain his pre-war ability. For just such cases as these a "brushing-up" course is essential. In England an Appointment Department has been inaugurated with special reference to this work and Canada is adopting similar methods in its treatment of similar cases.

TERRIBLE AGONY FROM RHEUMATISM

A Sufferer Shows How Complete Relief Was Obtained.

Rheumatism is a trouble extremely difficult to get rid of. If a tendency to rheumatism is established in the system it makes itself manifest by a return of the acute pains with every spell of bad weather. This is why so many people think the trouble is due to cold or damp. The fact is known, however, to medical men, that with the appearance of rheumatism there is a rapid thinning of the blood, and that the rheumatic poisons are only expelled from the system when the blood is restored to its normal condition. This means that to drive rheumatism from the system it must be treated through the blood, and for this purpose no other medicine has been so successful as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills renew and enrich the blood, thus driving out the rheumatic poison, easing the aching, painful, swollen joints and restoring the victim to general good health. Among the rheumatic sufferers who have been cured by the use of this medicine is Mrs. Wm. Johnston, Chatham, Ont., who says: "Some years ago, while living in Mount Forest I was stricken with inflammatory rheumatism, from which I suffered terrible agony. Neither the doctor who attended me nor the remedies tried gave more than a little relief for a time, and as a consequence grew very weak and was on the verge of nervous prostration. At this stage an uncle advised me to try Dr Williams' Pink Pills, as they cured him of a severe attack of rheumatism. I took his advice and faithfully used the pills for several months, when I found myself fully restored to health with every vestige of the rheumatism and every symptom of the nerve trouble gone I have had no return of either trouble since and feel very grateful for what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills did for me."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills can be obtained through any medicine dealer or may be had by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THE BUNDLE.

(By Walt Mason.)

By ceaseless industry and thrift, by management and care, I've raised a bundle hard to lift, for many bones are there. While others had a bully time and made the goblets clank, I labored for the lusciuos dime and stored it in the bank. Through burning days and dismal nights I toiled with weary tread, while other fellows saw the sights and stained the landscape red. So I detest the whiskered pup who comes from stale saloons to say we ought to divvy up our store of picayunes. We will attach a fancy name to creeds he may parade, but it's the same old holdup game the thieves have always played. The same old hopes forever burn in lawless people's souls, to gather coin they do not earn, and swipe their neighbors' rolls. So long as there's a planet here, some men will practise thrift, and other men, with thirst for beer, will talk and loaf and drift. And while this planet shall abide the bums will always say that thrifty fellows should divide or give their wad away. I've pushed the plow and plied the flail and groomed the setting hen, and trimmed the tree and split the rail, to gain my iron men. And wild eyed anarchists may roar, may threaten, plead and whine and thunder loudly at the door, but what I have is mine.

Must Still Save For War Purposes

Canadians must continue to save if for no other reason than that the War estimates for this year call for an expenditure of $350,000,000. This is only $150,000,000 less than the amount asked for last year.

The Armistice has been signed, but it is estimated that the expenditure on war account will this year be equal to about 70 per cent of the amount asked for last year. The fighting ceased with the signing of the armistice, but the paying did not.

Such being the need of money all persons should save and through the purchase of War Savings Stamps, place their savings at the disposal of the Government.

SIGHTS IN RUINED RHEIMS

We started from Verdun about 10.30 a.m. for Rheims, via Clermont and Suippes. Passing out of the famous town by the western gate, we saluted the American M.P. on guard, and sped on our way. Our Ford car seemed in fair condition despite the rough and tumble journey fro Vigny on the previous day. Along a portion of the same road we had again to proceed before we turned off to Clermont. This thoroughfare was in the critical days of Verdun the only [illegible] open to the Allies. Its condition may be imagined even though some repair has evidently beer undertaken since the armistice. Still our car danced and forged its way over and through deep puddles and a perfect sea of mud.

After lunch at Clermont, which is in ruins, having been occupied by the Germans in 1914, we made for Suippes, getting nearer and nearer to the scenes of those last days on the Marne when the power of the Germans was finally and completely broken. Eventually we took a side road leading right across the battlefield, with the French trenches and camps on either side of us. For many kilometres we did not meet a soul, and the deserted dugouts, small gauge railways ,and camouflaged hedges presented the appearance of some hideous transformation. Yet only a few months previously the brave Poilus had here fought and bled and died. Torn and riven trees, huge shell-holes and an awful road indicated something of the hell they passed through. To the right of us we saw the hills on which the famous breed of long-haired sheep used at one time to browse in safety, peppered out of recognition. There were the trenches of the Germans, and as they dealt out death and destruction so the French returned measure for measure.

Scarcely a Whole Building.

About six o'clock we entered the despoiled city of Rheims. The grey light made the streets appear even sadder and more dismal. Before the war, as everyone knows, Rheims ranked as one of the most prosperous places in France. With a population of 120,000 engaged in the production of champagne and woollens and other trades, her people were industrious and rich. As we saw it, scarcely a whole building remained intact. Cathedral, Archbishop's residence, Hotel de Ville,, railway station, banks, offices, mansions, and factories, as well as humbler dwellings, stood in ruins. If the evil spirit of destruction had wished to do its work—as was only too apparent—it could not have desired a more complete result. The sight oppressed and haunted one. All you could say was "It is war!" Devilish, cruel, and demoniacal.

Yet, as we knew, the courage of the brave inhabitants triumphed in spite of everything. They remained in the city during the first short occupation by the Germans, and, later, held on for many weary months during the constant bombardment.

A Frenchwoman of the name of Carrel, holding rank as an officer in the Salvation Army (according to an informant who told us an interesting story) displayed remarkable courage and leadership. When the French returned into the city after September 12, following the battle of the Marne, they were ravenous for food. An ox was killed in the street, and the Salvationist officer and her assistant cut the steaks and fried them for the men. A week later the city was burning, and many French soldiers were short of bread. She went to their assistance ,and collected from the bakers' shops sufficient to meet their immediate needs. From the beginning of the bombardment until March, 1918 when the Germans remained about one mile from Rheims, she stayed at her post, succouring her neighbors and performing many services for them. At Christmas, 1917, she arranged a Christmas tree for French soldiers in the champagne cellars, which were placed at her disposal by a rich Protestant lady in the city. Every one of the 150 men invited to the entertainment received a suitable gift, such as flannel articles, as well as cake and oranges, and spent a most enjoyable time, despite the German attacks.

Homelike Place for Soldiers.

Before the end of March, 1918, she was forced to leave the city owing to the danger to civilians ,and was not able to return until just before Christmas. She has now established a "foyer" for the French soldiers in a fine house lent by a rich champagne maker. Though Salvationist in its initiative and organization, it is free to Jew and Roman Catholic, without any attempt at proselytizing. Her desire is to benefit the men and provide a home-like place during the period that must elapse before they are demobilized.

We had a conversation with this [illegible] cognized her deep religious sentiments as well as her practical common-sense. Probably, too, she had a certain amount of superstition. During a large portion of the siege she kept a large lack cat, that went with her on every errand of mercy, perched on her shoulder. Much to her sorrow the cat was gassed and died. But the Salvationist's religious faith nev- large black cat, that went with her on ing ordeal.

An Englishman whom we met in the city informed us that he had come down from Lille in order to take an [illegible] firm's factory at Rheims. At Lille the Germans had robbed the works of all brass and copper, and whilst the factories in Rheims were in ruins—for the enemy had made a point of destroying the woollen manufactories—they hoped to obtain brass and copper fittings in order to restart their works at Lille.

We asked our informant how it was that British woollen firms had established themselves at Rheims. He replied that this was due to the fact that English manufacturers wanted to be close to the special wool obtained from the long-haired sheep bred on the hills of the Marne. From this wool they had made the merino dress goods famous throughout the world. He was afraid that as a result of the war which had driven the sheep from the district and caused much cross breeding that the strain had become depreciated to a serious extent, and that therefore the wool would suffer. We heard from a Rheims inhabitant that the vineyards had been destroyed, and that champagne making would be on a modest extent for many years. In th efamous cellars there were millions upon milllions of bottles, so that for the present the supply would be maintained. Its cost, however, is likely to advance to a higher rate than at present. — By Correspondent to Westminster Gazette.

BABY'S HEALTH IN THE SPRING

The Spring is a time of anxiety to mothers who have little ones in the home. Conditions make it necessary to keep the baby indoors. He is often confined to overheated, badly ventilated rooms and catches colds which rack his whole system. To guard against this, a box of Baby's Own Tablets should be kept in the house and an occasional dose given the baby to keep his stomach and bowels working regularly. This will prevent colds, constipation or colic and keep baby well. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

ENGINEERS MAKE

wished to withdraw their tender and asked that their certified cheque be returned to them.

The endeavors of the meeting last night were directed towards deciding upon whether they desired to let the contract upon a cost plus basis or a bulk sum system.

Favored Lump Sum.

The Board seemed to be a unit in favor of the latter course, but did not feel like eliminating all the firms which had tendered upon the cost plus basis, as this would reduce the list of tenders to be considered to two.

It was obvious that to follow this course would not be advisable, and the Board accordingly asked several of the contractors who had tendered upon the cost plus basis whether they would be satisfied to change their offer to the lump sum system so that their price would be guaranteed.

Three Refused.

Three of them, when asked this question, replied in the negative. They gave their reason for refusal that to guarantee a price in view of the present unsettled state of the labor market would not be good business. One representative stated it would be impossible to guarantee a price upon the figures and specifications furnished by the engineer without the firm checking them over and then there were always contingencies to be considered. To change his bid to a lump sum status would mean that he firm's share of profit would that the firm's share of profit would be taking all the risk in connection with the contract.

Ald. McIntyre's View.

This was the feature of the lump sum basis which appealed to Ald. McIntyre. He felt that even if the city would have to pay more to begin with it would ensure them against incurring additional expense as it unloaded all the responsibility upon the contractor.

It was felt that could the contract be let upon the bulk sum basis and [illegible] shortening the bridge, removing all the ornamental work and making several minor changes, to a cost price which would be within the amount of money which the bylaw provides for, some progress might be made.

No Decision.

No definite decision was arrived at by the Board of Works last night, and consequently the report of the engineers upon the various tenders submitted was not available for publication.

To Use Discretion.

Ald. Hamilton felt that while there was nothing in the proceedings of the meeting which could not be made known to the public, it would not be good policy to use figures in connection with the report, and fearing the reporters might not use that discretion which is so essential in recording the deliberations of the Board of Works, especially when the Hunter street bridge is under discussion, he suggested that City Clerk Armstrong might censor their reports. Mr. Armstrong promptly declined, stating that the chairman of the Board was the proper person to be entrusted with such a task.

Ottawa, April 5.—The Government has passed an order-in-Council removing from the category of enemy language publications those issued in the language of countries which have been at different times under enemy control, including, among others, the Roumanian, Russian, Ukrainian, Esthonian, Finnish, Croatian and Livonian languages.

The only publications which will in future be subject to this order in Council are those printed in the German, Hungarian, Bulgarian and Turkish languages.

May Have Two Seats

Paris, April 4.—There is a possibility that the League of Nations will have two seats, at Geneva and Brussels. This plan is being considered.

Although a majority of the delegates apparently favor Geneva, King Albert's strong appeal in behalf of Brussels is influencing sentiment, and the palaces offered by both the Swiss and the Belgians may be accepted and alternate meetings arranged.

$2,000,000 WORTH OF SUPPLIES ON LONG TRAIN OF SIXTY CARS

AUSTRALIA WILL INCREASE TARIFF

MORE PROTECTION IS GENERAL TENDENCY THROUGHOUT THE WORLD.

The international trade movement is towards protection. Great Britain has accepted Imperial preference. It is protecting key industries, restricting foreign imports and is pledged to [illegible]ing of foreign goods on British markets. Australia is to increase its protective duties and promote industrial development. According to an announcement by Acting Premier Watt, revision of the tariff laws of the Commonwealth will be directed largely by the following conditions:

1. The necessity of preserving those industries brought into existence through the war.

2. The encouragement of contemplated new industries and extension and diversification of existing enterprises.

South Africa is increasing its tariff. New Zealand, Newfoundland, Japan, Brazil and Portugal are rigidly maintaining theirs. A higher tariff for the United States is forecast by Chairman Fordney of the Ways and Means Committee of the United States Congress, who will be the author of the new tariff bill. Congressman Gillett, of Massachusetts, who will be the Speaker of the House of Representatives in the new Congress says, "at the earliest opportunity there should be passed by the Republicans of the House a protective tariff measure which will provide more abundant revenue and prevent an inundation of foreign goods produced by cheap labor." France is exercising Government control of imports to build up home manufactures and home markets. Italy's after-war programme calls for a higher protective tariff. Representatives of German industries are not only urging continuation of the protective policy which gave the country its great commercial position before the war, but they are advocating State organization, State control, and gigantic monopolies to force German products on other nations.

These will be passed upon, in principle, by the council, it is reported from French sources.

TO WELCOME 22nd

Quebec, April 4.—A mass meeting of citizens has been called at the City Hall to organize a welcome to the 22nd, a French-Canadian Battalion, expected to return here this spring.

Rheumatism

Rheumatism has become so common nowadays that hundreds of people make no effort to rid themselves of its fatal grip, believing it to be incurable save in exceptional cases.

No greater fallacy exists. Sufferers from rheumatism can be relieved if the cause is remedied and removed.

Let us examine the facts. The direct cause of rheumatism and kindred diseases is poisoning of the blood stream, through failure of the kidneys to filter and remove the impurities that are constantly collecting in the system.

Once the kidneys are out of order, the trouble starts. The poison-ladened blood circulating through the system deposits its impurities in the muscles and joints, setting up infection, and Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, etc., follow.

The first step necessary is to bring the kidneys to perform their natural function once again, and relief will be the immediate result. Gin Pills will do it, and will save weeks of fearful suffering if taken at the first indications of rheumatism.

Gin Pills have been recognized as an assured relief to sufferers from rheumatism, backache, painful urination, brick dust deposits, and gravel. Thousands of testimonials bear witness to the fact that they relieve kidney or bladder troubles instantly. Try them. For sale everywhere at 50c a box. Gin Pills cost little, but are worth a lot. Sample free on request.

Says we will both look and feel clean, sweet and fresh and avoid illness.

Sanitary science has of late made rapid strides with results that are of untold blessing to humanity. The latest application of its untiring research is the recommendation that it is necessary to attend to internal sanitation of the drainage system of the human body as it is to the drains of the house.

Those of us who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when we arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the phosphated hot water is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble, rheumatic stiffness; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

C. N. R. MEN NOW SEEK MORE PAY

ALSO IMPROVED CONDITIONS — TROUBLE IS THREATENED.

Ottawa, April 4.—That trouble is brewing among the employes of the Canadian National Railways of a nature which demands immediate Government action was the assertion of A. R. Mosher of Halifax, a member of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employes, in an interview today. Mr. Mosher is a member of a big deputation thoroughly representative of the C.N.R. workers throughout the Dominion, which is taking the problem up with the Department of Labor.

The delegation had a preliminary interview with Senator Robertson today when the men were accorded a very cordial reception. Another conference will be held tomorrow. An increased wage schedule and an improvement in general working conditions are the two main complaints the deputation took up with Senator Robertson. While asking the adoption of a better wage scale, the men urge that the old working conditions which they enjoyed on the Canadian Northern Railway before the line was amalgamated with the Government system be re-established. It was stated by Mr. Mosher that the railway employes were unable to make any progress with the Executive of the C.N.R. with the result that they were appealing to the Government.

"The matter is reaching a crisis," asserted Mr Mosher; "The Government must step in immediately or there will be trouble."

COULD HHVE SAVED THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS

BROWN SORRY He DIDN'T KNOW ABOUT TANLAC SOONER —GAINS 17 POUNDS

"If I had had Tanlac five years ago I could have saved not only a world of suffering but more than a thousand dollars besides," said W. F. Brown, of 132 Yorkville Ave., Toronto, Ontario, Canada, recently.

"I had a terrible case of stomach trouble," he continued "and would bloat up with gas something awful. I would suffer with agonizing pains in my stomach and was never free from headaches. For nine months I was on a light diet, and became so weak that I could hardly dress myself [illegible] more than skin and bones and was so nervous I could hardly sleep. I took every kind of treatment and spent months in hospitals, but only got worse and was so bad off that I was given up to die.

"One day my brother-in-law suggested that I try Tanlac, and I did so, and I am feeling a thousand times better. I have already gained seventeen pounds, my appetite is fine, the gas and those awful pains have disappeared and I can eat most anything without suffering afterwards."

Tanlac is sold in Peterboro by W. R. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowler's Corners, by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

Beauty Hides a Multitude of Virtues in the Maxwell

THIS time beauty conceals the virtues—not the "sins." For the new "garments" of the April Maxwell are severely pretty, simple, modern, and the kind that make you want to possess one.

But underneath this "robe of beauty" you'll find a sound, rugged, compact, everlastingly-on-the-job chassis that now has a record manufacturing run of 300,000—all alike.

For in 5 years that number of chasses have come out of the 8 great Maxwell plants—each built on the same pattern; each one better than the last.

To date more than 1000 refinements, big and little, have been made in the Maxwell. The plan is to improve and improve —but not to change in any radical way the original chassis.

Thus you'll understand why a Maxwell never quits running; never grows wobbly and loose with age; never forces the garage man to send you a staggering bill for mechanical treatment.

Now you get a far better Maxwell than ever before. Which would be sufficient for the average buyer. But more than that you're getting a Maxwell that the touch of artistic magic has made into a car of rare beauty.

It doesn't take an art critic to pass judgment on the beauty of an April Maxwell. Anyone with fair eyesight gets it in a jiffy.

COMMENTS ON FOOD MARKETS

GROCERY MARKETS SETTLING DOWN INTO IMPROVED CONDITIONS.

The grocery markets generally are settling down into a much better position. Business is generally reported as exceptionally good, a return indeed to the general conditions that prevailed before the coming of peace introduced some uncertainty into trading conditions. The buying movement is steady, retailers evidently having pretty well cleaned up their accumulations, and coming on the market again to replace their stocks as required. This condition of affairs is producing a business situation brighter than it has been for some months past.

Montreal.—In summarizing the markets this week changes have come on many lines. Declines are registered here on lye, soap, canned beans in plain and tomato sauce varieties, Vichy water, cloves, nutmegs, oats and potatoes. The drop on beans is in accord with the very decided lowering tendencies on the various grades of beans in the market.

Among the advances made are those for barley, which is up two cents. Shorts and bran are moved higher and hay is up $1.50 per ton all around, due, in large measure, to light delivery by the farmers. Box apples are selling at $5, and course vegetables are considerably firmed, a number of prices being moved up.

Dried fruits are firm and selling fairly well. Corn syrups are very firm under the influence of high corn prices. Coffee and tea markets are steadily high, and rolled oats may be advanced again. New crop maple syrup is quoted at $2 per Imperial gallon. Trade would be better were weather conditions more seasonable.

Toronto.—The changes in the Toronto market this week are more noticeable in the produce section than in the general grocery markets; butter still remains very high, and shows no indication of any declines. Stocks are light, and export buying heavy. There has been a surprising decline in the export in eggs during the week but despite that fact the prices have advanced, local demand and the movement into storage being sufficient to account for all supplies available.

There is an improved feeling in the bean market. Beans that have been a drug on the market for some time past are coming into demand and Canadian beans are quoted somewhat higher, with imported stock holding firm. Lima beans are slightly easier.

There is a good demand for spices it being evidently the general impression that the market is getting pretty well down to rock-bottom. Tea and coffees are both in strong demand and are holding very firm, though no changes in prices are recorded this week. Rolled oats, too, are in a better position, and while prices are held down by present heavy stocks, there is little doubt that once these stocks have been depleted, there will be a sharp advance to bring the prices on a line with the grain market. It is therefore probable that advances will be noted both in oat and corn products in the near future.

Winnipeg.—The heavy demand for prunes and raisins may result in a shortage, according to the opinion of well-informed handlers on this market the damaging of the muscatel crop by rains has placed a heavy demand on other varieties of raisins that has resulted in a very firm market. It is expected that the coming season will see record prices for both raisins and prunes.

Canned goods are in heavy demand and are clearing up well, though there have been no noticeable changes in prices.

Coffee will advance as the handlers have to go into the market to replenish their stocks, a condition that cannot be long delayed.

The practical failure of the Spanish olive crop is expected to result in very high olive prices.

There is a fear that the Cuban strike may yet result in a shortage of raw sugar that might again bring about the difficult conditions of some months ago.

$150,000 for Queen's Library

Kingston, Ont., April 4.—The late Dr. James Douglas, chancellor of Queen's University, left $150,000 to Queen's for a library college, and the authorities are negotiating for St. James' Church property adjoining the college as a site.

CONDITIONS ON ONTARIO FARMS

The young fall wheat is looking well although it has been exposed more than usual during the winter. The next two or three weeks, however, are regarded as the most trying time for the young plants and at the time of reporting raw winds were prevailing.

Considerable spring plowing has been done in some of the south-western countries. In Lambton and Kent some spring wheat and oats have been sown already. Wellington and Lincoln predict a large acreage of spring wheat, but Halton states that mixed grains will be preferred in that county.

Clover does no look so promising as fall wheat, as it has suffered more from heaving. Where top dressed in the fall red clover is said to be in excellent condition.

Little or no winter injury to orchards has been reported. Fruit buds are very far advanced for the season.

Live stock are more or less in demand excepting horses. But while the horse market generally is dull, several car loads were shipped from the northern part of Huron during the month. At a recent fair in Wellington about fifty animals were sold to dealers for outside points and about as many more to local farmers.

Beef cattle are being marketed more freely, but there is a scarcity of well finished animals offering. Good grade sows are in great request. At a recent sale in Lambton grade shorthorns averaged $155; two brought $181 and one $191. Waterloo reports the average price paid for fourteen grade Holstein cows was $165.75. In Dundas dairy cows have changed hands at from $100 to $110. Hogs are being turned off in fair numbers and more are likely to be fed than were counted on recently. Young pigs are again in brisk demand, six weeks old animals being snatched up at from $11 to $13 each.

Hay is scarce, and is selling at from $20 to $25 a ton. Other fodders more especially roughage are more than sufficient for all calls.

Beans are in good supply, and buyers are more active.

Farmers' Clubs are active in buying and selling. Wellington reports that ten clubs in that County are shipping live stock co-operatively, and are buying seed grain for its members. Waterloo also states that its clubs are doing similar work.

EDITOR'S MAIL

HAYSEEDS ARE AWAKE

Editor Review:

Sir—I think the most amusing game that has ever been tried since the first day of Confederation has just been done by the government (if we have any) over the daylight saving scheme. While they winked at the railroads, manufacturers, and the ordinary dudes to go ahead, they let on they would side up with the farmer this time. They expect to have an election soon and they don't want to say no to anybody—(a jelly back government as it were).

But the blind wont work. The old hayseeds are very much awake just now. The days of the politicians trick is past as far as the farmer is concerned. There is something coming and soon. You can just see the shadow round the corner now.

It is spreading faster than Bolshevism is in Europe—I mean the U.F.O.—and when they get going right they will make the politicians sit up and take notice. Even G. W. Henry, Provincial Minister of Agricultural has been calling down the U.F.O. He says it stands for "United for Office." Well, perhaps he will find they will be united for his scalp next election. If the residents of the cities wish to corral the farmers up they will have to pay more for their produce and if they can stand it we certainly can.

The play was well staged.

R.N. SCOTT, Smith.

VESSEL ARRIVES AT ARCHANGEL

Economia, Russia, April 4.—One of the most herculean tasks in the supply of the North Russian Expeditionary Force with much needed war material was accomplished on Tuesday with the arrival at Economia, which is the winter port of Archangel, of the largest vessel which ever passed successfully through the thick ice floes of the White Sea.

Escorted by three ice-breakers a 5,000 ton British freight vessel has arrived here, only slightly damaged after a difficult three weeks' voyage from Murman. Several times the vessel was hemmed in where the ice drifts piled high. At one spot it was stuck in the ice floes for nearly a week, but the ice breakers finally succeeded in smashing a path ahead for it.

GERALDINE FARRAR in "SHADOWS"
(Goldwyn Pictures)

Grand Opera House, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Matinee daily.

Geraldine Farrar's Gowns in "Shadows" The Last Word in Feminine Fashions

Geraldine Farrar's reputation for sartorial splendor is such that she is at her wits' end to outdo herself in each succeeding Goldwyn Picture For she contends that the first duty of a star is to interest her audience no less by her acting than by her appearance.

It is known that the international celebrity never wears the same gown in public twice. After a costume has served its purpose either in opera, on the concert stage or in Goldwyn Pictures it is cast aside. What does Geraldine Farrar do with all the wraps, hats, dresses and accessories she uses once [illegible] more? Everything goes to [illegible] Women's War Relief at monthly intervals. Sold to actresses at a fraction of their cost, the proceeds are devoted to the work of the organization now that the war is over.

In "Shadows," newest of her series of Goldwyn Pictures in which the diva appears at the Grand Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, she wears magnificent apparel.

At the time the play was produced Miss Farrar declared that her costumes were the richest she had ever worn. Thoroughly modern, they voice the last word in feminine fashions. The dresses cannot fail to hold unusual interest for every woman. The pity of it is that the colors of the fabrics cannot be shown.

The gown Miss Farrar wears in the Alaskan episode of "Shadows"—the one with the lavish grape ornamentations—is of cerise chiffon velvet, the garniture being of silver. The costume in which she first appears in the play is of cloth of gold and the draping is unique. At the waist is a cluster of ostrich tips in old blue and crimson. A succession of other striking frocks is seen throughout the play—wonderful laces, some of them of marvelous sheerness, others rich in their design and heavy with ornamentation. Miss Farrar's favorite among all the dresses she wears in this picture is an evening gown of claret velvet with the waist of glittering brilliants and intricate design In fact it is expected always that her first appearance in a new Goldwyn Picture is as much an event from a fashion standpoint as her presentation of a new role at the opera. Everyone wonders what she will wear.

FLO-FLO

John Cort's musical comedy success, "Flo-Flo," at the Grand tonight, fresh from its all year's run at the Cort Theatre, New York, has taken its position as the greatest musical comedy produced in years. With a rattling good story, full of rapid fun, delightful music, special orchestra, stunning gowns, its famous "perfect 36" chorus and a typical John Cort cast of Broadway favorites, it is not to be wondered that its success has been so conspicuous.

"MICKEY" KEEPS THEM ALL MOVING

Synopsis of Great Comedy Drama "Mickey," Featuring Mabel Normand.

At the Grand Opera House Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Matinee Daily.

Mickey had lost her mother and father when she was a bit of a child in a small mining town, and her father's partner, Joe Meadows, had taken it upon himself to bring her up. Her only other relatives are an aunt and some cousins living on Long Island. Mickey grows up a harem-scarem little tomboy—the trial as well as the love of the old man's life. The only mother Mickey has ever known is Minnie, Joe's housekeeper, an old Indian woman, who dutifully cares for her and worships the little impish waif.

Mrs. Drake, Mickey's aunt, is striving to maintain a millionaire establishment with but little or no funds. Her only real asset is her daughter Elsie, whom she is trying to marry off to a man with money. She has Herbert Thornhill in mind, and the engagement is almost closed when the man is called west.

In the west Herbert Thornhill meets Mickey and falls in love with her, despite the evident distrust of Joe Meadows. Joe then decides that it is time Mickey had some women folks to look after her, and so he writes to her aunt, telling her that Mickey owns a gold mine. This is enough for Mrs. Drake, and the girl is urged to come at once to Long Island.

Joe takes here there, and just as he leaves the Drake home for the west, he mentions to her aunt that the gold mine is worthless, and much to his sorrow it has not paid for years. The aunt, greatly disappointed, puts Mickey to work as a servant where the little tomboy gets into all sorts of amusing and pathetic scrapes.

When Herbert thinks he has lost Mickey, he gives up his search and returns to the east. Very soon after he becomes engaged to Elsie. Reggie Drake, the renegade cousin, meantime, makes several unpleasant advances to Mickey, which she repulses.

One evening, during a reception given in honor of Herbert and Elsie, Mickey, the little Cinderella of the household, dresses up in one of Elsie's gowns and escapes downstairs to the ballroom. She does not get very far, however, before her aunt drags her to her room and locks her in. Mickey is greatly surprised on turning around to discover the intoxicated Reggie, who had evidently been shut in out of the way, and forgotten about. In getting away she climbs down the porch into the garden and finds herself face to face with Herbert, who has been watching her escape.

After the renewal of their love, Herbert regrets the proposal to Elsie and the acceptance. His lawyer and friend, Tom Rawlins, notices this, and on his own initiative manages matters perfectly by informing Herbert that his fortune has been swept away. Herbert believes this to be the truth—and then Elsie breaks the engagement.

Reggie, seeing a chance for a good gambling trick, informs Thornhill that if he could get five thousand dollars and place it on his horse he would win back his fortune. Thornhill manages to scrape together the money and the bet is made. Reggie then fixes matters with his jockey to double-cross Herbert by pulling his horse and losing the race. Accidentally Mickey overhears the plans. She realises the full importance of the scheme and plans to take the jockey's place. She is winning the race when the horse stumbles and throws her. The crowds gaze in amazement when they discover that the jockey is Mickey. She is severely hurt but recovers shortly afterwards.

Reggie now presses his suit with more vigor than ever. Out riding with her one day he traps her in an old country house and tries to attack her. Thornhill, who has followed, comes to her rescue, but it is only after a long and furious fight that he succeeds. And after that they are married, and to make matters ideal Rawlins informs Thornhill that his fortune was never really lost after all.

AURELIO BLANQUET REACESH MEXICO TO ASSIST IN REVOLT

Holds the Rank of Field Marshal and Has Lived in New York Past Four Years.

New York, April 4.—Gen. Aurelio Blanquet, Mexican minister of war during the administration of President Victoriane Huerta, and described as second in command to Gen. Felix Diaz, recently reported as having undertaken a revolutionary movement against President Carranza, has arrived safely in Mexico "after a very dangerous trip," according to an announcement made here today by Roberta Gavon, his secretary.

The purpose of Gen. Blanquet's return Mr. Bayon said, was to reorganize the Diaz forces, overthrow the Carranza government, re-establish the constitution of 1857, which, he says was repudiated by Carranza and revoke the alleged confiscatory decrees of the present government.

Gen. Blanquet was accompanied by Gen. Juan Montano, chinef of staff; Gen. Enrique Gonzales, chief of artillery; Col. Francisco Traslosheros, judge advocate: Col. Luis Acosta, Capt. Guillermo Rosa, and two other Mexican officers of the old federal army, according to Gayon.

Sails From West Indies.

The party sailed from a port in the West Indies for Mexico March 14, on the motor sloop La Providencia, and successfully eluded the Mexican gunboat Zaragosa and two smaller patrol boats, which they learned had been sent out to apprehend them. Mr. Gayon stated. The party landed at a desolate point of the coast of Vera Cruz and were met by the forces of Gen. Diaz and escorted to his headquarters at Tepatlaxco.

Acting Secretary Frank Polk of the state department has been advised of Gen. Blanquet's safe arrival and the purpose of his visit.

Gen. Blanquet, who is 70 years old and holds the rank of field marshal in the Mexican army, has been living in New York with his family for the last four years. He sailed for Havana, Cuba, from this port Jan. 8. Gayon said that he understands that the motor sloop, which registers less than 100 tons, also carried some munitions, but that they were not obtained in this country.

Gen. Diaz, according ot Bayon, has 40,000 troops scattered throughout fifteen of the twenty-seven states of Mexico.

Mr. Gayon stated that the Diaz forces now control three ports, Tonola, Tuxpan and Nautia.

Yarmouth Express Derailed Today

REPORTED THAT NO LIVES ARE LOST BUT SEVERAL SUSTAIN INJURIES.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Halifax, N. S., April 5.—The Yarmouth Express of the Domnilon Atlantic Railway, which left Halifax at seven o'clock, was derailed just east of the Hantsport station. First reports are that no one has been killed, but that several have been injured, including the baggage master, Cecil Pence, of Halifax, who has both legs and several ribs broken.

Assisting Heredity.

A man's instincts, intuitions, sensations and perceptions, and especially his habits, are changed, improved and made to overcome his hereditary tendencies by the proper training of the muscles. With the impressions shot into the other senses, mentally and physically, impressions of the corrective, helpful, improving sort, there is no reason in the world why the hereditary nature of certain weak or unstable individuals cannot be aided and lifted out of their possibly unhappy state.

Fellow-Feeling.

As a well-known Scottish divine was entering a car he noticed that some of the passengers were trying to eject a drunken man. The minister promptly interposed in his behalf and soothed him into respectability for the rest of his journey. Before leaving, however, the disturber again muttered angry words to the other passengers; then, seizing the reverend doctor's hands, he exclaimed: "Good day my fren'; I see you ken what it is to be drunk!"

New Note in Street Music.

A new note in street music is struck in the Strand, where a performer on a piano-organ exhibits a placard stating that he is an ex-convict who has done four years. There are also statements as to police supervision and the instrumentalist's desire to do well: and, as a guarantee of good faith, the placard concludes with the address of his firm of solicitors and of his medical attendant.—London Chronicle.

Chinese Influence in Hawaii.

The Chinese first planted sugarcane at the "Crossroads of the Pacific" and manufactured sugar, and when the Hawaiians began to cease the cultivation of taro it was the Chinese who became the taro planters and the makers of poi—the staff of life of the native Hawaiian.

Some Should Be Broken.

"These talking machines at $59.95," advertises a Chicago music house, "break all records." After listening to some records one simply can't shake off the conviction that there cannot be too many such machines in constant use.—Springfield Union.

In Both Senses.

When we see a man on the opposite side of the street who owes us a dollar we wish he'd come across.—Boston Transcript.

Merry Meat Man.

Sign in butcher's shop, attached to a pig's tail: "This Is the End of Our Pork This Week."—Boston Transcript.

Optimistic Thought.

It is honorable to be accused by those who deserve to be accused.

The probabilities are now that the Schleswig territory formerly belonging to Denmark will be returned.

Women to Sit in House of Lords

THIS IS PROVIDED IN THE BRITISH EMANCIPATION BILL.

London, April 4.—The second reading of the womens' emancipation bill was moved in the House of Commons today by William Adamson, chairman of the Labor party and leader of the Opposition. Mr. Adamson explained that the object of the bill was to remove certain restrictions and disabilities still imposed upon women, entitled them to hold certain civil and judicial appointments and removed the disqualification which prevented women from sittin gand voting in the House of Lords. The measure, he said, would give effect to the political and legal equality of men and women.

The bill is fathered by the Labor party.

The opinion is expressed by a responsible British authority that the Peace treaty will be ready for signing by Wednesday next.

Illustrations Numbers 1 and 2, show in an enlarged way the difference in globules before (2) and after (1) being "cracked up" by the Chalmers Hot Spot.

How the Hot Spot Makes Chalmers One of the Few Great Cars

Unless food is thoroughly chewed up before it reaches the stomach there is liable to be indigestion.

The Hot Spot in the Chalmers prevents this. For it "cracks up" and heats the gas.

As soon as it strikes the Hot Spot gas is "pulverized" into a most minute "vapor powder."

Engineers call this "dry gas."

Then the gas is passed quickly through the Ram's-horn which equally distributes the gas among six cylinders and makes it arrive at each cylinder at exactly the same time and travel the same distance.

Which means not only more power from less gas, but hitting on all six all the time, amazing ease in starting on a cold day, less friction, less vibration, and hence a cool running engine on a red hot day.

To miss a demonstration in a Chalmers nowadays before purchasing a car—no matter what price you pay—is to miss an experience worth making a day's march to find.

HIGHEST EGG RETURNS

Secure These by Hatching Your Chicks Early.

Not Every Farmer Should Plant an Apple Orchard—Only Those Who Understand the Business and Wish to Specialize — The Small Orchard Is Usually Not Profitable.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

THE early hatched pullets are usually the best winter layers. Pullets hatched during the first three weeks of April not only lay from two to three dozen more eggs during the year but lay many more eggs during the winter. The average pullet begins laying at an age of six and one-half to seven months; the later hatched ones are slower to mature than those hatched early. To be sure your chickens will be hatched early an incubator is almost a necessity. The later the hens begin to lay, generally the later they become broody.

An incubator is a machine and responds to treatment the same as any other machine. It is not difficult to handle but it can not supply its own oil for heat or keep itself clean, nor yet can it supply the little chicks inside the eggs with good pure air unless the room in which the incubator is placed has good air.

The room in which the machine is run should be clean and well ventilated. If you can sleep in the room comfortably it is good enough. Usually a cellar is the best place because the temperature is more even and the machine is therefore easier to regulate as to heat. The incubator should be clean; especially is this true of the interior of the machine. It is advisable to brush out the machine as clean as you can, then wash it out with water and soap and lastly disinfect it. Perhaps one of the easiest materials to use is the common tarry compounds that are used about the stables. Just spray or wash the machine thoroughly after each hatch. It does not take much time and saves a lot of trouble with the chicks. With some types of machines having cloth tops in the hatching chamber it is wise to remove the old cloth each season and replace it with a new piece.

Be sure and test the thermometer. Take it into a drug store and the druggist will test it for you alongside one of known accuracy. Many hatches are lost through bad thermometers.

Get only clean eggs and of good size or set the kind of eggs you want the pullets to lay. Be sure your hands are clean when you turn the eggs. Oily or dirty hands lower the hatch. Do not keep the oil can in the same room as the incubator.

When chicks hatch do not feed them before they are at least forty-eight hours old. Should they pant inside the machine open the door a little. Give them plenty of air.—Prof. W. R. Graham, O. A. College, Guelph.

Who Should Plant an Apple Orchard.

The apple growing industry of the future in Ontario will be developed by men who like the work, and who have the perseverance and intelligence to meet the problems encountered. The necessary practice and experience can be acquired as one goes along, and the difficulties of financing the business can be overcome by starting in a small way, or by putting one's time on other crops while the orchard is growing. The men who should not undertake apple growing are those who do not like the work, and those who from lack of experience and knowledge expect to find in it phenomenal profits. The apple industry offers perhaps as good opportunities for profit as are to be found in any other line of agriculture or horticulture, but is at the same time no more profitable, on an average, than any other well-managed business; neither should encouragement be offered to land speculators, many of whom in the past put out misleading information as to profits to be made. The success of the industry will depend on, 1st, the man; 2nd, his local and farm condition. A man who understands orchard work and has a liking for it can make a success of apple orcharding as a side-line in general farming, in stock farming, or in dairying, although it may be pointed out that many dairy farmers find it does not pay to neglect their herds in order to care for a orchard. Orchards below five acres in size are likely to receive very little attention on most farms, and farmers who wish to develop apple orchards as a profitable side-line should plant not less than ten acres if possible. Orchards ranging in size from ten to twenty-five acres can be conducted as profitable side-lines on many farms.

The commercial apple growing industry is developing along two lines. There are now to be found quite a number of orchards ranging in size from forty acres up to one hundred and twenty-five, or larger. These constitute highly specialized businesses and are sound economic propositions provided one is so situated as to have the extra labor required at picking time. The chief difficulty with an orchard of this class is that a great deal of help is required at certain periods of the year, while at other periods there is little or no work to be done. The problem, therefore, becomes one of adjusting apple orcharding to other lines of production, so as to equalize the distribution of labor throughout the year. It would appear that an excellent system of diversification could be worked out by using strawberries, raspberries, currants and gooseberries along with apples or other tree fruits, excepting cherries. Cherries conflict in picking season with the small fruits, but can be handled along with apples unless strawberries and raspberries are preferred. — Prof. J. W. Crow, O. A. College, Guelph.

Use Your Knowledge.

It is a self-evident fact that the people who know the most do not always accomplish the most. And that is because many do not know how to use their knowledge. It is like gold buried in the ground instead of being invested and bearing a good interest. Do not trust for your success to knowing things, for it depends instead on your knowing how to use what you know.

Signs of Mourning.

In Italy the women wear white garments to show their grief, and the men clothes of brown hue. In China white is used for mourning by both sexes. In Turkey, Syria, Cappadocia and Armenia celestial blue is the usual tint. In Egypt yellowish brown, the hue of the dead leaf, is deemed proper; and in Ethiopia the natives wear gray as the emblem of mourning.

Stone for Rosaries.

The rosaries sold at Kandahar are extensively manufactured from soft, crystallized silicate of magnesia. This is quarried from a hill about thirty miles northwest of the city, where soapstone and antimony are also obtained in considerable abundance. The stone varies in color from a light yellow to a bluish white, and is generally opaque.

Chinese as Rice Growers.

The Chinese introduced rice culture to Hawaii, and they are still the chief rice growers of the islands. They first planted sugar cane at the "Crossroads of the Pacific" and manufactured sugar, and when the Hawaiians began to cease the cultivation of taro it was the Chinese who became the taro planters.

Vital Statistics of Japan.

According to statistics recently published the population of Japan proper on December 31, 1917, was 57,[illegible]8,373, distributed among 10,241,831 dwellings or 5.7 per cent habitation. Compared with the census of 1916, a growth in population of 7[illegible]0,008 is seen. This rate of increase exceeds 14 per cent.

To Grant License Despite Objection

At a meeting of the Finance Committee held last night a letter from the Trades and Labor Council protesting against a revival of the license to Yeotes' Brothers was read.

Unjust Request

Alderman Hamilton thought the request of the Trades Council unjust in view of the fact that Mr. Gordon had appeared before the council some time ago and explained the circumstances in connection with the two convictions against this firm as a result of which objection was taken to reviving their license.

Alderman Phelan was in accord with Alderman Hamilton's opinion in this matter and several members of the committee stated that as far as they knew Yeotes Bros. had always carried on a respectable business in the city.

Take no Action

Upon motion of Alderman Phelan and Hamilton no action was taken in connection with the Trades Council's request.

Successful Afternoon Tea.

On Saturday afternoon the Scout Room (Mr. W. Casement's empty store), was taxed to its utmost when the Sunbeam Mission Band of the Presbyterian church held an afternoon tea there. The room was very prettily decorated with pictures, flags and flowers, showing many hours' work. The window showed great promise of provisions with its display of cakes and candy. Home made pork and beans was one of the great attractions. The fancy work and home made cooking, both in charge of Misses H. Preston and M. Charlton, looked very inviting. The candy table showed how it was appreciated by the many buyers which thronged around it during the afternoon. This table was in charge of Miss Helen Burgess. Miss Isabell Johnson had a very busy time at the fishpond. The fish seemed to be in great demand. The miscellaneous table also did a good business and Miss Mary Tanner made an adept saleslady. Mrs. (Rev.) Juil made a splendid convenor for the refreshment tables. She was ably assisted by Misses Iva Hendren, Beatrice Johnston, Mildred Bailey, Jean Ridpath and Hurtha Preston.

Farewell Smoker.

A farewell smoker was given in honor of Mr. D. H. Morrison by the Lakefield Curling Club in the Foresters' Hall in Friday evening. The Lakefield business men were also guests for the evening. After the progressive euchre, of which Mr. W. J. Charlton was the winner and Messrs. J. Ridpath and J. M. Simpson the winners of the consolation prizes, which were in the form of cigars, hints for them to brighten up, Mr. Thompson Braden on behalf of the club presented Mr. Morrison with a beautiful case of pipes, for which Mr Morrison thanked the society in a few well chosen words, also expressing his regret at having to leave the village where he had made such good friends. After the bountiful repast, which was supplied by the curlers, toasts were drunk and addresses given by the followings: Mr. G. B. Hilliard, Dr. J. R. Fraser, Mr. W. H. Casement, Father Meagher and Mr. C. Thompson.

The pleasant evening was broken up in the early hours of the morning.

NEARING END OF ITS WORK

HAS BETWEEN EIGHT AND NINE MILLIONS ON HAND—EXPENDITURE DECREASING.

Ottawa, April 5. Sir Herbert Ames stated to the Pensions Committee of Parliament that the Canadian Patriotic Fund had between eight and nine million dollars on hand The present expenditure is $750,000 per month, which is decreasing monthly by about ten per cent.

In view of the fact that the Patriotic Fund is nearing the end of its work Sir Herbert made a plea for consideration for the widows of Imperial, French, Italian and Belgian reservists who had gone over to fight for the allies. He said there were probably fewer than five hundred of these, and $175,000 a year would take care of them all.

He said there was no outlook for these women and their families—many of whom were Canadians, and almost all of whom had come to Canada to live before the war began—except starvation when the Patriotic Fund went out of business. The pensions of these reservists were totally insufficient to keep them in Canada.

Sir Herbert indicated that the funds of the Patriotic Fund which would be left might be invested in some way, and the income made available to take care of special cases thta would not be covered by the Pensions Act.

ALD. MURRAY HAS DECIDED TO GIVE UP HIS POSITION

Ill Health Prevents Him From Giving Proper Attention to Duties—Will Return to Scotland.

Ald. Alex. Murray has advertised his house and furniture for sale and will resign his municipal office on account of his health, which shows no sign of improving. Once his affairs are disposed of he and Mrs. Murray will leave for Scotland, where they will make their home with their only son. Ald. Murray will attend the meeting of the Council tonight, if his health permits, but that will be his last appearance in that capacity. He believes that any man elected to office should give the public the best that is in him, and this he is unable to do on account of his failing health.

ALEX. MURRAY

Ald. Murray has by no means had smooth sailing since his election at the beginning of the year. He stood fifth on the list of successful candidates, and was therefore entitled to a two-year term in the Council. It was found, however, that there was a trifling technicality between him and the office, and he refused to qualify until this disability was removed and not the slightest legal objection remained.

Ald. Murray has been a resident of Peterborough for the past seven and a half years, coming here direct from England. He is a native of Lankashire, Scotland, where he was employed for years in the collieries, rising to the position which is there called an engineerwright, the duties of which are the care of all the mining machinery. Since coming to this city he has been, with the exception of a short time, in the employe of the C. G. E., and has been from the beginning of his services one of the most competent and trusted members of the staff. When a board of conciliation was appointed to adjust industrial conditons in that institution. Mr. Murray was the unanimous choice of the company and men alike to act with one of the officials in classifying the men He was appointed a member of the Fuel Commission and gave the public good service in that capacity, resigning the position when it was proposed to nominate him for the Council.

Seven years ago Ald. Murray organized the Co-operative Assocciation here, of which he is president. He had been accustomed to that method of doing business in Scotland, and never lost faith in the principles of co-operation, which he regarded as the solution of the cost of living problem. The movement has made steady progress here from the date of its inception.

Ill-health prevented Ald. Murray's steady attendance at the Council, but he did enough to indicate the probability that he would have made one of the most useful members of the Board. The Council can appoint a successor to Ald. Murray, as the city is now under the general vote plan. If the ward system were in vogue an election would be necessary.

Ald. Murray's son, with whom he will make his home in Scotland, was a former resident of Peterborough, but preferred and returned to his native land. He is now in the military service in France, where he has been on active duty since the beginning of hostilities, and where it is certain his father, too, would have been had he not been debarred by age.

PEACE TREATY TO BE READY FOR SIGNATURES BY EASTER

Lloyd George Says That Germany and Her Allies Must Pay to the Limit For the Crimes Committed Against Humanity—Allies Have Reached an Agreement.

Paris, April 7.—The preliminary Peale Treaty will be ready by Easter and the Germans will be asked to come and sign it at the end of April or the beginning of May, Premier Lloyd George of Great Britain declared in an interview today with Stephane Lauzanne, editor of Martin.

In answer to a remark by Lauzanne that what troubled public opinion was not so much the delay as the secrecy in which the peace negotiations were wrapped and the fear that there was some divergence of opinion. the British Premier said:

"I affirm absolutely that there is no divergence among the negotiators. They are often confronted with technical difficulties which can only be settled after close study. Take the question of reparations. In substance the allies have one common principle, which I once set forth thus: 'Germany must pay up to the last farthing of her power.'

"But is it sufficient to draw up a bill and hand it to the enemy? Must we not require guarantees, and must we not study? Study the terms, methods and forms of delayed payments? Must we not be able to say to our adversary when he pleads inadequacy of resources: 'Yes, you can go as far as that, and you must do it and you must do that.' In a word, shall we simply present a bill or collect the money, all the money possible? Well, that is how the work comes in slow and difficult work, complicated by the fact that technical experts of the highest capabilities and greatest experience are not in agreement among themselves either as to the method of liquidation or as to the assets to be realized.

Experts at Odds.

"No, there is no divergence among the negotiations, but, alas, there are inevitable ones among the experts, often among those from the same country. Who is to decide between them if not the negotiators, and do you think it can always be done quickly?"

M. Lauzanne remarked that what public opinion could not understand was why, before everything, Germany was not handed a full bill, no matter what amount, and forced to admit full liability.

"And who says we shall not do so," cried Premier Lloyd George; "who says we have not decided that?"

"No one," the interviewer interrupted, "has said that you have decided it."

The British Premier resumed: "Cannot the people wait until we have finished our work, instead of always wanting to judge our intentions. This Conference had to meet and discuss things under conditions unprecedented in history. All railways are turned toward it, and, what is more grave, all ears are glued at its keyhole. Enemy ears tremble with joy when they detect some hesitation. Friendly ears half hear confused rumors, which are peddled far and quickly."

HUNGARY READY FOR CONFERENCE

ACCEPTS OFFER OF ENTENTE AS RECOGNITION OF SOVIET REGIME

(Canadian Press Despatch).

Budapest, April 7.—The Hungarian Government has proposed to General Jan Christian Smuts, who was sent here by the Peace Conference at Paris, that a conference be held at Vienna or Prague between representatives of the Czecho-Slovakia, Rumania, German-Austria Hungary and Jugo-Slavia regarding boundaries and economic questions.

Bela Kun the Hungarian Minister, in discussing the situation today said:

"This is the first time the Entente has sent us a diplomatic mission. This is proof that the Soviet Government is the first strong regime since the November revolution. There is not the least sign that the Entente wishes to undertake military operations against us. General Smuts has been received in a friendly spirit and the proposition for a conference concerning the boundaries has been submitted to him."

AUTO LICENSE WAS YEAR OLD

BUT MR. MANN WAS ON WAY TO PURCHASE NEW ONE.

Allan B. Mann, a prominent farmer of Bridgenorth, appeared in police court this morning charged with having driven his car down Charlotte street a few days ago with a 1918 auto license board displayed.

Mr. Mann stated that he did not consider himself guilty of a breach of the law in the true sense of the word as his car had never been out of the garage until the day the police mentioned in their charge, and he had come to the city upon that occasion with the intention of buying an auto license. He was unable to do so that night for some reason, and returned next morning and made the purchase.

Magistrate Dumble replied that the young man's excuse was not sufficient and imposed a fine of $5 and costs, which amounted to $8.10 in all.

JOINT MEETING DECLARES FOR GOVERNMENT ROADS

Resolution Adopted in Favor of Better Highways Will Be Forwarded to Department —Addresses by Prominent Citizens

At a meeting held in the Council chamber on Saturday afternoon at which were representatives from the County Council, Board of Works of the City Council, Board of Trade and Automobile association a resolution which is published below, was passed favoring the County Good Road System:

Moved by R. B. Rogers and William Madill, and resolved "That this meeting of representative citizens of the County and city of Peterborough endorse the Government Good Roads System for the County of Peterborough, and that a copy of this resolution be sent to the County Council at its next meeting."

Saturday afternoon's meeting was called as the result of a consultation between Chairman Phelan of the Board of Works and Warden McIntosh of the County of Peterborough for the purpose of discussing the question of improved highways for this County.

Amongst those who expressed views upon the matter were Mayor Duncan, W. H. Bradburn, Reeve Anderson. who occupied the chair; Warden McIntosh, G. A Gillespie, M. L A; W R. Breyfogle. H. O. Fisk, C.E. Canfield Deputy Reeve Fred Wilson, of North Monaghan; William Madill. Alderman Edgar. E. B. Fowler. R B Rogers Jas. Thompson, M.L.A.; B. D. Hall, Alderman Phelan. G. O. Cameron, Councillor Fred Eason, of Otonabee. and J. Sergeant.

Deputy Reeve Wilson, in referring to the requisition made that the Government make the Port Hope road a provincial highway suggested that the route designated be the River road, which would come out at Fraserville and follow along from there by the route originally considered. It had been thought that the gravel road to Fraserville should be followed, but Mr. Wilson pointed out that by adopting his suggestion they would obtain the co-operation of South Monaghan.

He was also of the opinion that the Legislature should make it possible for two townships to unite and obtain good roads instead of four as is the case at present.

In the past ten years Deputy Reeve Wilson opined that the County of Peterborough had lost the advantage of $150,000 of Government money as a result of not having become identified with the Good Roads Movement.

Mr. H. O. Fisk drew attention to some of the advantages which would follow should the Legislature accede to the request of the organizations in favor of better roads and include the Port Hope-Peterborough road in their Provincial Highway System.

W. H. Bradburn made the statement that 53 per cent of the automobiles owned in this county belonged to farmers and recounted some of the benefits they would receive from a better road system.

Warden McIntosh and Reeve Anderson of Otonabee, stated that their respective townships were generally in favor of some improved road system.

James Thompson. M.L.A., in his address stated that he had written to some 33 or 34 county clerks of the Province of Ontario and asked them for an expression of their opinion of the Good Road's System. Everyone of them had replied to the effect that it was affording the greatest satisfaction to their counties.

Several representatives of the northern townships were present during the early stages of the meeting, but left before it was far advanced.

There was a misunderstanding in regard to the time set for the meeting, the rural representatives going by the old time and the city members appearing at the time set as recorded by the daylight saving time-pieces.

WHERE CHILDREN ARE AT PREMIUM

NONE BUT PARENTS CAN SECURE ROOMS IN DETROIT APARTMENT

Detroit, Mich., April 7.—Plans for a $600,000 apartment house, in which no family without children will be accepted as tenants, are under way by the Michigan Methodist Centenary Club here. The apartment will be located at Grand River and Sixth Avenues, and will include a completely equipped playground on the roof.

"An apartment in the heart of a crowded city is not the best place to rear children," said Dr. John G. Benson, Executive Secretary of Detroit Area. "Anyone will admit that, but there are thousands of families whose circumstances force them to live in such places. Transportation facilities in Detroit and these circumstances most materially, for it is almost impossible for an average family to go out any considerable distance from the centre of the city because of the lack of transportation.

Dr. Benson further stated that the opposition of most owners of apartment building to lease suites to families who have children will assure immediate success of the new plan. In fact, there will be a premium on children instead of a discount.

From such news as reached Berlin, however, it seems probable that the Soviet government has not yet been proclaimed in any way that can be regarded as official or binding.

ALD. HAMILTON AND CENSORSHIP.

ALD. HAMILTON has proved his worth as a private citizen, as a member of the Board of Trade, and as a city official, even if his experience as an alderman has been comparatively brief. No one who knows him or who has watched his public career so far doubts for a moment his enthusiasm for the promotion of the best interests of the city.

But Ald. Hamilton should abandon the idea which he seems to cherish with regard to the authority of the City Council over private interests. At the meeting of the Board of Works Friday night he made a move to appoint an official censor to overhaul the reports prepared by the newspapermen in attendance, lest anything concerning the building of the Hunter street bridge calculated to interfere with that project might appear in print. His suggestion was that the city clerk be appointed chief censor to head off anything in the way of indiscretion on the part of the reporters. But the city clerk protested, and nothing came of the move that smacked somewhat of Prussianism.

Ald. Hamilton should know that the City Council, august body though it may be, has no more right to appoint a censor over the newspapers of the city, or in any other way to circumscribe their rights, than it has to butt into the purely private affairs of the concern with which Ald. Hamilton is connected in private life. The press is assured of freedom. The newspapers can be trusted to safeguard the interests of the city just as zealously as any member of the Council or any city official. The newspapers have just as much at stake as any other constituent whom Ald. Hamilton has been chosen to represent.

THE OPPORTUNITY OF THE WEST.

IT IS WITHIN the memory of the living when Ontario was bare of manufacturing industries and when the farmers were depending upon one branch of industry just as the agriculturists of the western provinces are today. And now Ontario could practically surround herself with a Chinese wall and live independently of the rest of the world, relying entirely upon her own resources and lacking for none of the fruits of the earth except a few that are produced only in tropical climates. Ontario's manufactures are equal to any to be found in the world, and with the farmers their business is expanding yearly and becoming more and more of a science.

The Ontario farmer is not depending upon one particular crop nor upon the foreign market, which is open to the competition of the world regardless of labor or other conditions which regulate the cost of production. Mixed farming has been developed in this province, and is still being expanded. The home market has been and still is the Ontario farmer's best outlook. A home market is impossible without an urban population, and such a population canot exist without the industries that are fostered by the protective tariff.

The West is passing through the same stages of development that proved so crucial in the case of Ontario some time ago. It cannot be said that in the prarie provinces agriculture is still a safe venture. The same risk exists in all lines of industry where the hope of success is pinned to one particular branch. If the wheat crop fails, the result is disaster and hardship, especially for those who are in the early stages of pioneer life. Even with a good crop there is the problem of transportation and the price uncertainty. A market three or four thousand miles away is, after all, in any case pretty much of a gamble.

There is nothing on earth to prevent the farmers of the West from expanding their industry just as their fellow farmers in Ontario have done. The four prairie provinces have diversity enough, both as to soil and climate—more so than has Ontario—to produce everything that the people require, and such development means a steady increase in the population. Protection is just as essential for the West today as it was for Ontario in those lean and uncertain years prior to 1878. The timber required to build the towns and cities of the West grows in abundance in British Columbia, and there is none better anywhere on the western coast of the American continent. There is undeveloped water power sufficient for manufacturing purposes. The binders used to cut the western wheat crop, in fact all the machinery used to cultivate the western farms, should be made in the West. The farmer has a chance to get back every dollar he spends with the home manufacturer, a chance which is denied him if he sends his money out of the country. A short crop of wheat does not mean a year of hard times if he raises produce for the home market.

Is the western farmer content to go on as he is? Why should he aim to build up a foreign country at the expense of his own, while at the same time he participates in the lack of expansion?

REPATRIATION WORK.

AN EDITORIAL in the American Magazine, "Industrial Management," speaking upon the value of community labor boards as operated in the United States, says: "It may be that some day we will recognize a community labor board as one of our most potent factors in developing, improving and stabilizing the relation between employers and employes." The community labor boards have an opportunity to advise in regard to all local industrial mattess, except rates of pay and grievances.

As they are of the community, which is composed of both employers and employes, they are in intimate contact with local conditons and needs, and if their activities are properly administered they will be a powerful creative force, making sure on the one hand that the conditions surrounding the workers are proper, and on the other that the problems of management are duly considered.

In Canada, the equivalent to community labor boards is the advisory committees of employers and employed, suggested by the plans of the Repatriation Committee, which, appointed in each district, work in conjunction with the Government employment bureaux. Their duties, as defined in the handbook of the Repatriation Committee, should be to keep in touch with the superintendents of local employment offices and to give advice regarding conditions, lacol demands, labor disputes, etc., in fact, they would be the interpreters to the employment official of local feeling and general conditions which have a direct bearing upon labor turnover and fluctuations.

All that has been said with regard to the American boards as to their value to the community generally may well be applied to these Canadian committees, and it is up to each individual in the community who has an interest in questions affecting the labor market, to take an interest in the work of the committee and to see that it functions along the right lines. Taken in the right spirit, these local committees, working harmoniously with the employment offices, should be the beginning of a better spirit of community team work that will grow and spread for the benefit of the entire country.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

LINDSAY CRAWFORD says it is up to the Liberal party to save the country. In the meantime, where is Mr. Crawford to find such a party?

• • • • •

FOR THAT LIBERAL convention it will require a searchlight on the roof rather than a candle in the window, to call the wanderers home again.

THE GLOBE says that in the Peace Conference Lloyd George is backing President Wilson with might and main. Why not reverse the order and accord the British Premier the honor of leadership?

• • • • •

GORDON WALDRON says he can forgive the Liberal Unionists, but cannot forget. What's the use of trying to make peace with a man who, when he buries the war hatchet, leaves the handle sticking out of the ground?

• • • • •

THE EDITOR of one of the papers in London, Ont., attended a labor meeting, evidently for the first time, recently, and was surprised to find the audience rather above the average in attendance. The pity of it is that that editor did not start attending such meetings years ago, as he seems to have been the victim of a delusion that was easily removed.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

CLEMENCEAU AND WILSON.

(New York Globe.)

We at home may take comfort from our realization that even if the clash between Wilson and Clemenceau were all that the newspaper men declare it is, it could have little effect upon the relation between France and America. Premiers and presidents move across the stage, but nations endure; and a friendship such as exists between the French and ourselves is not to be shattered by a breath.

NOT MUCH TO LOSE.

(Carthage Press.)

We cannot see why the farmers say the daylight saving plan works to their disadvantage since it has always been understood that they work twenty-two out of the twenty-four hours, anywey.

THOSE DRY SENATORS.

(Ottawa Journal.)

The prohibitionists are said to be afraid of the attitude of the Senate, which to them seems composed of a lot of hardened old sinners with an occasional thirst.

ONE GOOD RESULT.

(Ottawa Journal.)

Still, if we're going to have two times in Canada this summer, some of us may work it once or twice as an excuse for being late.

LAST OF A BAD LOT.

(Baltimore American.)

Bolshevism is about the only thing that now bears the made-in-Germany mark.

SPREAD ANGUISH AND TERROR.

(New York World.)

Germany's long range guns were not nearly so effective on Paris as some of Foch's long range ultimatums have been on Berlin.

TOPSY-TURVEYDOM.

(Buffalo Express.)

Bank president in Budapest have become figureheads, while soviet clerks administer the business. Rents no longer are paid to landlords, but to the government, which is represented by the janitors. The heads of factories have been replaced by those elected by the workmen. No one is allowed to draw more than $100 from a bank, except in payment of salaries. A check is honored on condition that the trustees of the institution drawn it are shown to be employes. It would be all as comical as anything in comic opera if it were not so devilishly tragic.

HUMOR OF THE COUNTRY.

(Farm and Home.)

A young London clerk, who held rather fanciful views as to his origin, spent his holidays at a farmhouse, the principal attraction being the golf links near by. He greatly annoyed the other boarders by his constant reference to what he called his "pedigree" and "family tree." At last the farmer could stand it no longer. "Young man," he said, "I must say you've done a heap o' talking about yer family tree. Anybody would think you owned a whole timber yard. Come out into the lane a minute." The youth accompanied him. Pausing by a weeping willow, the farmer said, "I want you to take partic'lar notice of this." "What for?" "That's our family tree. That's what heightened our ideals and stimmylated our energies. That has furnished switches for five generations of us."

POLICING RUSSIA.

(Philadelphia Record.)

Certainly we are anxious to establish popular government in Russia, but we cannot do that unless the Russians do all in their power to emancipate themselves. You cannot help a man much unless he will help himself. The Russian people are doing little or nothing. If their vast country has got to be policed, the work properly belongs to its neighbors.

THE WAR ON THE TARIFF

(Montreal Gazette.)

This is not a tale of a Texas petroleum prospect and a promoter but of an attempt to join certain political forces by putting them asunder. The scheme hatched not many months ago is to unite the farmers and the laboring men, in an assault upon the Government. There was of old a party slogan, "no taxation without representation," and that has now been changed to read "representation without taxation." The tariff is to be abolished, not all at once, but by fairly rapid degrees. British products are to be admitted into Canada forthwith at half the rates of duty levied upon foreign goods, and this half-way measure is to be gradually reduced until in five years British products will have free entry into the Canadian market. Concurrently, duties under the general tariff are to be revised in the interest of farmers, so that they may escape taxation, incidental or direct on articles they use or consume. The table being thus set, workingmen are invited to enter and enjoy the delight of free food, free clothing, free tools; in a word, to gather grapes of thorns and figs of thistles.

Now whatever force there may be in the appeal to farmers to break down the tariff in order to obtain cheap foreign commodities, it is not an appeal that will persuade artisans and laborers. The very existence of the latter class depends upon industrial stability, upon mill and factory employment. Tariff protection may as surely create a home industry, as war causes the erection of stores of munition plants in Canada, and the removal of tariff protection will as certainly deprive men of employment as the cessation of war has thrown thousands out of work. Workingmen in cities and towns want more, not fewer industries, want to produce with their own hands the goods consumed by the farmer, and do not desire their occupation to be transferred to the labor of other lands. The fact is agriculture and industry are handmaidens. They have interests in common. One is the complement of the other. The farmer grows the food which nourishes the artisan and the artisan fabricates the wares the farmer requires. The closer the two are brought together the better for both. Each is indispensable to the other. Of all markets, the home market is the most profitable, and for many products of the farm is the only one. Not less than 80 per cent of the agricultural output of Canada is consumed in this country 70 per cent of the cereals, still more of live stock, and the whole of the garden truck. The conditions of the farmer rises and falls with that of the urban people so closely are their interests inter-related, and while this fact forms a mutuality of political interest, that interest must be expressed in a recognition of each other's requirements, not by attempting to build up one on the ruin of the other.

Why Printers Made Very Good Soldiers

They were born "Leaders."

They "Stick" to the job.

They adhere to the "Rules."

They are good at "Setting Up" exercises.

They excel when it comes to a "Chase."

They don't take things for granted; they must have "Proof."

They are generally of very good "Form."

If they are taken prisoners it does not phase them. They are used to "Lock Ups."

When the call of battle is sounded they can "Make Ready" very quickly.

They fear not the cold steel, as they are used to "Cuts."

And as "dough boys" they can make excellent "Pi."

BELIEVES IN MOVIES

Hamilton Magistrate Says They Are Equal to Sunday Schools

Hamilton, Ont., April 7.—Police Magistrate Jeffs, believes in movies for kiddies, as long as they are the right sort, and he is against the proposal to have the Legislature raise the age limit under which children are barred from the screen houses.

"I would just as soon see the children going to a good picture show as to Sunday School," he said, "As to suitable pictures that's up to the censor."

NOT SO LONG AGO

In 1898 gasoline sold for six cents a gallon.

The first New York motor car show was held in 1900.

The first 4-cylinder car was brought out in 1900.

In 1896 Barnum and Bailey announced they would exhibit throughout the country a "horseless vehicle."

In July, 1898, the news was given that a plant would be built to turn out "one motor carriage a week."

It is hard to conceive that in 1896 there were but four motor cars in the United States.

The first long-distance tour was made from Cleveland to New York It took from July 28 to Aug. 7.

"In search of a new sensation I went yesterday and rode in a horseless carriage.

"I dreamed once that I walked down Fifth avenue in my pyjamas in the full tide of the afternoon promenade and almost died with shame before I awoke. Yesterday I had something of the same strange feeling as I sat there and felt myself pushed forward into the very face of grinning, staring and sometimes jeering New York."—New York Telegram.

Under proposed measures for U. S. army reorganization there will be an air service with 1,700 airplanes in actual commission.

TO DEVELOP DAIRYING IN CENTRAL B. C.

Vanderhoof, B.C., April 5. Rapid development of the dairy industry of Central British Columbia is promised with the establishment of a government creamery here. The opening of the land settlement area in Neebako Valley and the soldier settlement plans now under way in the Stuart Lake District, have brought the dairying and livestock interests of this valley so forcefully to the notice of the Provincial Department of Agriculture that the Hon. J. D. Barrow, Minister, has promised to establish a co-operative creamery at Vanderhoof, entirely at government expense and under the direction of a government expert. There are some fifty dairy cows in the Stuart Lake District alone, and the number will be more than doubled this season, so that the creamery will furnish an extensive home market and encourage increased production.

The government's strong policy of forcing idle wild lands under cultivation beginning with the two settlement areas of 35,000 acres in the Nochake Valley, and 15,000 acres in the Bulkley Valley, has had an immediate effect in the agricultural and industrial development of the central part of the province. A pulp mill is expected to locate soon in this vicinity, since the timber cleared by incoming settlers is of excellent pulpmaking quality, and the best water power in central British Columbia is available at the four falls of Stony Creek close to here.

Prospecting continues throughout the Nation Lake Country, and an extensive iron field fifty miles south of here, is expected to make Vanderhoof eventually important as a manufacturing centre as well as the centre of the richest agricultural area between Edmonton and Prince Rupert. Development of the iron ore depends, however, upon the location of a smelter either at Vanderhoof or at Prince Rupert, with the prospects in favor of the latter because of its location and ship-building interests.

WANT FEDERAL MONEY.

Victoria, April 7.—A mineral experimental station to inaugurate which a sum of between $150,000 and $200,000 will be required, is one of the matters Hon. William Sloan, minister of mines, is taking up with the Dominion Government when he reaches Ottawa within the next few days. The Federal Government is being asked to provide the money.

Surplus air material is soon to be sold by U.S. Government to private aviators.

SIR ROBERT IMPATIENT

Canadian Premier Speaks at McGill Dinner.

London, April 7.—Premier Borden attended the dinner given in honor of Sir Auckland Geddes, who has accepted the principalship of McGill University.

The Premier after speaking at length on the achievements of the Canadians in the last hundred days of the war, asked: "What of peace? Let us not minimize the difficulties confronting those who are striving to settle its terms. I am not disposed, on the other hand, to criticize those who are impatient of delay. I have more than once given voice to my own impatience. It would be idle to pretend there has been no waste of time. There is great unrest throughout the world and he is an extreme optimist who believes all danger is behind us."

HOW MRS. BOYD AVOIDED AN OPERATION

Canton, Ohio.—"I suffered from a female trouble which caused me much suffering, and two doctors decided that I would have to go through an operation before I could get well.

"My mother, who had been helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, advised me to try it before submitting to an operation. It relieved me from my troubles so I can do my house work without any difficulty. I advise any woman who is afflicted with female troubles to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial and it will do as much for them."—Mrs. MARIE BOYD, 1421 5th St., N. E., Canton, Ohio.

Sometimes there are serious conditions where a hospital operation is the only alternative, but on the other hand so many women have been cured by this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, after doctors have said that an operation was necessary—every woman who wants to avoid an operation should give it a fair trial before submitting to such a trying ordeal.

If complications exist, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for advice. The result of many years experience is at your service.

APRIL.

(By Walt Mason.)

When April comes the welkin hums with cries of human gladness; the winter's past and spring at last has come to can our sadness. The birds return with songs to burn, and frolic in the maples, the farmer sows his oats in rows, and hay and other staples. When blizzards whoop about the coop it's hard to keep on smiling, but April days soothe weary jays, with zephyrs most beguiling. We're tired and worn ere to his hoarse old winter has departed; his snow and sleet have chilled our feet and left as broken hearted. Despair be springs, but April brings a salve for all our bruises; and wintry blast is queered at last, and all the world enthuses. The ancient guy of bleary eye forgets his many winters, and hops along with laugh and song, a caution to all sprinters. The man of aches, whose groaning makes a discord of existence, forgets disease and laps the breeze that comes from some blue distance. The chronic grouch forsakes his couch without a beef or bellow, and throws his hat and kicks the cat and seems a sprightly fellow. Oh, April ends our woe, my friends, the woe that winter bringeth; the smiling gent knows sweet content, and like a dinger dingeth.

FOR SPRING WEAR

Brighter Fabrics Used in After War Designs.

Garments Being Made Fancier, Will Require a Greater Amount of Material Than Formerly.

Following the convention of the National Cloak, Suit and Skirt Manufacturers' association in Cleveland, O., the committee on designs prepared styles for the coming spring which are of great import to the manufacturers of dress and coat fabrics and dealers in trimmings and other accessories. The designs outlined for the coming season were prepared without the necessary wartime thought which called for conservation in every possible way. This means that greater yardage will, in most instances, be consumed, and as the garments are made fancier, getting away from the former straight, plain lines, the additional trimmings needed will result in materially increasing their many unusual touches of color; of such merchandise. For suits, braid will be extensively used. Belts will be quite commonly worn.

"Suits—There is such a variety of suit styles for spring that women will be able to find expression of their own individuality. Smart and youthful are the short, loose-hanging box models.

"Many of these suits are gracefully trimmed with braid, cording or embroidery; others are more simple of outline and are worn with white or bright colored vests or vestees, making a most attractive contrast. One of the predominating features of these tailor-made suits is a graceful, long-rolling collar so fashioned to display smart vestees or blouses, which are so becoming and fascinating. As sport clothes are timely, much dash and smartness is given in novelty belts and partial belts, making an attractive means of fastening. Large pockets and convertible collars add beauty and distinction to this type of garment.

"Skirts—The skirts for spring will be built on youthful lines, not too tight and having the appearance of tapering at the footline. There are many smart, novel cuts that accentuate this effect. These skirts are worn about seven inches from the floor.

"Coats—A new silhouette has made its appearance. This silhouette finds its expression in the dolman coats and capes, which are built on loose-hanging lines, tapering slightly at the bottom.

"Many other new and attractive means of fastening are being displayed, also many new belted effects. The collars are especially noteworthy with their many unusual touches of color, collars that fasten over artistically, scarf collars, shawl collars, each type charming in outline and design."

SMART HAT AND SCARF SET

This smart hat and scarf set is in mauve velvet. Gray and yellow checked velvet forms a striking trimming.

ART OF MIRRORING VELVETS

Mirrored velvet is so much in vogue that a word of explanation as to the home process may be helpful. Any ordinary piece of velvet may be mirrored with the proper care. All that is necessary is a hot iron and a steady hand, for the velvet must be stroked with the iron, on the right side, at regular intervals. The iron must be kept moving quickly and in the same direction, in order to insure a smooth and mirror-like surface. The amateur would do well to practice for a few moments with an old piece of velvet, before attempting to work with her actual materials. The process is not difficult and, if carefully done, will save the extra expense charged for the finished product. Mirrored velvet hats are pretty, when trimmed with chenille or ostrich feather trimming, and a fancy braid of crocheted chenille is another attractive finish in the mirrored out.

ADVERTISE IN THE REVIEW.

ANGLOPHOBIA REVIVES.

Trouble-makers Are Busy in the United States.

They're at it again. The Friends of Irish Freedom some five thousand strong met in Philadelphia recently and declared that a state of war existed between Ireland and England, and they subscribed a million dollars and a half in aid of Ireland. They also called upon President Wilson to insist that Ireland be recognized as a separate nation and given representation at the Peace Conference. The venerable Cardinal Gibbons was the chief speaker, and introduced a resolution, one paragraph of which made reference to Washington's injunction against "entangling alliances." Obviously enough the gathering was alarmed at the prospect of the United States being bound to Great Britain in the League of Nations. One of the speakers, a Dr. Krauskopf, drew a parallel between the sufferings of Ireland and those of the Jewish people, and Dr. James Gratton Myhew, a Protestant Episcopal clergyman of Norfolk, Va., received great applause when he said that if he had to choose between Rome Rule and British Rule he would unhesitatingly select the former. Bishop Michael J. Gallagher, of Detroit, asserted that Lord Northcliffe had admitted that the British Government was spending $150,000,000 on anti-Irish propaganda in the United States. In fact, all the "old stuff" was handed out and vociferously cheered.

The Friends of Irish Freedom appear to be animated less by friendship for Ireland than by hatred of Englnad. If this were not so they would not persistently ignore the great efforts that have been made by the present British Government to arrange a solution of the Irish problem that will do no injustice to any important element of the Irish people. In championing the cause of the Sinn Feiners they forget that the Sinn Feiners in this war were opposing the Allies, including the United States, as openly as they dared; that they hissed and attacked American soldiers and marines when they appeared in the streets, and hooted the Stars and Stripes when displayed in a moving picture theatre because the United States was fighting on the same side as Great Britain. It is dumbfounding to find such a distinguished prelate as Cardinal Gibbons uttering and approving such sentiments as were expressed at the Philadelphia meeting. Nobody expects anything better from agitators and pro-Germans like Judge Cohalan, and yet it was Cardinal Gibbons who read a resolution containing this passage: "Even if conquest be acknowledged as giving one people the right to rule another, England has forfeited that right by centuries of continuous misgovernment and injustice, which are practicesd by the English Government to-day as relentlessly as at any time in the past, and in utter disregard of the opinions, protests and wishes of the Irish people."

Spoofs at Ships' Names.

The nomenclature of ships varies with the nations involved. A writer in the New Statesman (London) suggests a new scheme for England, writing with tongue in cheek:

"A man told me the other day that in Erasmus' lifetime there were two ships in the British navy named after the sage. This illustrates the gulf between two ages as forcibly as anything could, and the absence, four centuries ago, of those closed compartments that make modern society so sectarian. To-day it would be unimaginable.

"It is true that the French, who habitually pay more official respect to learning and letters than we do, have called a battleship Victor Hugo, and that the Italians have run to a Dante Aligheiri. But those great men were dead before it happened, and in this country even the dead are out of the question. The law of closed compartments operates; you can have a ship called after a dead sailor, but you cannot have H.M.S. Shakespeare.

"I wish our old custom could be revived. When you read an account now of a naval occasion you read something like:

"'The fleet left harbor at dawn on Tuesday morning, under the command of Admiral Sir John Bilgewater in the flagship Rattenberg. It consisted of the battleships Incorrigible, Unspeakable, Indescribable, Inconceivable, Horrible and Abominable; the battle cruisers Pernicious, Atrocious and Monstrous; the cruisers Frightful and Ruthless, and the destroyers Scorpion, Bacillus, Spider, Earwig, Loathsome, Venomous and Toad.'

"But envisage the change. Suppose that, instead of this, we were to read such a description as this:

"'At 10.02 a.m. the German fleet was sighted, and at 10.03 fire was opened by the John Galsworthy, the Hall Caine, and the Gilbert Murray. At 10.10 the Chesterton was observed to have a heavy list and at 10.20 she sank, her crew being taken off by the Herbert Spencer and the John Morley. Meanwhile the Yeats, the Pinero, and the Frederic Harrison had been engaging the enemy at close quarters. At 11.20 the Mrs. Humphrey Ward blew up, not before giving a good account of herself.'"

Remember the Guarantee.

When buying gloves, stockings and other articles with a time guarantee, mark on your calendar the date of purchase, and then mark ahead the day on which the guarantee expires. On the back of the page for that month note where you have put the guarantee slips for safekeeping. Many people buy goods, meaning to take advantage of the manufacturer's offer of renewal, but allow the time to slip by unheeded.

SHAPE AND COLOR OF SHOES

Footwear Dealers in Annual Convention Limit Height of Shoe Heels to Two and One-Eighth Inches.

Simplicity in shape as well as in color will be the predominating style in footgear for the coming season, big dealers declared at the recent convention of the National Shoe Retailers' association at St. Louis.

Styles will conform largely to the standards set by the war industries board, for shoe manufacturers had advanced far into the output of 1919 goods when the government lifted shoe regulations.

Many of the postwar problems were taken up at the initial session of the eighth annual convention, which was the largest gathering of manufacturers, jobbers, wholesale and retail shoe men ever assembled. More than 3,000 delegates attended.

The association determined to hold styles for the coming season to rigid simplicity and few colors. The style committee recommended not more than three tones of brown, two shades of gray and the black and white. The height of the high shoes is not to exceed eight and one-half inches. Lace will be the prevailing mode. For spring wear oxfords and pumps will predominate. Oxfords will serve for both street and dress wear. Women's shoes will have low heels of one and one-half inches and high heels of one and seven-eighths to two and one-eighth inches.

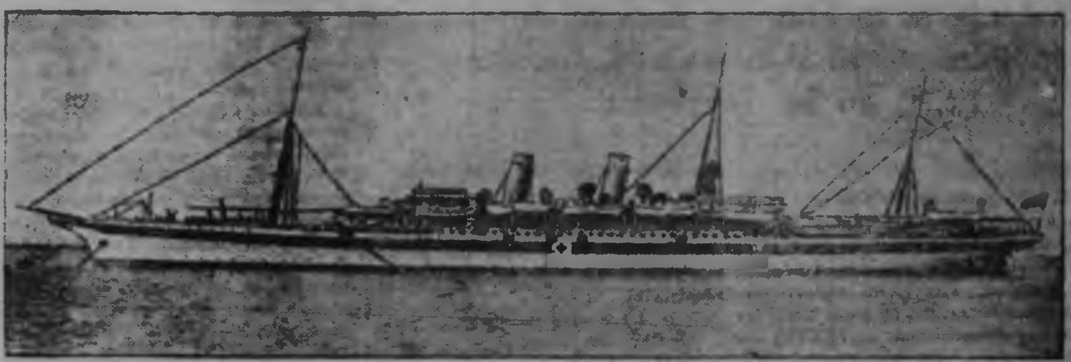
The Hospital Ship "Loyalty"

HER INTERESTING CAREER RECALLED



1915, ex-R.M.S. "Empress of India" Hospital ship "Loyalty," Bombay.

QUITE recently the hospital ship "Loyalty" has been converted in Bombay into a troopship, and the occasion appears to justify publication of some account of her career as a hospital ship, a career which was not only one of great service, but which reflects in a very remarkable way the great generosity of his Highness, the Maharajah of Gwalior.

In August, 1914, his Highness the Maharajah of Gwalior visited Bhopal and arranged with the Begum Sahiba to present the Government with a hospital ship, to be called "Loyalty," to which the Chiefs of India were to be asked to subscribe. The offer was gratefully accepted, but there was considerable delay in procuring a suitable ship. Eventually the ship chosen was the "Empress of India," built by the Naval Construction & Armaments Company, of Barrow-in-Furness, in 1891, for the Canadian Pacific Railway's Pacific Ocean trades. Together with her sister ships "Empress of China" and "Empress of Japan," she was specially designed built on very handsome lines, and fitted most luxuriously with everything considered necessary for the comfort of passengers of all classes. The matter of engine power and speed was kept specially in view, so that the ships in their time were the fastest in the Pacific trade, and earned a great name for the quick transmission of passengers, mails and fine goods, such as silk and tea, between Hong Kong, Japan and Vancouver, and thence to various points by the Canadian Pacific Railway across the North American Continent. It will thus be seen that the "Loyalty," prior to becoming a hospital ship, took a great part as "Empress of India," in the opening up and developing of commerce in one of the outlying parts of the Empire. Incidentally she has the honor of carrying King George as a passenger when he was Prince of Wales.

It would almost seem to be in the natural order of events that the good ship "Empress of India," after carrying on such useful commercial work for 23 years, and being relieved on the Pacific station by a larger and more modern style of ship (the new "Empress of Asia") should come on the scene at the outbreak of the present war, just when his Highness the Maharajah of Gwalior decided to repeat his loyal and munificent act of 1900, by presenting a hospital ship of 300 beds capacity for use during the war. Most appropriately the ship was acquired from the Canadian Pacific Railway Company. The Director of the Royal India Marine and his officers acted for his Highness in the matter of buying, altering and refitting, the "Empress of India," of London, and changing her name to the "Loyalty" of Bombay. This was done in October, 1914, and within four months from the time war was declared the hospital ship "Loyalty" was ready to begin her good work and assist in the relief of suffering humanity.

Record of Four Years.

The "Loyalty" sailed from the Persian Gulf on November 29th, 1914, having been renamed by Lady Willingdon on the previous day, and from that time up to nearly the end of last year she was in commission. On her first voyage she was deflected to Karachi, where she stayed till December 24th, when she left for England. During this time the ship was bought outright for the Chiefs, and subsequently remained their property.

In the four years she was in commission as a hospital ship she sailed 41 voyages and carried 15,4[illegible] patients British, Indians, Chinese, West Indian, East and West African and German, Turkish and Arab prisoners of war.

The hospital was staffed with three or four I. M. S. officers and one military assistant-surgeon, and one matron and four to six nursing sisters and [illegible] out assistant surgeons, compounders, ward orderlies, etc. A few lent by the Government of India, the rest being recruited from Gwalior, Indore, Dhar and Bharatpur States, and the balance locally in Bombay. The cost of buying and fitting out the ship was approximately $600,000, and her upkeep for four years was $1,800,000, the total being nearly two and a half million dollars, of which by far the greater part was paid by H. H. the Maharajah of Gwalior, though contributions were made from other States.

Incidents at Sea.

Unique as part of the ship's life saving work was the rescue of the crew of the steamship "Ben Vorlich," after that ship had been shelled and torpedoed by a German submarine near Ushant, on August 1st, 1915. This incident and the sinking of the steamship "Clintonia" were witnessed by the "Loyalty" from a distance of about 1½ miles, when she was full of badly wounded men (British cases from the Dardanelles) on her way down Alexandria and Malta to Southampton.

When plying in Indian waters, the "Loyalty" had the good fortune to render assistance to a transport which took fire and was abandoned at sea, the "Edavana." Hearing the distressed vessel's messages on the wireless, the "Loyalty" proceeded with all speed to the place indicated and picked up 70 of the burning ship's people in three boats during the night, afterwards transferring them to the steamship "Madras," which was bound for Bombay. Had the "Loyalty" not been an hospital ship she would have towed the "Edavana" into Bombay, but, of course, could not do this without infringing the Geneva Red Cross Convention.

She also rendered assistance to several India and native craft met at sea during her voyages [illegible] and provisions, and to a lighthouse crew in the Red Sea.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT IS UP FOR AMENDMENT

No Limit as to Time for Medical Service and Pensions to Widows and Children to be Increased.

Toronto. April 7.—An announcement was made in the Legislative by the Attorney-General, Hon. I. B. Lucas, which will be received all over the Province by the workingmen with the greatest amount of satisfaction. This announcement was made when the Attorney-General was introrucing an Act to amen the Workmen's Compensation Act.

In explaining the proposed amendment, Mr. Lucas dealt with the more important clauses of the Act. One clause would affect the clerical staff of manufacturing institutions. As the Act now stands, the members of the clerical staff do not come within its provisions unless exposed to [illegible]. The amendment proposes to include this staff within the full provisions of the Act.

A second clause affects the dependents of aliens who resided in a foreign country during the war. Unless these dependents have foresworn their allegiance to their native land and become citizens of Canada, they will not be entitled to the pension paid under the Workmen's Compensation Act.

Increase Pensions.

Another clause stipulates that the principal contractor notifies the Board of the sub-contractor, who may be engaged in work, so that it may be seen that such sub-contractors are paying their assessment.

The fourth clause of the amendment is one of the most important of the whole amendment. Under an Act which is admittedly one of the most generous Acts of its kind in existence, a widow was paid $20 per month as a pension.

"The Government" said Mr. Lucas "thinks that that allowance is too low, and we will make it $30, or an increase of 50 per cent. Under the present law each child is allowed $5, and the Government will now increase this amount by 50 per cent., making it $7.50. Under this new amendment a widow with four children will receive a pension of $50 per month."

Clause 5 of the amendment, explained Mr. Lucas, would make provision for the Board purchasing artificial limbs.

Another clause of the proposed amendment is equally generous to some of the other clauses of the bill When the first Workmen's Compensation Act came into force, workmen were obliged to pay for their own medical attendance. Two years later the Act was amended to read that the Board would pay their medical attendance for a period of thirty days. This worked out very satisfactorily, but it still left some cases of hardship where the injury was of longer duration. Under the provisions of the proposed amendment. all these limitations would be removed and the Board would bear the entire expense of medical attention.

One further clause of the bill touched upon the question of appeals allowed under the present Act. Appeals of a general character, the Government would not listen to, but where a pure question of law was concerned, which was of a generaol character, the Lieutenant-Governor may state a case which may go to the courts. This new clause was of a very limited character and would not affect the workings of the Board at all. Moreover, the Government was only recommending this clause for the consideration of the House.

Commends Action.

Mr. Wm. Proudfoot, K.C., leader of the Opposition, stated that he was very glad the amendment was to be brought down, particularly that clause of it affecting medical attendance. He believed the Government was going as far as was necessary in this clause.

TO LIVE 1,000 YEARS.

All That Is Necessary Is to Eliminate Waste and Disease.

"Death under fifty or sixty years of age has got to be prevented or avoided," said Sir George Newman recently.

Why should Sir George Newman limit the age at sixty? Seeing that sanitation and preventive medicine have already raised the expectation of life at birth from forty years in 1838-54 to fifty-one in 1908-18, why should not people live normally to be 100 or even more?

Scientists are agreed that there is nothing to prevent the human body living and enjoying the full possession of its faculties for an indefinite number of years, 500 or even 1,000, providing disease and waste matter are eliminated from the frame.

Old age is caused by the gradual accumulation of calcareous matter in the veins, tissues, and joints, which leads to stiffness, ossification, and eventually death, through the organs being unable to work. Eliminate this waste matter, which is mainly lime, and, if scientific theories are true, there is little to prevent you living indefinitely.

This is the base of all the methods of prolonging life, such as the drinking of sour milk, which has the property of dissolving lime in the system. The apple, which curiously enough, is popularly supposed to be the "tree of life," the fruit of which Adam and Eve "did eat," has similar properties. Buddhist monks in Tibet undoubtedly live and retain their faculties to abnormal ages, which they attribute to their sparse diet of apples and rice. Hindu fakirs declare that youthfulness of body, not of mind, can be retained to any age by frequent baths in diluted glacial acetic acid. These acid baths certainly dissolve lime and calcareous matter, and it is noteworthy that apples contain a quantity of this chemical. Michael Angelo, who died through an accident at ninety-three, declared that eating grapes and drinking wine was the secret of his unimpaired vitality.—Tit-Bits.

To Make Hebrides Happy.

Lord Leverhulme, the new proprietor of the Island of Lewis, in the course of an interview to the press, has given very interesting particulars as to his plans for making it a happy spot in the Hebrides. Lewis, he remarked at the outset, had a population of 32,000 at the last census.

"The scenery of the island is magnificent, its climate almost paradisical," he said. "When I was there recently the temperature was 10 deg. higher than in London. Flowers and plants will grow in the open there which you would have to travel as far south as the Isle of Wight to see produced under like conditions."

"The people," he added, "are mostly crofters. Earning a livelihood involves the hardest sustained labor on the part of the crofter, his wife, and his children. A woman will frequently have to make two journeys to the peat beds per day: this means sixteen miles, with a very heavy burden over eight of them. For fishing they have only the open boat and the most primitive of tacale. The total earnings of a family of five will be from $2 to $3 per week. Yet these people are given to education. There are 800 students receiving higher education at the Nicholson Institute, Stornoway. They pass thence in remarkable numbers to the universities."

"New houses are to be built, well equipped, with a garden in each case large enough to be useful as an allotment.

"The fishing grounds off Lewis are amongst the finest in the world. Canning factories must be ready. The first is now in course of erection at Stornoway, and will be followed by others. The question of transit is not difficult. Then we are to have works for hand-loom weaving. There is real demand for Lewis and Harris tweeds.

"Add to all this," Lord Leverhulme said, "the possibilities of the island as a centre for tourists, and you will see how the employment problem is on the way to being solved. For tourists the island is an ideal place. It is kept warm in winter by the Gulf Stream. It is kept from excessive heat in the summer by the Atlantic Ocean. I hold that Lewis has a magnificent future before it."

Competition In Steel.

Manufacturers of iron and steel in Great Britain are preparing to expand their plants so that they will be in a position to care for the needs of many European countries. Despite a cry of doubt which was raised recently, the English manufacturers are now of the opinion that they can turn out iron and steel at a lower cost than in rival countries. This is perhaps not without reason, provided labor troubles do not come to the fore. One of the British companies is planning an output of 20,000 tons of pig iron a week.

Some Jump.

Bix—They say a flea can jump over a thousand times his own length. Fancy if a human could do that.

Coal.

Though wood and turf formed the fuel of our early ancestors, investigations have proved that the Britons, even prior to the Roman occupation, made use of coal. But as it was possible to utilize only such coal as lay at or near the surface, the practice did not make headway for many centuries.

Pudding in History.

Pudding in its early form was made of minced meat of some sort, well seasoned and stuffed into an intestine, and then cooked by boiling. There are words in many early languages meaning pudding, but it seems originally to have come from some word meaning a short body or inflated skin.

THE ISLE OF MAN.

Pretty Little Island Has Long History.

The Isle of Man, the little island with a long history, with a constitution all its own and many jealously guarded rights and privileges, set in the midst of the Irish Sea, almost equidistant from the three kingdoms, has had its own troubles during the war. In the days of peace these three kingdoms supplied the island, all summer long, with copious streams of visitors. They came for the day, arriving on one boat and going back on the next. They came, above all, for the week end, a long week end or a short week end, and many of them came to stay for weeks and months together. But the war, which discouraged holiday making anywhere, discouraged it especially in the Isle of Man. The Government wanted the ships, for one thing, and, for another, there were the submarines.

All that, however, is now a thing of the past, and Manxland is bestirring itself for the coming of the visitors once again. And they will surely come, for a visit to the Isle of Man has for many people an indefinable charm all its own. It is much more of an undertaking, much more of an adventure, than any mere railway journey. The Manx boats are quite big boats; the voyage from the nearest mainland quite a considerable one, some fifty or sixty miles or more, whilst the Irish Sea is often no mill pond. Then there is all the quaint charm of the island's independence, its famous Council, its House of Keys, its Tynwald Court, and its long story full of "little great events," stretching back into that grand time when anything might have happened, when Baetan MacCairil was King of Ulster, when Columbia was setting sail with the faithful twelve from Denny to Iona, and Augustine was planning his journey to Kent.

That was the Celtic period, for historians divide the story of the island into three periods. In the first of these the Isle of Man was inhabited by a Celtic people. The next is marked by the Viking invasions and the establishment of Scandinavian rule. The third period is that of the English dominion. But in all three periods, up to a hundred years ago, Man went through troublous times. The kings of Norway, the kings of Scotland, the kings of England, the Roundheads, and the Cavaliers, all in their turn, fought for possession of the island, and all in turn did possess it. The island actually fell to the British crown in 1399, and, in 1406, Henry IV made a grant of it to Sir John Stanley, "his heirs and assigns on the service of rendering two falcons on paying homage and two falcons to all future kings of England on their coronation." So the Stanleys became lords of Man, and after they had reigned in it for more than 300 years the sovereignty of the island passed, in 1736, to James Murray, second Duke of Atholl, and, from the Atholls, having meanwhile become a terrible place for smugglers, it was finally taken over by the British Government. That was in 1828. The ancient laws and tenures of the island were not interfered with, and ever since the final settlement of 1866, when a measure of home rule was confirmed to the island, Man has been prosperous. It is a place of singular beauty, a land of mountains, hills, and glens, with the sea never very far away. And the hills are always strangely soft in outline, clothed in green to the summit, whilst all the coast, from Peel round by the Calf of Man, past Castletown and Douglas to Maughold Head, near Ramsey, presents a picture of rugged grandeur which becomes a treasured memory to those who have seen it.

A Great Life Saver.

No invention did more to defeat the Hun policy of unrestricted sea murder than that of Lieut. C. D. Burney, of the royal navy. It was he who hit upon an idea which made the German mines which were scattered broadcast useless, and thus saved the lives of hundreds of sailors and prevented the loss of a large number of warships.

Simplicity itself, the device—which is a secret official patent, and is known in the service as the "P.V.," or "paravane"—consists of a waterplane shaped like a torpedo, having a pair of large flat fins projecting on either side of its body. The tail is fitted with rudders to keep the torpedo at any set depth while it is in operation.

It is towed overside by a wire rope which runs from the ship's bows outward. This wire rope is intended to pick up the mooring ropes of mines and slide them along till they reach the nose of the paravane, where a sharp saw is fixed inside a V-shaped slot.

The saw cuts through the mooring rope and allows the mine to float free, when it can be either avoided or destroyed, as may be desired.

For his wonderful invention, Lieut. Burney has been paid the sum of £30,000 and decorated with various honors.—Tit-Bits.

Cloth of Gold for Hats.

A good deal of cloth of gold is now being used in dress hats. It is most generally seen veiled with maline in order to dull the bright effect, and appears most popular when used under maline of brown or black. Another novelty for use in women's hats is a satin about 18 inches wide and stitched with silk floss in rows about a quarter of an inch apart. This effect is seen in sand on brown, Chinese blue on black, and jade on black, and is especially adaptable for draped turbans, crowns and facings.

Life of Fruit Trees.

Of our fruit trees, the pear is the longest lived. They will bear for 50 years and a few hardy veterans a quarter of a century longer. Apple trees range in age from twenty-five to forty years, while twenty-five years is about the limit for plum trees. Raspberry and blackberry bushes live from six to fourteen years, currant bushes twenty years and gooseberry bushes ten years. —People's Home Journal.

Keeping Garden Tools in O der

Now is the time to look after your garden tools if you have not already done so. Of course the winter months are the time to repair repaint and replace broken parts of your garden tool collection. Some men are regular cranks about their garden tools, for they must be "just so" all the time Buy the best tools and then take good care of them and you will be money ahead in the long run. Have a place for each tool and keep each tool in its place. Your spade, hoe and rake should be as bright and sharp the beginning of the season as they were the year you bought them, no matter how long you have had them.

You very seldom meet a gardener who talks about a sharp rake—take my tip and put your rake in a vize and file the teeth down to a good sharp point. The rake will do better work and it takes less effort. It will pulverize the soil finer and work deeper than a dull rake.

A sharpened spade, with the cutting edge kept filed down to a knifelike size edge, will go through the packed surface soil quicker and with less pressure on the spade than a dull spade; it will make the work 50 per cent. easier.

Carry a File for Your Hoe.

The same is true in using the hoe. In fact when you have considerable hoeing to do it is a great help to carry a file in your hip pocket and give the edge of the hoe a rub whenever the edge begins to get dull. It makes the hoe work much easier; its cuts the weeds with less effort and with a hoe good and sharp the weeds can be cut out from among small plants with less danger of damaging the plants.

This rule of keeping your garden tools sharp applies to nearly all the smaller hand garden tools, like the asparagus knife, garden trowels, hand weeders, as well as the pull easy rakes and the different planters and cultivators.

When you have finished using a tool the first thing to do is to wash off any mud that may be clinging to it and wipe it dry with an old rag of some kind. Then paint it well with oil before you store it for any length of time.

You can keep an old pail hanging somewhere in your toolhouse or basement with a mixture of hard oil and kerosene. Use about one part hard oil to five parts of kerosene. This mixture is applied to the tools with a swab or brush and protects all iron parts from rusting and will save you considerable expense in the long run

Makes Work Much Easier.

It may seem like a lot of trouble to bother in this way about keeping the tools sharp and clean. But such tools make the work much easier than do dull rusty tools. The soil sticks more tightly to rusty tools than it does to these that are bright and slick. And by taking good care of your tools you always know where to find them when wanted.

The average gardener, like the average golf player can get along with about two tools the spade and rake, but it does not give him as much satisfaction.—In Past, in Chicago Daily News.

Pneumonia death rate among U.S. troops both overseas and at home shows 50 per cent. reduction over last week.

A large number of soldiers reached Hamilton some hours before they were expected and there was no one to receive them.

Ages Are Changing.

Incidents of men stretching the truth considerably to get into the British army when England needed every man and then resorting virtually to mutiny to get out after the armistice was signed have been shown at Folkestone during investigation of the first demobilization demonstrations there. After several hundred men had declined to embark for France at the end of their Christmas leave, the military authorities began investigating each case separately.

One man, who might be judged anywhere from 36 to 50 years old, appeared before the examining officers.

"On what ground do you think you should be released now?" he was asked.

"I'm more than 41 years old," he said, relying upon the rule that the men of that age or more should be released as soon as possible.

"But your army book shows you enlisted 15 months ago at the age of 35c."

"I gave that as my age to get in, sir. I am 50 years old now."

"You will have to prove that," came a quick reply, whereupon he turned to a middle-aged woman spectator, his wife, who had anticipated the situation and produced a birth certificate. He will be released at once and the method by which he volunteered will be conveniently forgotten.

During the last year of the war no miners were allowed to join the army. Their ranks already had been depleted until barely enough coal was being produced.

Another demonstrator said he should be released because he was a miner. His record showed he represented himself as a fishmonger in order to join the colors. When he proves he is a miner he will be released.

MACKENZIE AND MANN WIN OVER HYDRO COMMISSION

Important Decision Is Handed Down in Privy Council.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, April 7.—The Canadian Associated Press despatches today indicate that the Electrical Development Company interests, (Mackenzie and Mann) have secured an important initial victory before the Privy Council, in their fight against the Ontario Hydro Electric (Government) Commission and the Attorney-General of Ontario, when that highest court allowed with costs the appeal of the company against these Government interests. This judgment permits the electrical company to proceed with their action against the Commission, to determine the validity of the powers given by Ontario to the Commission, to develop certain water powers in the Welland and Niagara rivers. The lower courts held that this action should not be commenced without fiat of the Attorney-General of Ontario who refused it.

Reports do not say whether the attempted revolution in Budapest was organized by socialist or by bourgeoise parties.

C.P.R. STOCK IS OWNED BY ENEMY

Montreal, April 7.—By an action entered in the local courts, the Dominion of Canada asks to have the Minister of Finance or the Receiver-General of Canada appointed custodian for C.P.R. stock, valued at the present time at $22,000,000, the property of enemy shareholders.

The action is taken by the Secretary of State of the Dominion under the order respecting trade with the enemy which was passed in 1916. Common stock to the number of 143,676 shares and valued at the present time at $20,000,000, is affected. Most of this stock is held by German banks.

F. A. Meredith, acting on behalf of the C.P.R., opposed the petition which came up before Mr. Justice Duclos, this afternoon, on the ground that the transfer offices of the railway company in London and Paris should have been notified.

Judge Duclos overruled the objection on the ground that such notification would be of no effect.

Mr. Meredith then asked for delay on the ground that he was not ready to proceed, and asked that the case be adjourned for a week.

Eugene Lafleur, K.C., acting for the Secretary of State, opposed delay on the ground that peace would be signed between now and April 12, in which case the Government would lose its recourse.

The judge agreed to the adjournment for a week, but reserved to the Government the right to proceed immediately should an emergency arise.

FOOD PRICES NOW SHOW DECREASE

BUT COST OF SOME ARTICLES IS DOUBLE THAT IN 1914.

Ottawa, April 7.—The Department of Labor's weekly food prices budget was again lower at the middle of March, the cost of the twenty-nine items of foods included averaging $13.05 in some sixty cities, as compared with $13.41 at the middle of February and $13.78 in January. The decrease for the month was due chiefly to lower prices in eggs, butter, flour, rolled oats, beans, potatoes, and to slight decreases in meats, particularly mutton and pork products. In butter there was a considerable increase in price after the middle of the month, owing to an increase in exports, the prices being up five cents and ten cents per pound in many of the cities.

The same food budget in March, 1918, cost $12.66, and the figure for March, 1919, $15.05, is the lowest since July, 1918, when it was $13. In March, 1914, the budget cost $7.68; a year later, $7.88; in 1916, $8.36, and in March, 1917, $10.70. It thus appears that the increase in food prices occurred chiefly between the summer of 1916 and the summer of 1918.

SAGE TEA DANDY TO DARKEN HAIR

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre To Hair

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night if you'll get a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this famous Sage Tea Recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, are sold annually, says a well known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray or becoming faded have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound to-night and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

Served 500 Men With Dinner In 20 Minutes

Montreal, April 5.— One of the most interesting features connected with the movement of the returning troops fromthe seaboard to the demobilization centres is the expeditious manner in which the men are provided with meals en route. Special commissary cars have been provided for the troop trains and their operation brought to a high point of efficiency.

When the "Princess Pats" were moving over the Grand Trunk to Ottawa the other day the dining car department of that railway served the men, numbering five hundred and ten, with their midday meal in twenty-two minutes. The menu consisted of cream of tomato soup, minced ham and eggs, potatoes a la Dublin, tapioca pudding, bread and butter and tea.

This Grand Trunk commissary car on the trip from Halifax to Ottawa served 3,390 meals to the officers and men, with unnumbered "etxra meals," which was always served freely when desired. Not a single complaint was registered during the trip.

NEW SPRING WAIST STYLE

A waistline just a trifle above normal is to be the feature of the spring suit, according to present indications. This type of suit is featured especially for young women and women with decidedly youthful figures. Some of the suits promised for spring fit the figure quite snugly to an inch or so above the normal waistline, at which point a flaring skirt of peplum, hip length or longer, may be set on. Again the suit coat will be held in by a belt set on just above the normal waistline. The suit with high waisted line in front and no waistline at all at the back is also shown. This is arrived at by a panel arrangement at the back. A very graceful figure silhouette is usually given by this type of coat. Skirts are just about the same as those shown for winter and now being worn.

The perfectly straight-line coat, cut on chemise lines and closely related to the chemise frock, to be worn over a sleeveless blouse or vest in contrasting color and material, is also to be a favorite for spring.

MODISH NOTES

Lingerie made of lemon-colored crepe de chine is trimmed with black ribbon.

Taffeta will be much used for smart street frocks.

Japanese cotton crepe makes excellent winter frocks for small children.

Black crepe de chine is sometimes worn with a vest of rose satin, embroidered in white angora and gold thread.

Any bit of fine linen, provided it is eight or nine inches square, can be utilised for charming hand-rolled handkerchiefs.

A yard of plain black moire ribbon can be made into a pretty little neck accessory by adding colored tassels and embroidery on the ends.

To Clean Marble.

To clean discolored marble, first of all wash with soap and water, then wipe dry and apply a paste made of powdered bathbrick and lemon juice. Rub it well into the discolored parts and rinse it off in clean cold water.

WHAT THE GIRL OF TODAY REQUIRES FOR TOMORROW

Rev. F. E. Malott Lays Down Excellent Rules of Conduct for the Guidance of Young Women.

Rev. F. E. Malott of Trinity Church last night spoke upon "The girl of today who will meet the world's need of tomorrow." He chose as his text an extract from the twenty-ninth verse of the thirty-first chapter of Proverbs: "Many daughters have done virtuously but thou excellest them all."

He referred to the many noble women whose names have lived in the pages of history of all lands and to the heroines of the works of Shakespeare, Chaucer, Spencer, Scott and others of the celebrated writers of poetry and prose.

If the girl of today is to be prepared to meet the needs of the world of tomorrow she must not be brought up in idleness and taught to regard work as undignified. The pastor reminded his congregation that there was nothing undignified about toiling with one's hand. Whatever the girl of today learned she should not neglect domestic science as taught in the home: it would be a calamity, continued the speaker, if the industrial and professional life which is open to women of today as never before was to rob us entirely of the home maker.

The pastor in his sermon referred to the dangers of reading too extensively that brand of modern literature which transports the mind to a world of unreality. There was, too, the danger of trying to dress beyond her income. The girl who will be prepared to meet the needs of the world to morrow will not be one who will place dress uppermost in her thoughts. She must be more than a fashion plate if she is to measure up to the demands which have been placed upon her as a result of the added responsibilities which have been placed upon women in the form of a greater share in the industrial, profession al and political life of the nation.

Ladies—true ladies, will be needed in the world of tomorrow and the pastor in outlining several of the essential characteristics of a true lady mentioned, kindness, courtesy, modesty and Christianity.

The girl who is to reap the greatest measure of success in the world of tomorrow must have less of the artificial in early life, less theatre going, more good reading, healthful recreation, and regular sleep.

Gen. Horne a Horseman.

Gen. Sir Henry Horne is an enthusiastic follower of hounds, and anything in the nature of a "horsey" story appeals to him.

One that he is fond of relating concerns a lot of gee-gees that were on view at a country fair.

It was, says Gen. Horne, a queer-looking collection of more or less—principally more — broken-down crocks. Nevertheless, an old farmer on the look-out for a bargain, approached the dealer respecting the price of one particularly disreputable-looking animal.

"Seventeen and sixpence," he was told.

He accordingly closed with the offer, and tendered a pound in payment, but the dealer had no change.

"Never mind, guv'nor," he said; take another horse, but pick one of the end 'uns. If you touch 'em in the middle you'll have the blessed lot down."

Sawdust Used as Fuel.

A sawdust stove is one of the latest inventions. The stove will burn for 24 hours on 30 pounds of sawdust without attention. The stove will also burn peat, straw, wood chips, shavings, and even paper.

A number of these stoves are being used in the military camps and giving satisfaction. The method of overcoming the caking of the fuel is by means of carefully designed air tubes, which prevent the clogging of the air passages.

Sawdust is obtainable at 48 cents a hundredweight, so that a room can be kept warm all day long for an expenditure of less than one cent an hour.

The Fandango.

The dance bearing this name is of Spanish origin. It is in three-eighth time and is invariably accompanied with castanets and sometimes also with a tambourine. Its musical character is the strong accent on the second beat of each bar instead of the first.

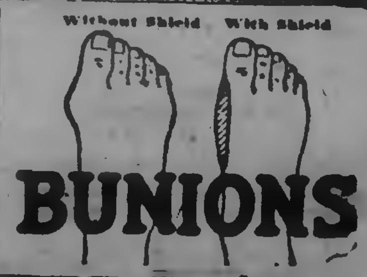
MONOPOLY DOOMED TO FAILURE.

Revolutionary state socialism, bolshevism, I. W. W.ism, syndicalism, and all like movements are natural reactions aginst he monopoly of control exercised over industry by capital in the past. Wherein they are all mistaken and doomed to utter failure is that they fail to recognize that the remedy for one kind of monopoly does not lie in establishing a monopoly of another kind. It lies in destroying monopoly altogether, and introducing in its stead a conception of partnership, with round table conference, in which the several parties to industry will be rewarded in accordance with the social service they render. Let there be no mistake: neither America nor Canada will escape these inevitable reactions unless our industrial institutions, like our political, are brought into fuller harmony with the democratic sentiments of the times.—From address by W. L. Mackenzie King at Montreal Reform Club, Jan. 11, 1919.



BUNIONS

Relieved by Dr. Scholl's Bunion Reducer Shield

This appliance has a peculiar concave shape, purposely so formed to fit snugly over joint and eliminate friction and pressure from footwear, and at the same time also prevents the enlarged joint from forcing the shoe out of shape.

Is superior to old-fashioned leather and felt protectors, as it is made from antiseptic rubber, and being worn right on bunion inside hosiery. It excludes air, forms and retains a moisture pocket which keeps the joint soft and pliable, removes that hard skin or callous that so often accompanies and increases the irritability of the enlargement, also reduces inflamed condition. Made in three sizes and for right and left foot. Improvements in Steel Making.

Amongst war-time research work the benefit of which will be permanent better control of the heat treatment of steel promises valuable results. It is now widely recognized that comparatively few degrees variation in the temperature makes all the difference in the properties of the finished material. The difficulties are particularly great where large masses of steel are concerned, because it is difficult to secure the same temperature at the surface and in the mass of the metal. Other difficulties are introduced by the different scaling tendencies and different emissivities of various steels. Recent improvements in furnace construction facilitate the attainment of uniform temperatures, and the means and methods of pyrometry have been developed to such an extent that the most delicate heat instrument can be given with almost mathematical certainty and on the basis of a commercial repetition process. It was suggested recently by Dr. Carpenter, of Sheffield, that working temperatures would be laid down in specifications for steel products in the near future. A start has already been made and the state of practice is such that this policy is sure to be extended.

Cuba.

Though an agricultural state, there are important branches of agriculture that are all but wanting in Cuba. Thus cereals are not raised on a large scale, the hay crop is unimportant, and large quantities of flour, potatoes, meats, beans, canned goods, apples and other agricultural products are imported. Though many cattle are raised on the island, the dairy industry is as yet undeveloped.

British Labor Problems That Lloyd George Faces In This Moment of Crisis

FOR the British Government to grant all the demands made upon it in the name of labor would be equivalent to putting up the shutters by the old firm of John Bull. It has been pointed out that the demands of the miners, if conceded, would make the cost of coal so high as to impose a fatal handicap upon many industries which have to compete for foreign markets, and without foreign markets trade in the Old Country would be destroyed. Writing in the New York Sun, Mr. E. Cunliffe Owen contends that the industrial unrest in Great Britain is not the result of any mere differences between labor and capital. It is not that labor wants shorter hours and longer wages, but that its spokesmen demand a complete overthrow of the industrial system as it existed before the war. If one demand were granted it would be followed by other demands. This is proved by the trivial nature of some of the reasons advanced to justify the various strikes, reasons that the labor unions would have been ashamed of five years or so ago.

On this account some observers have little hope that the various conferences and commissions that are to consider the grievances of labor will be able to compose them. The trouble is more like the trouble in Ireland, which nobody has been able satisfactorily to adjust. The masses in England are now in a condition that has been compared to that which existed in France at the close of the Franco-Prussian war and which led to the Commune. As Mr. Owen says: "The sudden cessation of hostilities and consequent relaxation of nerves that were strained to the limit has had the effect of disturbing the balance of every mind and developing the most extravagant ambitions and unattainable aspirations." Much the same condition has obtained at the close of every great war, and the finest statesmanship will be required to tide the nation over the critical period. If nothing happens for two or three years—nothing revolutionary, that is—all will be well, although it is not to be expected that the world will ever revert to the conditions that prevailed up to 1914.

The only real opposition to the British Government to-day is made up of the Labor members. Their platform calls for the state ownership of all mines, railroads, canals, maritime and other vital public utilities; the nationalization of land with statutory powers for the state to acquire all real estate by compulsory sale; the removal of all taxation of food, and the imposition of the tax burden on wealth; the housing of the poor at national expense; the control of industries not by the employers but by the workers with a complete acceptance of all trades union rights; full and free education for all children; complete Home Rule for Ireland; local autonomy for England, Scotland and Wales; Home Rule for India, and the inauguration of such a standard of social life and economic freedom, with class distinctions abolished, as will make the country "worthy of democracy." These are the demands of the masses upon the classes, and it is incredible that they will be acceded to, and that is why the utmost in statesmanship will be called upon to avoid a fatal clash between the representatives of the two great divisions of society.

It is to be doubted if there is one of these labor demands that Mr. Lloyd George would have shrunk from ten years ago if he had seen the prospect of carrying it through. To-day his position is difficult, since the great bulk of his Parliamentary following is Conservative, and in deference to this fact he has had to give his most important portfolios to Unionists. If he were minded to surrender to labor his following in the Commons would desert him. There are some unkind enough to say that the Premier was ready to put himself at the head of the labor party if it had showed strength enough to carry the country, and that he might even leave his own Government if he deemed the step one likely to prolong his political prestige. Others say that years and responsibility have mellowed Lloyd George and that he will duplicate the career of Chamberlain, who began as a Radical and wound up as the greatest of Imperialists. With his Radical friends suspicious of his Conservative associates, and his Conservative associates suspicious of his former Radical inclinations, it is plain enough that the British Prime Minister is going to have his trouble with the labor disputes.

At this time of crisis one recalls Lord Lansdowne and his famous letter to the London Telegraph in the fall of 1917, in which he urged the Government to examine most carefully the German peace conditions. The letter, it might be remarked, had been rejected previously by at least one important London newspaper, and its appearance brought down a veritable torrent of abuse upon the head of the noble earl. Without any belated disposition to justify the letter, it must be admitted that Lord Lansdowne at least saw clearly enough what was destined to happen in the British Isles if the war continued. He has since explained that he had neither sympathy for Germany nor doubt of the eventual success of the Allies, but he perceived that Bolshevism—a word then unheard of—was likely to make headway all over the world. But Lansdowne was wrong in supposing that the making of a swift peace with Germany would have averted what has happened. It was coming, war or no war, peace or no peace, victory or no victory. Coming now, the British Empire is less competent to deal decisively with the tremendous labor problem.

If a man never makes mistakes he never makes anything else.

THEATRICAL

VAUDEVILLE AND PICTURES AT THE GRAND

In order to meet the public demand for a little better class of vaudeville and pictures, the first half of every week will be devoted to three or more high-class vaudeville acts and several first run feature pictures. The vaudeville acts for to-day, Tuesday and Wednesday will come direct from Shea's Theatres, Toronto and Buffalo, headed by the famous Gabby Brothers and Clarke, talkative manipulators of hats and clubs; Archer and Cair, a comedy skit, entitled "Love Me, Love My Dog," and Mario and Duffy, clever comedy artists on the horizontal bar. The feature picture will be Geraldine Farrar, in "Shadows," a drama of Eastern days and Alaskan heights; also Fatty Arbuckle in "Fatty's Indian Sweetheart," one of the best Arbuckle comedies, and the Screen Magazine, "The world before your eyes." Seats can be reserved for all evening performances in advance by telephone, which will be held until 7:30 (evening of performance).

To those who find it an inconvenience to attend the evening performances, there will be a matinee daily at 2:30. Avoid the crowds—attend the matinees, if possible.

Big Apiary.

An interesting picture of an apiary on a precipitous mountain was shown in Popular Mechanics Magazine. The slope has been cut into terraces twelve to fifteen feet high, on which more than 200 swarms of bees are housed, each hive being placed on a concrete foundation. The land put to this profitable use would be of little for any other purpose. The hives, being high up, are fanned by summer breezes and are warmed by the sun in winter.

Friendship.

No one is so poor as the person who is going through life without friends. None of us needs to be in this plight, for all around us are those who need love and sympathy, those to whom we can make life less difficult. And that is what friendship means—spending oneself for those one loves and asking nothing in return. It is "only he who is unwilling to love without being loved" who is likely to feel that there is no such thing as true friendship.

Right Idea About Business

The old idea that business is getting the better of your neighbor is not only "bad business," but nonsense. Business is not getting the better of but doing the best for your neighbor—and yourself. If business is not mutually profitable, it is mutually destructive. My neighbor's prosperity helps mine and mine his. When that old pernicious notion is finally exploded the millennium of business will be at hand, the era of universal peace between capital and labor.—Lord Leverhulme.

Famous Publishers.

The famous British publishing firm of John Murray was founded 150 years ago by a lieutenant of marines, who retired on half pay when he was 23, and bought a book-selling business in Fleet Street, London. The firm still uses the symbol of a ship in full sail, with which the founder headed his invoices. Excepting for one short period the Murrays have always resided either at the firm's premises or next door, and the head of the firm has always borne the Christian name John.

"MICKEY"

As a character study "Mickey," which will be shown at the Grand Opera House on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, is a real work of art. You will never forget this adorable little waif. The story of "Mickey" is vivid with action much of which is laid in that wonderful twilight zone of comedy where half the laughs are wet with tears.

Mickey is a wholesome sweet mischievous little girl, raised by her foster mother, an old minor, and her foster mother, a wise old Indian squaw, in the mountain country, far away from the glamour and chill of the city.

Later she is sent to the city, "to make a lady of her," at the home of her aunt, a scheming, jealous hypocrite—and she doesn't find her path exactly strewn with roses. But throughout, the old cheerful, high spirits of little Mickey prevail, and with her sheer happy perseverance she conquers what seem unbearable burdens and difficulties for the little waif. There are wistful and pathetic touches in "MICKEY" as well as humor laid in with delicacy and a sure touch.

Miss Normand is always a charming comedienne, but she is at her very best in this part—in this vivid and appealing comedy drama with real living characters—told without squash pies or battles.

Magic Guard Against Rattlesnakes.

Camping out in a rattlesnake infested district with no other protection for one's bed than an encircling horse-hair rope would not give the average tenderfoot a feeling of security. A photograph in Popular Mechanics Magazine showed two campers making their bed on the Western plains, surrounded by nothing more stable than one of these ropes, as it is well known in that region that rattlesnakes have an unconquerable aversion for crawling over a rope of this kind.

An Historic Picture.

Sir William Orpen, who is painting the pictures of the historic Peace Conference, declared in an interview that it was due to Canadian enterprise that any artists had been invited to paint scenes showing the work of the conference. He said Canada had taken the initiative during the war to have official artists appointed and took the initiative with regard to the conference.

The French and American Governments were now following the British example in appointing artists. Sir William stated that his best sitter had been Emir Feisal, the Arab chief, who was able to remain still as few westerners could, and took the keenest interest in the progress of the portrait.

Alibi for the Doctor.

A Mexican by the name of Braulio Hernandez, aged twenty-three years, died in a little earhouse down by the depot. The man never had a doctor and so no one knows what killed him.—San Miguel (Cal.) Examiner.

The Touch That Helps.

Kind looks, kind words, kind acts, and warm hand shakes—these are the secondary means of grace when men are in trouble and are fighting their unseen battles.

[illegible] Thought.

[illegible] of others both in your conversation and actions from being superior as well as inferior to them.

Wonderful Work of Detectives

IF plays and stories dedicated to the proposition that the German spy system was inferior to the British system do not hold the mirror up to nature that is the fault of the authors. They ought to be truthful, for they have the facts on their side. That seems plain enough when we read the farewell message to the Special Intelligence Department by Brig.-Gen. C. K. Cockerill, who was its chief. He dealt largely in generalities, and observed that much of the work has been so secret that no reference to it is yet permissible. For instance, it cannot be doubted that Great Britain and the other Allies had their secret agents in Germany from almost the beginning of the war. Some of these spies may have been subsidized Germans, some were probably citizens of Allied countries. No doubt some of them will continue to live in Germany, and obviously to give them any public vote of thanks at this time would be in rather bad taste. The whole truth of the British spy system will never be known, whereas, thanks to the British Intelligence Department, there is probably little more to be made public concerning the operations of German spies.

Gen. Cockerill calls attention to a fact that has been overlooked, but which in itself is the strongest possible testimony to the efficiency of the staff he commanded, numbering some 6,000 operatives, both men and women. There were no acts of destruction or incendiarism committed in England in the course of the war attributable to German agents or sympathizers, with the exception of the bombardment of the coast resorts by the German navy and the dropping of bombs from Zeppelins and airplanes. Nor is there any evidence that these activities were controlled or suggested by German spies. When we reflect upon the destructive operations of the enemy in countries so remote geographically from the war as the American continent and Australia we must salute the vigilance of the British agents. The German spies' agents can boast of no service to their country comparable to the surprise of the tanks. Here was a development known weeks or months in advance to hundreds of people. Yet the tanks were designed, built, shipped to France and put into action at Cambrai without the enemy having any knowledge of what was coming, although rumor had it that the Dutch dancer who was executed as a spy in France was able to report in advance on the tanks.

Gen. Cockerill also mentions the successful withdrawal from Gallipoli. Here again it was known to scores of people in England that the withdrawal was to take place. A forewarning might have enabled the enemy to cut off the whole of the British army operating on the peninsula, and yet this, probably the most successful withdrawal of troops from a difficult position in history, was accomplished without the loss of a single man. The plans for the final offensive which broke the German army were known to many people in England, and no doubt German agents were trying their utmost to get an inkling of them. Yet they failed utterly. Perhaps in this connection it ought to be said that the use of poison gas by the Germans, which created so desperate a situation at Ypres, was a secret well kept on the other side. It is on record that the Allied generals were warned of what was coming, but since the use of gas had been specifically forbidden by The Hague Convention they refused to accept the intelligence. They are perhaps to be censured for disbelieving any deviltry on the part of the Germans, especially when the enemy had officially claimed a few days earlier that the French were using asphyxiating gas, in order to make their own diabolism appear a justifiable reprisal.

A story was published the other day to the effect that the British navy had prepared a "phony" code book, which was left in a certain place so that it would fall into enemy hands, the misinformation thus communicated confusing enemy plans and giving the British great amusement. In fact one of the most interesting features of the work of all the intelligence departments of the British Government — military, naval, war, trade, blockade and social —was the "planting" of erroneous information. According to Robert W. Champion, the London correspondent of the New York Herald, the British Intelligence Department showed a nice understanding of German mentality, and could calculate with the utmost accuracy as to just what "facts" to feed the enemy in order that they would be speedily digested. There has probably been no exaggeration of the extent of the German spy service, and perhaps there could be no under-statement of its inefficiency. It was as great a failure as any other department of the German war machine — worse, perhaps, for it deceived its creators before the war started. On the other hand, the British spy machine which was brought into existence after the war began has laid the country under a tremendous debt of gratitude.

The arrest of German spies, says Gen. Cockerill, as a rule, followed closely upon their arrival in England. On this account the enemy submarine commanders were never able to get any advance information that would aid them in their work. Of almost equal importance was the work in detecting contraband. The value of these cargoes, in addition to ships was $150,000,000. The special agents also stopped enemy remittances to the value of $350,000,000. Through their essential assistance in preventing speculative transactions in raw materials, controlling prices and estimating available supplies of vital war commodities, they saved the country vast sums.

Modified Form of Slavery.

There is no legal and formal slavery in any Christian country. It survives in a mild form in most Mohammedan countries. The peonage system of Latin-American countries is not much different from slavery, but rests upon a different theory. The peon is not supposed to be owned as property; he is supposed to be working to pay a debt which he owes the master.

Natural Lightning Conductor.

The astronomical observatory at Mount Etna does not need at any time the protection of a lightning rod. The observatory is near the summit of the volcano, and the stream of vapor constantly rising from the crater acts as a natural conductor, draining the electricity out of the clouds, so that the lightning is seldom seen there.

City in Mountain.

In southern Tunisia is a mountain of considerable size called Douirat, which once upon a time was an active volcano. Bubbles of volcanic gases made it a veritable honeycomb of caves, which in these days are inhabited. In fact, the whole mountain is a city—a human ant-hill, densely populated.

Color of Pure Copper.

The work of a Swiss investigator suggests that absolutely pure copper may have a light gray color like that of most other metals, since it is found that copper which has been ten times distilled in vacuo has only a pale rose color, while the yellow color of gold becomes much lighter under similar treatments.

Hard to Manage.

A man who has lately undertaken the management of a certain temperamental star was asked, during the past week, about the young woman's wellbeing. "How is Miss So-and-So?" ran the query. "I don't talk to her any more," was the answer. "She's under my management now."

Faint Praise

Speaking of doubtful compliments, a subscriber writes: "I wish to offer the following as one of the best examples I have ever seen. An accomplished musician was invited by a friend to a church service in order to hear the chorus choir render a special selection. The friend, highly pleased with the rendition, was awaiting with much interest her companion's verdict. It came thus, in a whisper: 'They sit well.'"—From the Outlook.

ORGANIZED BASEBALL PUTS IN ITS DEFENCE

Magnates Say That Trust Act Does not Apply to Their Operations—More Light on Late Federal League.

Washington, April 7.—The case of organized baseball in the 900,000 damage suit brought by the Baltimore Federal league club against the National and American leagues was outlined today to the jury hearing the case in the district of Columbia supreme court by George Wharton Pepper of Philadelphia, counsel for the defendants

The two old leagues, Mr. Pepper said in outlining the defence after the plaintiffs had rested their case, would attempt to disprove the contention of the Baltimore club that professional baseball as constituted during the lifetime of the Federal league was a monopoly within the meaning of the Sherman anti-trust law.

Down to Two Charges.

The defendants, Mr. Pepper asserted, would seek first to prove that professional baseball was not an interstate industry, even though the players came from various states. The Sherman anti-trust act, he said covered only interstate industries and never was designed to apply to competing sporting organizations. The complaint of the Baltimore club, the attorney declared, had narrowed down to two charges, first, that organized baseball heads, and especially Ban Johnson, president of the American league, had made serious charges against the Federal league and, second, that the heads of organized baseball and three Federal league officials had entered into a conspiracy to disrupt the Federal league, with the result that the Baltimore club, having grounds and players and ready to play ball, found itself without anybody to play against, and was damaged accordingly.

The second complaint, he said, was the more serious. The so-called "peace pact," he said, amounted to an invitation from the Federal league for organized baseball to meet that organization on common ground and develop ways and means of aiding the Federal league in its difficulties. This offer he said, was accepted at par value by organized baseball as coming from representatives of every club in the Federal league.

Invited "Peace Pact."

Mr. Pepper told the jury that organized baseball was prepared to prove that no matter whether the idea of a truce originated with the Indianapolis club or not, the call for a peace conference was endorsed by constituent clubs, all of whom had representatives present when the "peace pact" was agreed to, Baltimore included. He said if the Baltimore representatives remained silent and offered no objection to the terms under which the Federal league was dissolved it was their own fault, and organized ball had acted in good faith in all its dealings with the defunct league.

Before resting its case, the Baltimore club presented evidence which its counsel intimated showed that money from the American and National leagues for players taken over from the Federal league was received by a single individual among the defendants.

The National league paid $88,660 and the American league $40590 for players taken over from Federal league baseball clubs when the latter were disbanded, according to evidence given to the jury. Details of the payments were not disclosed although counsel for the Baltimore club intimated that the entire sum was received by an individual among the defendants.

JESS WILLARD'S FIRST FIGHT

Few of those who saw Jess Willard in his first bout in New York had the faintest idea that the lumbering big ranch hand ever would become champion of the world. Willard was entirely unknown to fame when he wandered into New York in the early summer of 1912 and obtained an opportunity to show ring followers what he could do with the gloves.

It was only by chance that Willard got a chance to show his fistic wares at all in the big city. One matchmaker after another had turned him down when he finally approached Billy Gibson, who then was the manager of the Garden A.C. Gibson had spent most of his time trying to arrange a match between Champion Jack Johnson and Joe Jeannette, so that when an open date at the Garden came around he had not arranged a card, and he had to draw up one at short notice.

The best Gibson could get for a main event was a bout between Jack Denning and a clumsy second-rate middleweight named Tommy Bergen Kid Williams, then a prominent bantam consented to take on Young Solsberg in another ten-rounder.

Gibson was at a loss for a third ten-round bout, so in desperation he consented to give the big fellow a chance, and he matched him with Arthur Pelky, a rough, tough lumberman who had made a fair showing in a white hope tournament some months previously.

Willard and Pelky were to open the show and as there were two other bouts, both considered more important, naturally the big fellow did not get a great deal for his services. As a matter of fact, Gibson thought he was acting in a decidedly liberal way when he consented to pay the big farmer 7 per cent. of the receipts, less the state tax.

For a green hand Willard did rather well in that first bout in the big city, but he did not jump into fame overnight by any means In fact, the two lumbering heavies bored the spectators, who were glad when the ten rounds were over and the clumsey giants had made way for Williams and Solsberg.

Willard fought a very careful bout He did not appear to be in the least afraid of his husky opponent, and he laughed good-naturedly most of the time, but he could not be induced to extend himself. Even in those days Willard's wind was in poor shape. He began every round with a flurry of fighting, but just when it began to look as though Pelky would go down for the count Willard would stop and spar for wind. During the remainder of the round he would hold and stall and content himself with laughing at Pelky's fruitless attempts to tear himself free from his powerful grasp.

At the end of the bout neither man was groggy, but both were decidedly tired, Willard from his own efforts and Pelky from the punishment he had received. During the fray Willard had displayed a wicked right uppercut. This attracted considerable attention, as it is seldom that a novice makes use of that blow.—Hamilton Herald.

"FIGHT PICTURES"

Willard-Johnson Bout Reels Shown in Peter Pan Theatre.

The police of East Toronto Division stopped the showing of the Willard-Johnson "fight pictures," which were being shown in the Peter Pan Moving Picture Theatre at 1969 Queen street east. The pictures of the world's championship heavyweight bout were banned by the Government, and it was said last night that the showing of the pictures was illegal.

A crowd of 150 fight fans were in the theatre, and the film had been more than half run off when the police stepped in and took possession of the picture that had been shown on the screen. A representative of the License Department, Provincial Government, was present, and the prosecution against the persons responsible for the showing of the pictures will be carried on by them.

NOT RUN FOR PROFIT.

August Herrmann, "Pirate," Defends Baseball.

Washington, April 7.—Baseball History for thirty-five years was recounted by August Herrmann, president of the National Commission, testifying in answer to unlawful monopoly charges against organized baseball made by the Baltimore Federal club in its suit for $900,000. He declared that neither the American nor National Leagues was operated for profit.

In introducing Mr. Herrmann, George Wharton Pepper, counsel for the defence, recalling some of the accusations of the plaintiffs, remarked: "Face the jury, Mr. Herrmann; I want them to see what a pirate looks like."

Attractions of Treves.

It is as an ecclesiastical city that Treves is particularly interesting. In that famous cathedral are the remains of 25 archbishops and electors and four bishops. Among its treasures is a legendary nail from the Cross, and the famous Holy Coat, given the cathedral by St. Helena. In 1891 an exhibition of the Coat attracted more than 2,000,000 pilgrims. Another attraction for pilgrims is the grave of St. Matthias in one of the ancient churches—the only grave of an apostle in Germany.

Roller Bearings.

Experiments to perfect a bearing that would withstand the heavy strains of a heavy cane mill led to the discovery of the principle, and to the development of the Hyatt roller bearing, by John Wesley Hyatt, the inventor, who also invented celluloid in his search for substitute material for ivory used in billiard balls. His studies in flexibility along the billiard ball line preceded and led up to his invention of the first flexible roller bearing.

Motor-Driven Potato Peeler.

A machine which will peel 40 pounds of potatoes in three or four minutes was described and illustrated in Popular Mechanics Magazine, the peeling being done by a revolving drum driven by a one-third horse-power motor. The inner surface of the drum has been roughened by making numerous perforations in the metal. When filled it is lowered into a wooden container and set to running.

Full Explanation.

Arnold could not bear to have anything that smacked of femininity applied to himself or his tiny baby brother. One day Arnold was keeping his eye on the baby carriage while the mother stepped into the apartment. A woman passing looked into the carriage and seeing the infant said: "Isn't she a sweet child?" Arnold, indignant, replied: "He ain't no she; it's a him"

Nature's Great Wisdom.

There is something so sublimely positive in nature. She never kills for the mere sake of killing; but every death is but one step in the vast weaving of the web of life. She has no process of destruction which, as you turn it to the other side and look at it in what you know to be its truer light, you do not see to be the process of construction.—Phillips Brooks.

SIX MILES OFF THE EARTH.

Capt. Lang Describes His Exciting Experience.

Capt. Lang, the Australian airman, recently described his experiences in his world's record for altitude for an airplane, 30,500 feet (nearly six miles), in the London Daily Mail.

"I had to make the most minute observations at every thousand feet," Capt. Lang said, "and these were recorded on a board strapped to my right leg. I had also to note down how the temperature changes the machine's speed, the revolutions, the water temperature in the engine, the oil temperature, the petrol pressure, the gallons of petrol consumed per hour, and occasionally to look over the side to note our bearings."

The flight had been contemplated for some weeks, and for that reason he and his observer, Lieut. Blowes, had remained strict teetotallers and had not indulged in a smoke for weeks. The machine used was a De Haviland 9 bombing machine, made by the Aircraft Manufacturing Company, fitted with a 450-horse-power Napier Lion engine. They ascended from Martlesham, near Ipswich, in a gale of wind.

Each airman wore two pairs of silk socks, three pairs of stockings, thigh boots lined with lamb's wool, thick underclothing, three sweaters, an Arctic suit lined with fur, a Balaclava, and a fur-lined cap, goggles lined with cotton wool, electrically heated gloves.

When the machine reached 30,500 feet there were about seventy degrees of frost.

"During the first 8,000 feet the machine tossed about like a leaf," Capt. Lang added. "We were so blown out of our course that when we were six miles up we were about twenty-five miles out at sea off Yarmouth. The sun was shining brightly, and though it was a little hazy I could see ships far out at sea, and occasionally I had glimpses of the Thames.

"I had a small glass shield fitted in the machine to protect my right eye, but there was no shield for the left eye, the gun preventing one being fixed. At 20,000 feet I had to take off my goggles because the oxygen frosted on the glass. Thereupon my left eye watered and froze, and was soon as big as a plum. For the next 10,000 feet I had the use of only one eye.

"After 20,000 feet, owing to a breakage, I was unable to continue recording the engine's revolutions. Then 1,500 feet higher Lieut. Blowes collapsed through a breakage in the tube supplying the oxygen.

"At 27,000 feet we got into a very bumpy atmosphere, and were so tossed about that the machine became uncontrollable. At 28,000 feet I felt a shortage of oxygen, and it was when I signalled to Lieut. Blowes for more that I found that he was unconscious, and had been so, as I afterwards discovered, since 26,000 feet up, when he fell back in an attempt to pass me a note.

"I managed to hang on till we reached 30,500 feet, when, in a temperature equal to 70 degrees of frost, Fahrenheit, the petrol pressure pumps behind the engine ceased to work."

Of the descent Capt. Lang said the first 10,000 feet occupied 25 minutes, when he was well off Yarmouth in a wind of from 50 to 170 miles an hour. At 20,000 feet Lieut. Blowes regained consciousness.

The two airmen suffered badly from frost on the hands and face. Lieut. Blowes, who is only 19, has serious injuries to his hands.

Laughter.

"Laughter is man's own attribute," says Rabelais, and from the time man began to think of other matters than eating and waging war he has wooed laughter in some form or other according to his ideas of what is comical. The early pictured jokes on canvas, stone and paper are not conducive to wild hilarity at this day and age, but they amused the people of the time and in making men laugh helped to civilize the race.

Christmas Gifts.

The custom of giving Christmas gifts is not traceable to its beginnings. The Encyclopedia Britannica says that "in Britain the 25th of December was a festival long before the conversion to Christianity, for Bede (de temp. rat. ch. 13) relates that 'the ancient peoples of Angli began the year on the 25th of December.'" The custom also prevailed in the Germanic countries.

Human Fruitage.

Nature does not bear fruit for herself, but for man. The branch does not bear the rich clusters for its own selfish appetite. Our fruitage must be for mankind. Your aim is a mistaken one if you are seeking spiritual comfort, quiet satisfaction, joy here and hereafter, just for your own little self. —Christian Herald

Friday evening last the Parent's Circle of Queen Mary School held a most enjoyable gathering of parents teachers and friends of the school, at the home of Major and Mrs. Medd, Charlotte street, where an excellent program was listened to with much pleasure by those present. Splendid piano solos and recitations were rendered by pupils of Queen Mary School and vocal duets and a double quartette by pupils of King Edward school under the direction of Mr. Gould, vice principal of that school were exceptionally well rendered. The singing of the different parts by such young children reflected great credit not only upon the children themselves but also upon their director, Mr. Gould, who also acted as accompanist. After the program refreshments were served by members of the circle when a most enjoyable evening was brought to a close.

"FLO-FLO" AT THE GRAND.

"Flo-Flo" at the Grand Opera House on Saturday night was a first-class musical comedy. "The Bride Shop" was hard to excell, but those who were present at both attracions are, of the opinion that "Flo-Flo" was a little superior in several features. Both were exceedingly good.

MAKE SCARF FROM OLD SHAWL

Despite Ravages of Moths, Grandmother's Pride May Be Made Into Useful and Attractive Garment.

Possibly you are one of those people who got out grandmother's old cashmere shawl which had been packed away in the trunk in the attic for years, writes a correspondent, with plans for a wonderful new evening coat, and were desolated to discover that it had been almost riddled by moths. And when you hung it out in the sun for days and got rid of all the pesky little animals and had reveled in its gorgeous coloring, and regretted the coat long and hard, you had wrapped it up in tar paper and put it back into the chest for another long period of oblivion.

But here is good news for you. You can use the glorious thing after all. Nothing is more fetching or chic than one of these new scarfs that some fortunate people are using to liven up last year's blue serge or black velveteen suit, and they look as if they were designed for just those of us who have only small bits of our old shawls available.

Possibly it wasn't the moths that prevented you from using your shawl. Maybe grandma was a Hooverizer, although she didn't know it, and wore hers till it almost dropped to pieces. Whatever it may have been, get it out and see how many narrow strips you can get from the good parts. Buy a piece of red cashmere, that same lovely red that the centers of these shawls were, cut the scarf from it of the desired shape, bind it round the edge with a band two or three inches wide made from the pieces of the shawl, and line it with red crepe de chine, georgette crepe or two harmonizing colors of chiffon, one over the other.

It will be so lovely when you get it finished that you will want to make another, and you might make one for mother, using black for the foundation instead of the red, lined with black shirred chiffon over red.

STEEL BRIDGE CAN BE BUILT AT AN OUTLAY OF $235,000

R. Sheehy & Sons Have Sent to Council Tentative Estimate For Such a Structure—Single Track Bridge of Steel Would Cost $215,000

There is in the city a well defined sentiment in favor of having the City Council consider the matter of building a steel bridge instead of the concrete structure that is now engaging the attention of the Aldermen. There are heavy tax payers who believe the Aldermen should at least consider the cost of a steel bridge before they make their final decision.

The attitude of the Aldermen on this aspect of the case is a mystery as they prefer to do business in camera and refuse steadfastly to take the ratepayers into their confidence. It is rumored however, that at least two members of the bridge committee are in favor of giving the steel men a chance to put in estimates and that plans for a steel structure may yet be called for.

R. Sheehy & Sons have tendered for the concrete bridge as now planned but their figures are of course a secret until the tenders have all been passed upon and one accepted or the entire bunch again rejected. Messrs Sheehy have besides sent in what may be called a tentative tender for a steel bridge and they are quite willing that these figures shall be given to the public even though the Aldermen are keeping them to themselves. Messrs Sheehy base their estimates on plans that have been prepared by the Dominion Bridge Company than which there is no better in America. One estimate is for a bridge 810 feet long, 42 feet wide and with six foot sidewalks, just as are provided for in Engineer Barber's plan now in the hands of the Council. This bridge it is estimated could be built for $235,000 although Messrs Sheehy do not propose at this stage of the negotiations to show their hand entirely. If tenders for a steel bridge are called for they will submit figures.

The $235,000 bridge calls for a double street car track. For a bridge with a single track the tentative estimate is $215,000. The Dominion Bridge Company agree to place all the steel work required at a cost of $140,000 for the wide or $120,00 for the narrow bridge. Such a bridge as Messrs Sheehy point out in a communication to the Council can be supervised by a resident engineer. It can, besides, be completed this year, another important consideration.

The claim has been made by the advocates of concrete that the life of a steel bridge is temporary, that railway companies are obliged to renew such structures every thirty years. Steel experts, however, laugh at this claim and assert that such bridges will last indefinitely. All that is necessary is a coat of paint every fifteen years or so

The steel bridge which Messrs Sheehy have in mind would in every way comply with the Governmental requirements for such structures.

SAYS COMMUNISM IS THE ONLY SOLUTION OF LABOR PROBLEM

New Government in Budapest is Making no War on Capital

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Budapest, April 8.—Great earnestness is displayed by members of the Government in carrying out the work assigned to them. They are ready to discuss their plans and to solve problems, and they refrain from abusing capitalism. The maintenance of strict discipline to protect the Bourgeois's and to prevent Red Guard outbreaks has been decided upon by the Government.

Jules Alpari, prominent communist, and Jules Sevresi, People's Commissioner in charge of the socialization of factories, argue that communism is the only method by which Central Europe can be saved from total ruin. Capitalism, they maintain, is unable to cope with the threat of bankruptcy, high wages and unwillingness of laborers to work. They point out that under communism workmen cannot strike and are obliged to accept reasonable wages.

German Minister Is Under Arrest

Ask Legislature For Bridge Grant

Mayor Duncan, Chairman Phelan and the other members of the Bridge Committee are in Toronto today to interview members of the Legislature in connection with the possibility of obtaining a grant towards the erection of the Hunter street bridge.

They may go to the Hydro Commission for financial assistance if found necessary on account of the proposed bridge being built with a view to accommodating the street railway tracks.

SOLDIERS ON LAPLAND.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, April 8.—Eleven hundred and sixty out of nineteen hundred soldiers returning on the Lapland are due for dispersal at Ontario points. The Lapland will probably dock about April 11.

Detroit Rejects Public Ownership

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Detroit, April 8.—The proposed purchase by the city of Detroit of the local lines of the Detroit United Railways at a cost of $31,500,000, was rejected, according to almost complete unofficial returns. Sixty per cent of the vote was required to carry. The figures stood, 50,001 in favor of the plan and 64,174 against it.

WILL ENJOIN CITY COUNCIL

The City Council may be restrained by injunction from going ahead with the proposed concrete bridge.

Time goes on and the public receives no additional information in conection with the Hunter street bridge proposition. The committee seems to have arrived in a cul de sac and, while casting about them for a way out of the difficulty, have no statement to make which would enlighten the people as to the nature of the trouble which is holding up the awarding of the contract.

It seems that, having set their hearts upon a concrete bridge in the days when steel was a prohibitive price, and having engaged a consulting engineer with an established reputation in concrete bridge construction, after giving him an idea of the kind of structure they desired, as a result of having "put the cart before the horse" by submitting the by-law to raise the amount, which it was roughly estimated would be sufficient to carry out the undertaking before they called for tenders, they find that $250,000 is not sufficient to build the bridge, even if the lowest tender were accepted and are compelled to find some solution of the difficulty or appeal to the people for authority to spend more money upon the work.

There are numerous additional difficulties of a minor character facing the committee, but a lack of funds to build such a structure as Engineer Barber planned is the chief stumbling block, and this accounts for the suggestions which have been made in committee several times to have all ornamentation removed from the proposed structure and have it shortened considerably, even if it leaves the grades at the approaches somewhat precipitous.

The truth of the matter is that while concrete would have been, at the time the plans for the bridge were drawn, much the cheaper, there are a great many people in Peterborough who should be capable of expressing an intelligent opinion upon the matter, who feel that post-war conditions have reversed the relative positions of steel and concrete as regards expense and that today a steel bridge could be erected for much less money.

There are members of the committee—at least two of them—who have several times suggested that plans be prepared for a steel bridge before Council decides in the matter, but the majority of the members feel that, having already expended a very considerable sum of money in connection with the plans for a concrete structure, it would be regrettable if it were found necessary to give up that idea and turn their attention to an absolutely new kind of a bridge at such a late date.

Only the other night the committee recommended the payment of the last instalment of Engineer Barber's charges for his professional services in connection with the much-talked-of bridge. It amounted to $3000, and an additional $1000 had been paid at a previous date.

Today we find a deputation consisting of the Special Bridge Committee waiting upon the Provincial Government in the hope that sufficient assistance might be secured from that quarter to help them out of the difficulty in which they find themselves as a result of inadequate funds. If the deputation meet with failure in this direction, they will try and secure the desired aid through the Hydro Commission, and in the event of this being granted from such a source, Peterborough will pay for the shot in the end as it will be charged to the city by the Hydro when the time comes to take over the electric railway. Assistance from the Hydro Commission would, therefore, really take the form of a loan.

In the event of the City Council deciding to award the contract for the construction of such a concrete structure as is proposed at present, without making an attempt to secure plans and estimates upon a steel bridge, there are citizens in the city of Peterborough who will undoubtedly secure an injunction to stop such an action.

COUNCIL OF FOUR IS SPEEDING UP

In Session Today Take Up Matter of Forming a Tribunal For Trial of Ex-Kaiser and Crown Prince.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, April 8.—Council of Four met this morning at the residence of Premier Lloyd George. President Wilson was not able to attend the forenoon session, but hoped to be able to be at the meeting this afternoon at his house. The over-night tension in Peace Conference circles had not been dispelled when the Council of Four met today. In Conference circles, however, it was felt that session today would serve to clear the atmosphere.

The first question taken up at the forenoon session of Council was that of procedure. This was considered in an effort to accelerate the work of the Council. It was planned to devote the afternoon session to the subject of responsibility for the war, including the question of a tribunal to try the former German Emperor, the former Crown Prince and others, on which divided reports have been presented. It was said by the American members of the Peace Conference today that the general situation was improved somewhat because of an agreement reached by the Commission on the reparations on main features of this question, leaving only a few unessential details for adjustment. Generally a more hopeful tune prevailed in conference circles as the day went on.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Munich, April 8—Complete severance from old German Imperialism, as declared still to be manifest in the Ebert-Scheidemann government of Germany, and the resumption of "Brotherly connection," with Russian and Hungarian peoples is announced in the proclamation of the new Soviet government for Bavaria, formed here.

Demonstrations occurred in Munich against the new revolutionary Government. They were dispersed by troops, the advices state.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Copenhagen, April 8.—A political movement of great importance is imminent in the region of Hamburg, reports from Berlin say. Doctors Herz and Hauffenberg, Spartacan leaders, it is added, have almost succeeded in making themselves masters of the situation and in converting Hamberg and the region between Hamburg and Bremen into a Soviet republic.

BAVARIA NOW HAS A NEW AUTOCRAT

PEOPLE PROTESTING AGAINST UNLIMITED POWERS GIVEN TO MINISTER

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Copenhagen, April 8.—A Berlin despatch says that Erich Miehsam, a prominent communist, who is included in the Bavarian Soviet Government, has been given unlimited powers by the Bavarian Central Council, according to the Achtuhr-blatt and thus exercises an unrestricted dictatorship. It expresses the opinion that the Soviet Government however, will not last, as the people are opposed to the dictatorship and hope that the counter measures taken by Premier Hoffman of the old government will be effective. Protests against the formation of a Soviet government, voiced at a political meeting in Bamberg, Northern Bavaria, are reported in despatches from that city. Deputies of all Bourgeois parties of the three Franconian Governments, upper, lower and middle Franconia, met in Bamberg and registered a unanimous protest against the proclamation of the new regime at Munich.

Judge Torrison, Chicago, has denied People's Gas Company's petition for dismissal of the city's $10,000,000 suit, which amount is claimed to be due consumers through overcharges and rebates.

FARMERS OBJECT TO ROAD SYSTEM

WANT LOCAL INSTEAD OF PROVINCIAL HIGHWAYS, THEY TELL MINISTER

Toronto, April 8.—A large deputation of farmers bearing a petition representing ten thousand members of Farmers' Clubs, appeared before Hon. Finlay Macdiarmid, Minister of Public Works, today, opposing the Sarnia-Montreal highway. Burnah Bowman headed the deputation. Speakers said the United Farmers are not opposed to good roads. They did not, however, want a few trunk roads, but a good system of rural well paved, radiating from the towns to the cities, and cheaper side lines.

E. C. Drury, of the U. C. F., said the financial situation did not justify the proposed expenditure on provincial highways. He said the Hamilton-Toronto-Niagara highway was defensible, but he would oppose the Kingston road, which paralleled three railway lines. The deputation pointed out that the Toronto-Hamilton highway cost $30,000 a mile, and 30 miles of market roads improved at $1000 a mile would be more valuable to the farmer.

Mr. Macdiarmid pointed out the importance of a provincial highway to agriculture, and asked the farmers to reconsider their petition.

PREMIER HEARST TELLS HOW PLEBISCITE WILL BE TAKEN

Four Questions Will Be Submitted to the Voters of the Province—Important Changes Proposed in the Temperance Measure as it Now Stands

Are you in favor of the repeal of the Ontario Temperance Act? ....

Are you in favor of the sale of light beer containing not more than 2 51-100 per cent. alcohol, weight measure, through government agencies, and amendments to the Ontario Temperance Act to permit such sale? ....

Are you in favor of the sale of light beer containing not more than 2 51-100 per cent. alcohol, weight measure, in standard hotels in local municipalities that, by majority vote, favor such sale, and amendments to the Ontario Temperance Act to permit such sale? ....

Are you in favor of the sale of spirituous and malt liquors through Government agencies, and amendments to the Ontario Temperance Act to permit such sale? ....

Promises made by the Ontario Government in connection with its temperance policy are to be carried out under two bills which will be introduced in the Legislature within a day or two. Sir William Hearst made an important statement yesterday in the House, in which he announced, as above, the language of the four questions to be submitted to the electors in the referendum, likely this fall. At the same time he told of the provisions that will be incorporated in the Ontario Temperance Act to permit the Government to take over control of the sale of liquors in Ontario. The date on which the referendum is to be taken will be fixed by order in Council.

Local Option.

By the foregoing questions the Government hopes to get public opinion fairly expressed. It does not believe that if it submitted the one question as provided in the O. T. A.—the first of the four quoted above—it would be in the best interests for temperance. If the first question is carried it means that the old license law as it existed prior to 1916 will be revived. If the second question is answered by a majority in the affirmative the Government will have to make provision for the sale of light beer through Government sales agencies. If the third question is answered by a majority in the affirmative the Government will at once make provision for the sale of light beer in standard hotels. However, it should be noted that even if the Province generally decided in favor of question three it is entirely a matter of local option as to it being put into force in the individual municipalities. In this case it will be a majority vote as on the general question. There will be no three-fifths vote required as was the case under form legislation. If question four is carried the Government will have to make necessary regulations for the sale of all kinds of spirituous liquors in houses only.

It will be seen from the foregoing that if the bar does come back—

Financial assistance has already been given by the Dominion Government. The Prime Minister promised consideration of the request.

J. J. Turner & Sons Banquet Employes

A most enjoyable time was spent last evening at the Empress Hotel on the occasion of the first union banquet of the employers and employees of the firm of J. J. Turner & Sons Ltd. a banquet which, considering the unqualified success of the initial undertaking is bound to become an annual event in the history of this lately organized firm. The get-together and pull-together spirit, which conceived the idea of this banquet was evident every moment throughout the entire evening, and nothing occurred to in the slightest degree to mar the universal feeling of harmony and good will existing between this firm and its employees. With the exception of two or three who were unavoidably absent, practicaly everyone in any way connected with this progressive firm was present, and all came determined to make this an evening to think about and talk about, no matter what undertakings of a similar nature may transpire in the future.

Promptly at 7.30 the doors were opened to the large dining hall which had been modestly, yet tastefully decorated for the occasion and the company sat down to a repast such as only this popular and home-like hotel is famous for. Nothing which could add to the comfort and convenience of those assembled was left undone and too much cannot be said for the service given by the management of this excellent hotel.

After full justice had been done to the various courses served, the following program was carried out:

Toasts—The King, our guests and the chairman.

Song—"There's a Land" (Alliston)—Mr. H. Farr. Response by Mr. J. J. Turner and Mr. A. W. Turner.

Reading—"Lary O'Dee"—Miss F. Stewart.

Song—"The Diver" (E. J. Loder)—Mr. T. Boddy.

"Some Stories"—Mr. Reg. H. Turner.

Our Travellers—Mr. W. P. Turner.

Dance—Sailors' Hornpipe—Miss E. Price. Response by Mr. G. C. Stapley and Mr. H. F. G. Dreyer.

Song—"The Flight of Ages (F. Bevan)—Mr Geo. E. Chandler.

"Auld Lang Syne."

Mr. R. J. Devey, accompanist.

Mr. Geo. E. Chandler, chairman.

In passing, we need only say that every number was a success. The addresses of members of the firm were most inspiring and full of spirit of optimism and good will, which permeates this whole institution.

The evening's proceedings concluded by the singing of "Auld Lang Syne," and the National Anthem.

THE HOUSING PROJECT.

THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT'S housing project, by which $25,000,000 is made available as loans to encourage wage earners, and particularly returned soldiers, in the acquisition of their own homes, is a plan which will stimulate thrift and eliminate a large amount of pauperism. There is nothing in the average workingman's condition that keeps him in poverty more than the everlasting paying month after month of rent which gives him no return other than a temporary residence. It is safe to say that the average wage earner living in tenement house or flat pays in rent one-quarter at least of his year's earnings, always assuming he is one of the fortunates who enjoy steady employment the year round. And in the autumn of his life he has nothing whatever to show for his lifelong payments in rent but a profitless investment in other mens' property. But now, in the Government's housing plan, opportunity is to knock at the workingman's door in the shape of a loan for home-acquiring purposes, payment of which is to be extended over a period of twenty, and in special cases thirty, years. Not only may one borrow from the Government for a dwelling not exceeding $4500, inclusive of land, but owners of lots have the same borrowing privilege, providing they build thereon for their own occupancy. And this will encourage many small lot owners to build thereon and thus materially affect the municipality's revenue from assessment.

All of this is a truly advanced democratic move in consideration of the sons of toil, who really create a nation's wealth and prosperity, and will redound to the interests of the nation in general. It will relieve the congestion in cites and the evils arising therefrom, promote the health and independence of the working classes and make for an uplifted manhood. A man owning his own home—even on Government owned money—will be exalted by the spirit of freedom for which true democracy stands, encouraged to greater efforts for himself and his family, and impelled to active interest in his municipality and country.

This scheme provides for attached and semi-detached dwellings of from four to six rooms, exclusive of summer kitchen and bathroom, and erected on standards which shall enforce requirements for health, comfort and convenience. But it is to be hoped that we do not fall into the error of too much standardization in regard to architecture, and have springing up here and there whole streets lacking in that picturesqueness which diversity of design is capable of creating. In too many Canadian towns and cities similarity in architecture is depressingly prevalent. In the United States they excel us in regard to architecture, and even invest their comparatively cheap dwellings with a beauty that refreshes the eye and pleases the senses. Whole streets whereon scarcely two houses are alike or even similar are the rule in American towns rather than the exception, as in many Canadian communities. We trust that when the Government is loaning the cost of house-building, some attention will be paid to such diversity in structure as will beautify the locality as well as benefit the beneficiaries of the housing project.

STILL LOOKING TO PARIS.

THE GERMAN BARON Kuehlmann reflects the Hun mind when he blatantly declares "In August, 1925, we shall be in Paris in favorable conditions, and the German Empire will be reborn more speedily than people think." This is the sort of people some pacifists are demanding to be treated leniently by the Peace Conference so that they may have opportunity for speedy recuperation. With such declarations as that by Dr. Kuehlmann, and there are many of them, ringing in their ears,—can it be wondered that France insists that Germany pay to the uttermost farthing, and that her borders be retired beyond the Rhine in protection of Paris? However, the Germans are a nation of boasters, but during the past war all their vital predictions failed. They were to be in Paris in September, 1914; some reached there, 'tis true, but as prisoners. They were to sacrifice a million men and force peace in the spring of 1918; they lost the million, but also lost the war. Still, for all that, the same will to destroy France evidently exists in the German mind, and let us hope this fact will be kept in the foreground by the Peace Conference and the League of Nations in all questions affecting the status of a nation to whom treaties are but scraps of paper and weaker nations legitimate prey to their world power ambition.

ARISTOCRACY WITH US ALWAYS.

AFTER OVER FOUR YEARS of war, a terrific struggle between mighty powers for and against democracy, it is to be hoped that the triumph of democracy over aristocracy is assured. But, while the former may prevail in principle, we probably shall have always with us some sort of aristocracy in practice. A Labor member of the Imperial House recently declared that there would never cease to be an aristocracy of intellect, which would rule in spite of all. Taking his view, one might also add that there will always be an aristocracy of wealth and of power. Robespierre was the aristocrat of the French revolution, and Lenine is the aristocrat of Bolshevism, and both bloody ones at that. In this connection, James Carlyle Hoggan, doubting the triumph of democracy as yet, quotes the following passage in Carlyle's "French Revolution," and wonders, had the writer been alive today, would he have revised his comparison. The passage reads:

> "Yes, friends, ye may sit and look: bodily or in thought, all France, and all Europe, may sit and look; for it is a day like few others. Oh, one might weep like Xerxes: so many serried rows sit perched there, like winged creatures, alighted out of Heaven: all these, and so many more that follow them, shall have wholly fled aloft again, vanishing into the deep blue; and the memory of this day still be fresh. It is the baptism day of Democracy; sick Time has given it birth; the numbered months being run. The extreme unction day of Feudalism! A superannuated system of Society, decrepit with toils . . . and with thefts and brawls named glorious victories, and with prodigacies, sensualities, and on the whole with dotage and senility—is now to die; and so, with death-throes and birth-throes, a new one is to be born. What a work, O Earth and Heavens, what a work! Battles and Bloodshed, September Massacres, Bridges of Lodi, retreats of Moscow, Waterloos, Peterloos, [illegible] Tar-barrels and Guillotines;—and from this present date, if one might prophesy, some two centuries of it still to fight! Two centuries, hardly less; before Democracy go through its due, most baleful, stages of Quackocracy; and a pestilential World be burnt up, and have begun to grow green and young again."

DICTATORSHIPS OF OPINION.

(Chicago News.)

HOW FAR REMOVED from American ideas of freedom are the principles that actuate extremists in Europe is strikingly shown in the determination of the Bavarian government to "socialize the press." The Munich newspapers have just been informed by an official appointed to superintend the process that they must choose between ownership by the employes and ownership by city or state. This, which concerns only the economic side, is unimportant compared with certain regulations that he announces. The "bourgeoise" newspapers will not have the right to express political opinions, but must confine themselves to the publication of educational or diverting articles. Only the communist parties will have the right to political freedom of the press.

Here is a plain announcement of the intention to establish a tyranny of opinion as a permanent institution. Extremists are the first to protest in all countries against the least infraction of their supposed right to say and write exactly what they please under all circumstances. And yet experience has always show that the first thing they do when they get into power is to establish a dictatorship of opinion absolutely unthinkable in a free country. The only freedom which concerns them is the freedom to express their own views. No others have any rights in this respect, and they art not ashamed to proclaim it in all their official acts. It was so in Russia. It is so in Bavaria, which has from the first been more radical than other parts of Germany. It will certainly be a principle of action wherever bolshevism manages to get control.

All dictatorships are afraid of free discussion, from that of a czar to that of a Trotsky, for the simple reason that they know their power rests principally upon the support of a small and aggressive minority that impudently suppresses the majority. On the other hand, free and representative democracies canot exist without free discussion. In a true democracy the men who feel the inequalities of existing conditions have always a means of expression. They have not only that, but they have also a remedy at hand. The process may not be so swift as that of a revolutionaryp overturn, but it has the advantage of getting somewhere and of not ignoring the equal rights of the other citizens of the nation.

THE LABOR GAZETTE, a periodical published by the British Board of Trade, gives an interesting account of the movements in the cost of living since the beginning of the war. By the time of the armistice the cost of food had risen to 133 per cent. of the pre-war figure, and the general cost of living to 120 per cent. Since he beginning of February prices have begun to fall, the cost of food has gone down from 130 per cent. to 120 per cent. of the 1914 figures, and there is no doubt that it will continue to move in the right direction.

BENT ON A WORLD REVOLUTION.

(Chicago Tribune.)

The forces of revolution now governing in Europe are not primarily concerned with peace. They are making war fiercely at this moment. They are bent on a world revolution which shall make away with liberalism, individual liberty, private property and the whole existing system of society. The Paris covenant offers nothing to these extremists, and will not check them. The only thing that will check them is immediate material and moral support to the real bulwarks of democracy wherever they still stand.

TO-DAY'S STORY

"I know!" exclaimed Tidbit Mixem who had been wracking his brains for a way to entertain his visitor—"I know!"—I'll take you about the city and show you the historical spots and things."

"Splendid — nothing could be splendider," accepted Endzin Odds "How fortunate you are to live in a city whose glorious history must be a constant inspiration to you."

"Yes, indeed," smole Mixem, And he started in by taking his guest to the old Tuffscow mansion, where in years agone Fetlock Tuffscow wrote his immortal "Ode to an Angel [illegible]

"I am impressed beyond words," breathed Odds. "Ah," the priceless privilege of passing one's life where one can visit repeatedly such a relic of greatness!"

"You said it," nodded Mixem. And from there they visited the old town hall, where in the nation's infancy its heroic lawmakers had drafted and signed the deathless Emancipation of Everybody.

"How I envy you your contiguity to this fountain head of inspiration and truth!" jealousied Odds.

"Yep," replied Mixem modestly. And they continued their tour and had quite a nice day, and on his way home after taking Odds to the station Mixem thought, "Well, I'm real glad he dropped in on me—I've been meaning to visit those places for years and years and I might never have got to it."

LITTLE BENNY'S NOTEBOOK

(By Lee Pape.)

Me and Puds Simkins was wawking along, jest wawking along, and we came to a middle size house with a little kid standing in a big window eating all size chocklits out of a box, and me and Puds stopped and started to watch him, me saying, I bet he thinks he's grate, if he was half as grate as he thinks he is, he wouldent be able to stand up strate.

Wich the kid jest kepp on taking chocklits out of the box and eating them, Puds saying, I sippose he thinks we're jellus, well, thats ony wat he thinks, wy, I wouldent take one of his old chocklits if he came out heer on his neez with one and begged me all his mite.

Me neither, I sed, I wouldent take one if he sed please 1000 times and then gave me a dollar and 15 sents for eating it.

Wich jest then a lady came up in back of the kid and pointed at me and Puds and sed sumthing, and then she opened the window, saying, Wont you boys have a peece of candy?—my little boy will be very glad to offer you some, wont you, Clarents?

Wich the kid sed, Yes mam, sounding as if he was thinking, No mam and leened out of the window and reetched the box of candy, and me and Puds looked at each other, me saying, Do you think it would be impolite if we dident? and Puds saying, Kind of

And both of us each did, taking pritty big ones so the lady wouldent think we was jest taking them out of politeness. Proving you never know wat youll do till the time comes.

WIT AND WISDOM

Preferred it Stuffed.

"Do you want oysters, Louise?" asked the man as he glanced over the bill of fare in the west-end restaurant.

"Yes, George," answered the woman, who was vainly trying to touch her toes to the floor, "and I want a hassock, too."

George nodded, and as he handed the waiter his written order, he said, "Bring a hassock for the lady."

A moment later the waiter, apparently puzzled, approached the man and, leaning over him, said:

"Excuse me, sir, but I have only been here two days and do not want to make any mistakes. Will the lady have the hassock boiled or fried?"

Vain Efforts.

Attorney-General Gregory said at a farewell luncheon:

"Bores are always talkative. There's no such thing as a silent bore. A bore once said to me at a party:

"'Jones isn't very polite. He yawned three times while I was talking to him yesterday.'

"'But,' said I, 'perhaps he wasn't yawning. Perhaps he wanted to say something.'"

Pessimistic.

"What do you know about the League of Nations?"

"Not much, but I'm betting money that every time they stage a world's series, it will be somewhere in Europe, too far away for me to go to see it."

ONE MORE PEACE PROBLEM

(Chicago News)

An article on "The Middle West's Peace Problems" in the current Atlantic Monthly is really an attempt to interpret the mind of the farmer of this section as affected by the events of the last four years. The author finds the farmer feeling more independent than ever before in his life and this feeling manifesting itself in such organizations as the Non-partisan League of North Dakota. He finds that the farmer has developed a strong sense of the possibilities of community teamwork, this sense having been quickened by all the war activities in which he has participated. The farmer is said to be somewhat inclined to revise his former view that government ownership of railroads might bring untold benefits, painful experiences in the first year of government control having had their natural effect upon him.

The subject nearest the farmer's heart, however, in the price of land and the price of agricultural products. As to the former, the article expresses the cheerful view that there is slight prospect of any real reduction in the value of plowlands. Early reductions in the prices of agriculture products are assumed as a matter of course, and the question is asked whether the farmer, resenting these, "may not seek through some system of of communism to correct what he conceives as an injustice." In other words, may not the North Dakota idea of issuing state bonds for the establishment and operation of all sorts of projects gain wide approval? "The war," the writer of the article adds, "taught the lesson of thinking in large figures and of doing things in a colossal way, and the idea that the same process will apply to peace is likely to bring experiments that would not have been considered half a decade ago."

The war has indeed taught the lesson of doing things in a big way and it would be extremely unfortunate if any considerable part of our population should lose the broadened vision which that experience has furnished. But it has also taught that doing big things in a big way by government may be extremely costly and therefore may be justified only by a great emergency. Farmers probably have seen less than any other class of the population of the other side of war organization and a fairly large number of industries classed as non essential might complete the picture for them. Again, the first year of government control of railroads, coupled with the recent announcement of an increase in telegraph rates by Postmaster-General Burleson, is a gentle reminder of the fact that in the government big way of doing things there is no magic that can remove the operation of plain economic laws.

The tendency of farmers to co-operate is a fairly familiar phenomenon of our political and industrial history and there is reason to believe that may be stimulated by the feeling that hey now have a greater stake to protect than ever before. Whether this will result in demands for a wider government operation of concerns closely connected with agriculture remains to be seen. But it is permissable to say that if the establishment and operation in question and so political in character the prospects of success will be poor. Every one knows what has happened to the great political banks, as well as to other enterprises where political control was too much in evidence.

The farmer and the city consumer certainly should co-operate for the benefit of the entire people. Class organization against class is harmful, but the widest possible organization for the good of the entire public through the elimination of monopoly and all forms of economic waste is demimently esirable.

GAY FROCKS FOR THE YOUNG GIRL

Increased Brilliancy of Wardrobes in Honor of Returning Soldiers.

BEST GOWNS FOR "FLAPPERS"

Street Clothes Proclaim Victory Like Trumpets, With Their Scarlet Coloration and Embroideries in Red and Black.

New York.—America has not yet found a [illegible] sixteen. The English call her the "flapper," and the Anglo-Saxon world uses the expression, whether or not it approves of it. In America it is not liked, but no one has risen to put this type of young person in a niche and give her a name.

And she is quite important, proclaims a fashion writer. She deserves a strong appellation—a quick, vibrant, significant name for her class, her type and her virility. We have buried under the cobwebs of oblivion the "sweet sixteen" phrase. Booth Tarkington has made the one word "seventeen" classify, at least for America, the youth of our land, with its awkward, stumbling tendencies toward manhood, its budding emotionalism sternly suppressed through pride and shame, its desire for girls' company, and its contempt for that desire. But if we applied the single word "sixteen" to that gay, ecstatic, poised, self-assured, highly educated, superintelligent, adventurous class of tall, slim things that spread over the land, usually setting the pace for their mothers' fashions, it would be puerile.

It is difficult to be pessimistic if one keeps close to the side of girls of that age. Their outlook on life, their faith in themselves and the world, their unbounded ability to find pleasure unaided by anyone else, renews youth in middle age. They are no longer creatures held on a leash. They are rarely asked to obey; they are constantly consulted by their mothers, and they usually take an intelligent part in the management of their home, its social environments, its financial expenditures, its ideals, and its ambitions.

Granting these things—and everyone does grant them who has had any close companionship with the typical American girl, it is natural that her interest in clothes should be strong, and not only strong but usually exceedingly good. She dresses herself, as a rule, better than her mother can dress her.

Many Cater to Girls.

Working downward—or upward, rather—through these psychological phases of girlhood among the Anglo-Saxons, and especially the North Americans, one finds the reason for the establishments of many successful dressmaking houses which cater to young girls. Few of the great establishments here or abroad neglect the "flapper." From the time she is twelve until she makes her bow to society at eighteen she is catered to by houses that expend much ingenuity and brilliancy of workmanship on her especial type of clothing.

Two of the important financial successes in the dressmaking world of New York started with the schoolgirl. Fifth avenue houses which cater to dowagers and sensational young matrons have determined this year to place young girls' clothes in their salons. Youngsters who try to look like Mary Pickford are often used as mannequins, but they have not been a success, because the sixteen-year-older doesn't wish to look like Mary Pickford. She wouldn't be caught with curls down her back, a sweet smile, and chubby legs below a short skirt. She often produces the most extreme fashions, which her older sister and her mother copy. She is the type, one might claim, for all the fashions of the civilized world today. That's a sweeping statement, but just run over the gamut of fashionable clothes for the last five years and see if you don't come to that conclusion. The bobbed hair, the short skirt, the round neck, the baby sleeves, the sashes, the buttoned-down-the-back frocks, the short coats—these are the fashions that have ruled the world and have begun in the schoolroom.

What She Wears Today.

The youngster of sixteen chooses materials for her own clothes that are the same as those worn by her elders, whom she envies little these days, because she rules a world of her own, that everyone acknowledges. She doesn't have to dress herself up in long clothes and high head dresses and play that she is old. She has been known to grudgingly loan some of her clothes to her young married sister for an especially smart affair! She likes georgette crepe for her evening gowns, and therefore she wears a good deal of it. Velveteen has found her approval, and she orders school frocks and afternoon dance frocks in it.

She has a tailored suit which was especially designed for her judgment, and which she accepted. It has a coat that covers her hips, is cut on a straight line with a slight flare out at the back, and does not fasten. She ties it at the neck with a stiff cravat made of ribbon, peltry, Chinese brocade, or the material of the coat. She may have six or eight of these cravats in her bureau drawer, or she hangs them on the electric light at the side of the bureau, an imitation of her brother. She likes her coat unfastened, for she never admits that she is cold. She has just escaped the hardening process of bare legs, bare arms and a cold nursery. The winter has no terrors for her and she dresses as she wishes, no matter what the thermometer.

Her Furs and Hats.

The "flapper" who is tall enough to carry a big fox around her neck is sure to come into possession of one. When her judgment goes against a big animal she chooses instead a coachman's collar of sealskin or squirrel, which rises about her face like the calyx of a flower and spreads downward over her shoulders, hugging them in the flat Victorian manner.

She has appropriated for her own use many accessories in peltry that the older woman has neglected. She knows the cleverness of a fur cravat and the medieval splendor of a fur girdle.

And, by the way, the "flappers" have no idea of being left out of the procession of those wearing Victory clothes. They have no shrinking about their costumery and what it signifies; they are instinctively psychological, and they wish to proclaim the side they took in the war by every manner of clothes that the dressmakers and milliners have thrown into the fashions to proclaim the day of peace.

So the "flapper" wears red—bright glowing, triumphant red. She doesn't hesitate a second in choosing several garments of it. She is not weighted down by the anxieties of her elders that certain colors must be taboo because age is drawing a map on the face.

CAPE OF HAND-WOVEN WOOL

© Western Newspaper Union

Flambeau weavers are responsible for this sport cape of hand-woven, hand-dyed shaggy wool. The collar and vestee are of plum color and the cape of burgundy embroidered in deep blue wool.

White Stock Favored.

Although the colored organdie collar and cuff set prevails, it is not the only type of neckwear in vogue at present. Very different from it, but equally popular, perhaps, is the severe, high, white stock now in fashion. This stock is made from heavy material, usually linen or duck. It is uncomfortably high and is fitted with two strips at the back, which are to be brought around to the front, looped over once and held in place with a stick pin or snapper.

Rugby School.

The famous English school at Rugby to which "Tom Brown" went and at which he had so many adventures, was founded in the year 1567. Or, at least, it was in that year that one Lawrence Sheriffe of London, grocer, started a free school at Rugby, which afterward became the Rugby which we know today.

EDITOR'S MAIL

AGAIN THE BRIDGE

Editor Review: With your kind permission and at the risk of somewhat boring your readers on the Hunter street bridge question, I crave a small additional space.

I am sure the taxpayers of Peterborough will be well satisfied with the action taken by the Board of Works in deciding to "lop off the sidewalks on the loose fill, the granite facing and masonry, and the terra cotta panels, and also to shorten the earth approaches and reduce the width of the bridge by nine feet."

If they will now decide to make these, or at least two spans over the river, I feel sure they will have the complete confidence and approval of the citizens in this important and expensive undertaking.

A big list of long span concrete arches appears in the edition of your contemporary of the 29th ult. but despite the assurances given by their authority on the subject, none of these long arches are on, or close to the latitudinal or isothermal lines of Peterborough and are not subject to similar climatic conditions.

Respectfully yours,
J. W. FITZGERALD.

AWAKENING

(From Rod and Gun.)

The silver stream is calling,
The spring is in the air—
The song of lark and sparrow
Are sounding everywhere.

Beside the brook the birches,
The maples by the lane,
Come into life, they're budding,
With leaves of green again.

The crocus on the hilltop,
The violet by the hedge—
The honey-suckle's twinkle
From every tangled hedge.

Tell of summer's coming,
The time of boot and fly—
Of free-lance to the torrent,
The winged lure to ply!

Then out when cock is crowing,
Then up with break of day—
One glance again to heaven,
The heart will guide the way.

AN ARMENIAN SCHOLAR.

Dr. Harootune Tiryakian Has Passed Away.

By the recent death of Dr. Harootune Tiryakian, Khan, there passed the greatest Armenian scholar, philologist, litterateur, and liberalist. Born in Caesarea, Armenia, seventy-three years ago, Dr. Tiryakian received his academic education in the Armenian schools, and began his medical studies in Constantinople, and was graduated with the highest honors in 1874 from the University of Medicine, Paris, France. Dr. Tiryakian then returned to Constantinople, and as the president of the Armenian National Assembly devoted himself to the improvement of the lot of his compatriots. He was arrested in 1894 as a political agitator and confined in prison, from which he succeeded in escaping to Persia. Mozaferreddin Shah appointed Dr. Tiryakian as his personal physician, and conferred upon him the title of Khan.

Already proficient in English, French, and German, as well as the Greek, Latin, and Hebrew languages and literature, Dr. Tiryakian while in Persia made a thorough study of the Pehlevi, Sanskrit, and Persian languages, and wrote a book on comparative philology which the famous Mekhitarist Fathers of Vienna have undertaken to publish. Prof. A. V. Williams Jackson, of Columbia University, entertained the highest admiration for Dr. Tiryakian's scholarship.

Dr. Tiryakian came to this country in 1906, and as a prolific writer on all phases of Armenian literature and history contributed extensively to the leading Armenian papers in the United States and abroad. He also translated from Persian into Armenian the "Shah Name" and "Artashir Papagan," and wrote two scholarly books entitled "The Abuses of Armenian Grammar" and "Armenian Versification." His last work was the rendition of Boileau's "Art of Poetry" into classic Armenian verse.

The opportunity that is bigger than you are cannot help you, no matter how close it comes. To be worth anything, a chance must fit. Instead of simply waiting for your opportunity, grow up to it. Big people do not need to put up with small openings, and little people find it impossible to fill big ones. If you are growing all the time, and fitting yourself for the larger chances, you need not worry for fear they will fail to present themselves.

Windmill Electricity.

Windmills are used to generate electricity in the Netherlands, where waterpower is scanty. The wind acting through the windmill drives the generator, producing the electricity, which is then stored in a storage battery and used for various purposes.

Life's Greatest Handicap.

It is a sad thing to begin life with low conceptions of it. There is no misfortune comparable to a youth without a sense of nobility. Better be born blind than not to see the glory of life.

A Tea-Pot Test ----- Is All We Ask

LESSONS IN RIGHT LIVING

By Dr. W. A. BRADY

The ordinary bloom that blights the beauty of the olfactory or trouble finding organ is known as acne rosacea, a chronic disease of the skin of the nose and cheeks extending sometimes as far as the sides of the neck, associated with occasional low mean pimples and blackheads, an increased oiliness of the affected parts and, most important, a hectic, belying pinkish, scarlet to purplish flush that brings the proboscis out in strong relief and prevails as extensively in dry territory as it does in wet.

The nose looks warm. It is really cool. The blood can be pressed out under a glass, but it sneaks right back in as soon as the glass is removed. A passive congestion, then, and not a hyperaemia. The color is heightened by overeating, constipation, lack of general exercise, late hours and laughter. Perhaps that is what makes victims of rum blossom so solemn.

In the second stage of rosacea little red dilated vessels are visible under the skin of nose and cheeks and the pimples are even more obstinate, firm, ugly, hard nodules.

In the third stage the proboscis undergoes actual enlargement and becomes pedunculated, lobulated, bluish red or violaceous, resembling an enormous bunch of warts—and now it assumes a new name, to add to the gayety of nations, to wit—rhinophyma meaning growing nose.

Well, what is a fellow going to do with a nose like that?

Stay on the water wagon.

Take a cake of yeast after each meal for six weeks.

Three quarts of water every day—to be drunk, not bathed in.

Use no beverage to wash down partly masticated morsels of food. That is, eat when you eat and drink when you drink and do not attempt to do both at the same instant.

Everything tight in the way of clothing—corsets, collars, garters shoes—must be carefully avoided.

Take meat not oftener than three times a week unless you are doing hard out-door work, in which case you may take meat once a day. (Meat includes fish and eggs.)

No smoking.

No stuffing with candy.

Indoor workers must wear light-weight woolen (or mostly woolen) underwear and stockings of similar texture and weight.

Apply to the blossom several times a day some of this lotion:

Precipitated sulphur ....1 dram
Powdered camphor ....5 grains
Powdered tragacanth ......10 grains
Lime water, rose water, of each, 1 oz.

The dilated blood vessels are best destroyed by the electric needle in skilled hands.

Anne Sings Karell.

"Your Karell regimen is great—I lost twenty-five pounds in two and one-half months. Now I am anxious to take a whirl (no pun intended) at the Somersaultauqua, if you will give me the rules and regulations. I suppose the family will think an earthquake has arrived when I begin, but I am a determined woman! ANNE."

Surest thing, but the bylaws are quite scrumptious, and all your letter lacks is a 3 cent stamped, addressed envelope for a personal reply. Send the envelope and the data will be mailed to you promptly. Grit's the thing that melts the suet!

The Soft Coal Threat.

"The burning of soft coal in this smoky town has played havoc with my throat and I am suddenly called on to sing, and, horrible dictu, I have lost your gargle for a velvet throat. I have never found anything to put the throat in such good condition for singing. Won't you publish it again for the benefit of many readers?

"J. C. C."

I got what was coming to me recently, from an esteemed colleague, for publishing something as though it were my original idea. This gargle I lifted bodily from a textbook of therapeutics, which credits it to a Mr. England, presumably a pharmacist in the Philadelphia hospital:

Potassium chlorate ......120 grains
Boiling water ....4 ounces
Powdered alum ....1 dram
Stronger rose water ......2½ ounces
Glycerin, sirup, of each ....½ ounce
Fluid extract of red gum ....3 drams

Directions: Dissolve 1 in 2, cool and reserve; dissolve 3 in 4, add other ingredients in order, then mix with reserved part. For use, mix a tablespoonful with equal amount of water. (If red gum is not available, substitute half as much fluid extract kino.)

A man doesn't do all his courting in seclusion because he is ashamed of it, but because he wants it all to himself.

Wonderful Miniature Motor.

A miniature electric motor is described as weighing only 130 grains, and as being inclosed in a shell about an inch and a half long and an inch and a quarter in diameter. The shell is designed especially for holding tools of dentists or surgeons, but it may be used for fine drills for metals or gems, or for other similar purposes. The motor is driven at a maximum rate of about 5,000 revolutions per minute, and is adapted for use with either direct or alternating current.

Could Grow Some.

A train, running on a line which had [illegible] an unenviable reputation for slowness and unpunctuality, after losing considerable time in a short journey, suddenly stopped in the midst of fields. "Guard," shouted a passenger, "may I get off and pick some flowers?" "All [illegible] won't find many about here," said the guard. "Oh, there'll be heaps of time," replied the jovial passenger. "I've brought a packet of seeds!"

She dresses herself, as a rule, better than her mother can dress her.

Many Cater to Girls.

Working downward—or upward, rather—through these psychological phases of girlhood among the Anglo-Saxons, and especially the North Americans, one finds the reason for the establishments of many successful dressmaking houses which cater to young girls. Few of the great establishments here or abroad neglect the "flapper." From the time she is twelve until she makes her bow to society at eighteen she is catered to by houses that expend much ingenuity and brilliancy of workmanship on her especial type of clothing.

Two of the important financial successes in the dressmaking world of New York started with the schoolgirl. Fifth avenue houses which cater to dowagers and sensational young matrons have determined this year to place young girls' clothes in their salons. Youngsters who try to look like Mary Pickford are often used as mannequins, but they have not been a success, because the sixteen-year-older doesn't wish to look like Mary Pickford. She wouldn't be caught with curls down her back, a sweet smile, and chubby legs below a short skirt. She often produces the most extreme fashions, which her older sister and her mother copy. She is the type, one might claim, for all the fashions of the civilized world today. That's a sweeping statement, but just run over the gamut of fashionable clothes for the last five years and see if you don't come to that conclusion. The bobbed hair, the short skirt, the round neck, the baby sleeves, the sashes, the buttoned-down-the-back frocks, the short coats—these are the fashions that have ruled the world and have begun in the schoolroom.

What She Wears Today.

The youngster of sixteen chooses materials for her own clothes that are the same as those worn by her elders, whom she envies little these days, because she rules a world of her own, that everyone acknowledges. She doesn't have to dress herself up in long clothes and high head dresses and play that she is old. She has been known to grudgingly loan some of her clothes to her young married sister for an especially smart affair! She likes georgette crepe for her evening gowns, and therefore she wears a good deal of it. Velveteen has found her approval, and she orders school frocks and afternoon dance frocks in it.

She has a tailored suit which was especially designed for her judgment, and which she accepted. It has a coat that covers her hips, is cut on a straight line with a slight flare out at the back, and does not fasten. She ties it at the neck with a soft cravat made of ribbon, peltry, Chinese brocade, or the material of the coat. She may have six or eight of these cravats in her bureau drawer, or she hangs them on the electric light at the side of the bureau, an imitation of her brother. She likes her coat unfastened, for she never admits that she is cold. She has just escaped the hardening process of bare legs, bare arms and a cold nursery. The winter has no terrors for her and she dresses as she wishes, no matter what the thermometer.

Her Furs and Hats.

The "flapper" who is tall enough to carry a big fox around her neck is sure to come into possession of one. When her judgment goes against a big animal she chooses instead a coachman's collar of sealskin or squirrel, which rises about her face like the calyx of a flower and spreads downward over her shoulders, hugging them in the flat Victorian manner.

She has appropriated for her own use many accessories in peltry that the older woman has neglected. She knows the cleverness of a fur cravat and the medieval splendor of a fur girdle.

And, by the way, the "flappers" have no idea of being left out of the procession of those wearing Victory clothes. They have no shrinking about their costumery and what it signifies; they are instinctively psychological, and they wish to proclaim the side they took in the war by every manner of clothes that the dressmakers and milliners have thrown into the fashions to proclaim the day of peace.

So the "flapper" wears red—bright glowing, triumphant red. She doesn't hesitate a second in choosing several garments of it. She is not weighted down by the anxieties of her elders that certain colors must be taboo because age is drawing a map on the face.

CAPE OF HAND-WOVEN WOOL

© Western Newspaper Union

Flambeau weavers are responsible for this sport cape of hand-woven, hand-dyed shaggy wool. The collar and vestee are of plum color and the cape of burgundy embroidered in deep blue wool.

White Stock Favored.

Although the colored organdie collar and cuff set prevails, it is not the only type of neckwear in vogue at present. Very different from it, but equally popular, perhaps, is the severe, high, white stock now in fashion. This stock is made from heavy material, usually linen or duck. It is uncomfortably high and is fitted with two strips at the back, which are to be brought around to the front, looped over once and held in place with a stick pin or snapper.

Rugby School.

The famous English school at Rugby to which "Tom Brown" went and at which he had so many adventures, was founded in the year 1567. Or, at least, it was in that year that one Lawrence Sheriffe of London, grocer, started a free school at Rugby, which afterward became the Rugby which we know today.

AGAIN THE BRIDGE

Editor Review: With your kind permission and at the risk of somewhat boring your readers on the Hunter street bridge question, I crave a small additional space.

I am sure the taxpayers of Peterborough will be wel satisfied with the action taken by the Board of Works in deciding to "lop off the sidewalks on the loose fill, the granite facing and masonry, and the terra cotta panels, and also to shorten the earth approaches and reduce the width of the bridge by nine feet."

If they will now decide to make three, or at least two spans over the river, I feel sure they will have the complete confidence and approval of the citizens in this important and expensive undertaking.

A big list of long span concrete arches appears in the edition of your contemporary of the 29th ult. but despite the assurances given by their authority on the subject, none of these long arches are on, or close to the latitudinal or isothermal lines of Peterborough and are not subject to similar climatic conditions.

Respectfully yours,
J. W. FITZGERALD.

AWAKENING

(From Rod and Gun.)

The silver stream is calling,
The spring is in the air—
The song of lark and sparrow
Are sounding everywhere.

Beside the brook the birches,
The maples by the lane,
Come into life, they're budding,
With leaves of green again.

The crocus on the hilltop,
The violet by the hedge—
The honey-suckle's twinkle
From every tangled hedge.

Tell of summer's coming,
The time of boot and fly—
Of free-lance to the torrent,
The winged lure to ply!

Then out when cock is crowing,
Then up with break of day—
One glance again to heaven,
The heart will guide the way.

AN ARMENIAN SCHOLAR.

Dr. Haroutune Tiryakian Has Passed Away.

By the recent death of Dr. Haroutune Tiryakian, Khan, there passed the greatest Armenian scholar, philologist, litterateur, and liberalist. Born in Caesarea, Armenia, seventy-three years ago. Dr. Tiryakian received his academic education in the Armenian schools, and began his medical studies in Constantinople, and was graduated with the highest honors in 1874 from the University of Medicine, Paris, France. Dr. Tiryakian then returned to Constantinople, and as the president of the Armenian National Assembly devoted himself to the improvement of the lot of his compatriots. He was arrested in 1894 as a political agitator and confined in prison, from which he succeeded in escaping to Persia. Mozaferreddin Shah appointed Dr. Tiryakian as his personal physician, and conferred upon him the title of Khan.

Already proficient in English, French, and German, as well as the Greek, Latin, and Hebrew languages and literature, Dr. Tiryakian while in Persia made a thorough study of the Pehlevi, Sanskrit, and Persian languages, and wrote a book on comparative philology which the famous Mekhitarist Fathers of Vienna have undertaken to publish. Prof. A. V. Williams Jackson, of Columbia University, entertained the highest admiration for Dr. Tiryakian's scholarship.

Dr. Tiryakian came to this country in 1906, and as a prolific writer on all phases of Armenian literature and history contributed extensively to the leading Armenian papers in the United States and abroad. He also translated from Persian into Armenian the "Shah Name" and "Artashir Papagan," and wrote two scholarly books entitled "The Abuses of Armenian Grammar" and "Armenian Versification." His last work was the rendition of Boileau's "Art of Poetry" into classic Armenian verse.

Fit for the Large Chance.

The opportunity that is bigger than you are cannot help you, no matter how close it comes. To be worth anything, a chance must fit. Instead of simply waiting for your opportunity, grow up to it. Big people do not need to put up with small openings, and little people find it impossible to fill big ones. If you are growing all the time, and fitting yourself for the larger chances, you need not worry for fear they will fail to present themselves.

Windmill Electricity.

Windmills are used to generate electricity in the Netherlands, where waterpower is scanty. The wind acting through the windmill drives the generator, producing the electricity, which is then stored in a storage battery and used for various purposes.

Life's Greatest Handicap.

It is a sad thing to begin life with low conceptions of it. There is no misfortune comparable to a youth without a sense of nobility. Better be born blind than not to see the glory of life. —Theodore T. Munger.

LESSONS IN RIGHT LIVING

By Dr. W. A. BRADY

The ordinary bloom that blights the beauty of the olfactory or trouble finding organ is known as acne rosacea, a chronic disease of the skin of the nose and cheeks extending sometimes as far as the sides of the neck, associated with occasional low mean pimples and blackheads, an increased oiliness of the affected parts and, most important, a hectic, belying pinkish, scarlet to purplish flush that brings the proboscis out in strong relief and prevails as extensively in dry territory as it does in wet.

The nose looks warm. It is really cool. The blood can be pressed out under a glass, but it sneaks right back in as soon as the glass is removed. A passive congestion, then, and not a hyperaelia. The color is heightened by overeating, constipation, lack of general exercise, late hours and laughter. Perhaps that is what makes victims of rum blossom so solemn.

In the second stage of rosacea little red dilated vessels are visible under the skin of nose and cheeks and the pimples are even more obstinate, firm, ugly, hard nodules.

In the third stage the proboscis undergoes actual enlargement and becomes pedunculated, lobulated, bluish red or violaceous, resembling an enormous bunch of warts—and now it assumes a new name, to add to the gayety of nations, to wit—rhinophyma meaning growing nose.

Well, what is a fellow going to do with a nose like that?

Stay on the water wagon.

Take a cake of yeast after each meal for six weeks.

Three quarts of water every day—to be drunk, not bathed in.

Use no beverage to wash down partly masticated morsels of food. That is, eat when you eat and drink when you drink and do not attempt to do both at the same instant.

Everything tight in the way of clothing—corsets, collars, garters shoes—must be carefully avoided.

Take meat not oftener than three times a week unless you are doing hard out-door work, in which case you may take meat once a day. (Meat includes fish and eggs.)

No smoking.

No stuffing with candy.

Indoor workers must wear lightweight woolen (or mostly woolen) underwear and stockings of similar texture and weight.

Apply to the blossom several times a day some of this lotion:

Precipitated sulphur ......1 dram
Powdered camphor ....5 grains
Powdered tragacanth ......10 grains
Lime water, rose water, of each, 1 oz.

The dilated blood vessels are best destroyed by the electric needle in skilled hands.

"Your Karell regimen is great—I lost twenty-five pounds in two and one-half months. Now I am anxious to take a whirl (no pun intended) at the Somersaultauqua, if you will give me the rules and regulations. I suppose the family will think an earthquake has arrived when I begin, but I am a determined woman! ANNE."

Surest thing, but the bylaws are quite scrumptious, and all your letter lacks is a 3 cent stamped, addressed envelope for a personal reply. Send the envelope and the data will be mailed to you promptly. Grit's the thing that melts the suet!

The Soft Coal Threat.

"The burning of soft coal in this smoky town has played havoc with my throat and I am suddenly called on to sing, and, horrible dictu, I have lost your gargle for a velvet throat. I have never found anything to put the throat in such good condition for singing. Won't you publish it again for the benefit of many readers?

"J. C. C."

I got what was coming to me recently, from an esteemed colleague, for publishing something as though it were my original idea. This gargle I lifted bodily from a texbook of therapeutics, which credits it to a Mr. England, presumably a pharmacist in the Philadelphia hospital:

Potassium chlorate ......120 grains
Boiling water ....4 ounces
Powdered alum ....1 dram
Stronger rose water ......2½ ounces
Glycerin, sirup, of each ....½ ounce
Fluid extract of red gum ....3 drams

Directions: Dissolve 1 in 2, cool and reserve; dissolve 3 in 4, add other ingredients in order, then mix with reserved part. For use, mix a tablespoonful with equal amount of water. (If red gum is not available, substitute half as much fluid extract kino.)

A miniature electric motor is described as weighing only 150 grains, and as being inclosed in a shell about an inch and a half long and an inch and a quarter in diameter. The shaft is designed especially for holding tools of dentists or surgeons, but it may be used for fine drills for metals or gems, or for other similar purposes. The motor is driven at a maximum rate of about 5,000 revolutions per minute, and is adapted for use with either direct or alternating current.

A train, running on a line which had achieved an unenviable notoriety for slowness and unpunctuality, after losing considerable time in a short journey, suddenly stopped in the midst of fields. "Guard," shouted a jovial passenger, "may I get off and pick some flowers?" "You won't find many about here," said the guard good-humoredly. "Oh, there'll be heaps of time," replied the passenger. ALD. MURRAY SAYS DEPUTATIONS TO OTTAWA ARE SO MANY PICNICS

Believes That Money Spent For Such Purposes is to a Great Extent Thrown Away—Aldermen Speak of Hardships of Nights in Pullman Cars.

A letter from the Trades and Labor Council was read at the meeting of the City Council, last night, asking that the building by-law be enforced in the future without fear or favor. It was referred to the Property Property Committee.

Gordon and O'Brien wrote the Council in connection with the recent decision that no action be taken in connection with their claim for damages against the corporation as a result of the flooding of the property of their clients, the Rosanna O'Brien estate, on Downie street. They asked whether the Council would be satisfied to appoint a sole arbitrator.

Mr. and Mrs. William Eichenlaub and Misses Dorothy and Ella Denham forwarded an acknowledgment to the Council for the expression of sympathy extended at the time of the late Mr. Denham's death.

Mr. H. Crary, 515 Cedar street asked permission by letter to use a strip of city property across from the Queen Mary school for garden purposes. This was granted upon the understanding that should the council wish to open up a street at that point they would have the right to do so without reimbursing Mr. Crary for any loss he might sustain as a result.

The tax collector submitted his statement as follows:

To total amount as roll . . $496,576.24
By total amount forfeited 469,722.94

Balance $26,853.30
Deposited during March . . $3,888.02

Fine Remitted

Mr. E. L. Payne, one of the city druggists wrote the Council to the effect that on August 5th, 1918, he had been fined the sum of $50.10 and ordered to pay $3.10 costs when convicted before Magistrate Dumble of a breach of the Stamp Act. He had explained matters to the Department of Inland Revenue who had decided that be had been wrongfully convicted and had returned him his $50.00. He asked that the City Council in view of this order the treasurer to pay back the amount of the costs. He enclosed the letter from the Department. The Legal Committee will consider Mr. Payne's request.

Teamsters Want Raise

The city teamsters asked for a raise last night and their request was referred to the Board of Works for consideration.

A communication from the Dominion Good Roads Association stating that their annual convention would be held this year in Quebec City and reminding the Council that the fee had been raised to $10 was referred to the Finance Committee.

A communication from the Association of Fire Chiefs asked for the Council's co-operation in the inauguration of a "clean up" week, the object of which was to endeavor to reduce the annual loss of the Dominion by fire which now amounts to $30,000,000. This request was referred to the Fire, Water and Light Committee.

Gordon and O'Brien's letter in regard to the Rosanna O'Brien estate will be considered by the Board of Works, Chairman Phelan stating that he felt that he could reach an agreement which would afford mutual satisfaction.

A letter from Jones Bros. and Com- informed that it would conflict with sold a customer in Peterborough a revolving barber's sign and had been informed thta it would conflict with the city's illuminated Sign By-law. They asked for information in this regard and stated that in Toronto the city were quite satisfied to have these signs installed provided they were placed at a sufficient height so as not to interfere with pedestrian traffic. This matter was left in the hands of the Board of Works and City Engineer.

A by-law was passed last night providing for the borrowing of $250,000 to meet the city's current ordinary expenditure.

A By-law to authorize the carrying out of an agreement with Eaton's industrial department for advertising the city and to act as their agents in the matter of obtaining new industries was submitted last night but will not receive its third reading until the City Solicitor has examined a certain clause in the contract.

Alderman Edgar proposed last night that the debentures that are being issued to raise funds for the construction of sewers and sidewalks be marketed in units of $100 each so that local investors might take advantage of them in the same manner as the Victory Loan. The interest which will be borne by these debentures will be 5½ and 6 per cent and Alderman Edgar thought it would be a good investment for the small investor.

This proposition will be considered by the Finance Committee

Alderman Murray submitted a motion last night to rescind the By-law which gives the heads of the various Civic Departments authority to engage and discharge their own help. He thought that this power should be invested in the Council.

Alderman Gainey who understood from Alderman Murray's remarks that it was the heads of department in the city buildings which would be affected by the change agreed to second the motion but upon the mayor drawing attention to the fact that if the by-law was rescinded it would affect the Fire Department and Street Worker's Department the seconder withdrew his consent.

Mayor Duncan pointed out that the Fire Chief would have no authority over his men if he could not hire them and discharge them: The same would be true of the street cleaning department. A man would prove insubordinate and would tell the man in charge that he did not hire him and straight way both parties would come to the Council with their stories and there would be all kinds of trouble.

The Case of Foodstuffs

Alderman Murray in referring to the appointment of the three labor aldermen to form a committee to enquire into the high prices of food stuffs expressed the opinion that the other members of the Council had "put one over them."

He felt that it was not a matter which could be settled by any committee or by the Council itself; it was a matter for the people at large to take up and agitate for a remedy otherwise there could be no reform. He felt that cooperative buying was the only solution of the difficulty.

Eight Hour Day

Alderman Gainey submitted a motion last night to have the Council endorse the eight hour day and half holiday on Saturday. Alderman Murray seconded this and it was carried.

Alderman Murray introduced a motion to request the Legislature to abolish the property qualification clause in the municipal act but there was no seconder forthcoming.

Upon motion of Alderman Gainey the Council instructed the Clerk to draw the attention of the Government to the fact that until yesterday the C.P.R. was paying its extra gang in Peterborough 25 cents an hour. He understood that they had been raised on Monday to 27 cents but even that was quite inadequate.

Down on Deputations

Alderman McIntyre submitted a motion last night which was carried and which authorises the Clerk to write to Hon. F. B. Carvell and J. H. Burnham, M.P., in connection with the $50,000 which was to have been placed in the supplementary estimates of the Government for the building in this city of a post office and dry-dock in Ashburnham. These gentlemen will be reminded of the Government's promise in this connection and will be asked to see that the work is commenced as soon as possible.

Alderman Murray expressed the hope last night just before the Council adjourned that the Post Office and Dry Dock proposition would not require the sending of another deputation to Ottawa. He characterized these deputations as picnics and condemned them.

Mayor Duncan and Alderman Hamilton stated that if Mr. Murray considered it a picnic to ride to Ottawa one night and ride back the next night it was a strange idea.

Alderman Hamilton stated that as far as he was concerned he wanted to be a member of no more deputations of such a kind as that.

Mayor Duncan stated that in going to Ottawa one night, and returning the succeeding night with the promise of a grant of $50,000 for the city was not bad business even if it did not prove a picnic to the members who attended.

Alderman Murray replied that one of the most comfortable nights he ever spent in his life was on the train in a berth of the pullman car and he did not express any sympathy for the hardships which the members of the deputations complained of having suffered.

and that is considered a remote possibility—it will be only for the sale of light beer, containing not more than 2 51-100 per cent. alcohol weight measure. Should the electors vote in favor of having the stronger liquors sold they can only be placed on sale through Government agencies. It will also be noted that while in all previous discussions "beer and wine" have been linked together, the latter is not mentioned in the questions to be submitted in the referendum.

While it is not considered at all probable, it is said that it is within the realm of possibility that if the act is not repealed and the other questions carry by affirmative votes then, the three plans, could be carried out. Thus if the O. T. A. were to remain the law of the land, light beers could be sold through Government agencies by amendments to the act; then, too, if question three carried light beers could be sold through standard hotels by amendments to the act, and spirituous liquors could be sold through standard hotels by amendments to the act, and spirituous liquors could be sold through Government agencies by amendments to the act.

Light Beer Defined.

Light beer as defined by the Prime Minister includes "beer and any other malt liquor containing more than 2.51 per cent. of alcohol by weight; this expressed in proof spirits means 5.46 per cent., a little more than twice the alcoholic content of beer new permitted to be sold, which is 2 1-2 per cent. proof spirits."

The legislation to arrange for the taking of the referendum will be provided for in "The Temperance Referendum Act, 1919." whereas the provisions for Government control of the present sale of liquor will be carried out under amendments to the O.T.A The plans for carrying out Government control of the sale of liquor provide for it being done under the direction of the License Board. It will maintain a head office in Toronto, a central warehouse for the receipt of liquors in quantities and the distribution of same to sales agents, and sales agencies at locations in the Province suiting the convenience of the public, and having regard to the requirements of distribution.

Sir William explained that he had expected to have introduced the necessary bills yesterday, but they had not been completed by the Law Clerv. The principles, however, had been settled and he desired to outline them at that time so the House and the country might have ample opportunity of considering them.

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

WE EAT TOO MUCH MEAT WHICH CLOGS KIDNEYS, THEN THE BACK HURTS

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralises the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

TARIFF DISPUTE MAY BE SETTLED BY COMPROMISE

Duty on Farm Implements May Be Reduced—Mr. Maharg is Now Regarded as an Extremist.

Ottawa, Ont., April 8.—There is a sudden revival in interest in the tariff question. There has been a lull in gossip since the defeat of the Opposition resolution and the announcement of Sir Thomas White that some changes would be made this session to be followed by a general revision. However, with the time for the budget debate to be brought down approaching, the Western members are growing fidgety.

A general caucus will be held tomorrow by the Government supporters from the four Western provinces, when an effort will be made to come to a decision as to demands to be made upon the Government. Whatever the decision, it will not be in the form of an ultimatium. The Western members realize that the times are too perilous and the general situation too unsettled to force a political crisis.

A Large Divergence.

There is a big divergence of opinion among the Westerners. Mr. J. A. Maharg, Maple Creek, the leader of the Saskatchewan Grain Growers, would, of course, like to force the whole farmers' platform upon the western delegation. At a previous meeting he was frankly told that if this attitude was taken British Columbia would be compelled to join the eastern protectionists. They were willing to support the prairie provinces in reasonable demands, but would not climb on the band wagon of the prairie farmers. As there is anxiety to maintain western solidarity, there will likely be a compromise.

If the Westerners can get together it will likely be an agreement on a general reduction in farm implements. It is probable that they will agree to ask this session for a reduction in duties on threshers, wagons, harrows, etc., to the same as the tariff on binders, mowers and reapers, which is now 12 1-2 per cent. They would also like a substantial cut in the duty on harness and a reduction in certain other items.

Spirit of Compromise.

It is believed that the Government will be prepared to meet the Westerners in a spirit of compromise. If the Westerners are satisfied and Sir Thomas White can successfully bridge the chasm east and west on the tariff, then there will be no obstacle in the way of the formation of a permanent new party and organization will be commended.

The budget is not expected now until early in May, when Sir Robert Borden will be back from the Peace Conference. On his return, following the budget, important political developments are looked for.

ELECTION NEXT FALL WITH TARIFF AS THE MAIN ISSUE

That is Given at Ottawa Now as the Only Means of Settling Difference Between East and West.

Ottawa, April 8.—"There will be an election this autumn, and it will cause as general a flux among parties as the election of 1917. At that time conscription was the issue. Now it will be the tariff."

This definite prediction was made by a prominent figure in Ottawa, a public man of national reputation.

Although his view is by no means accepted universally here, there is a growing feeling that the tariff struggle, as it is developing both in Ottawa and throughout the country will run into that sort of impasse which nothing but an appeal to the country will open.

There is apparent both in the attitude of the Canadian Council of Agriculture and all the interests which the body represents, and of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association and its ramifications, a determination, and a refusal to compromise, that gives every indication of a gigantic struggle, one that can't be settled in Parliament, but that will have to be referred to the court of ultimate resort—the people.

Farmers Peremptory.

The Canadian Council of Agriculture has just concluded its executive sessions, and once more it has issued a peremptory demand on Western members of Parliament to vote for lower tariffs.

On the other hand the C. M. A., the Canadian Industrial Reconstruction Association, and affiliated bodies are also stiffening their opposition.

Some people believe that Westerners and agriculturists generally might be satisfied, for the present with reductions or elimination of the duties of specified articles used in farming, without demanding a lowering of the tariff all around. Even if this view be correct, it looks as if the manufacturers are forming their battalions unbroken and in close order, as in 1911, determined to resist even the first taps of an "entering wedge" and, to change the metaphor, not to throw to the wolves even a single member of their band, be he the maker of agricultural implements or of anything else.

PAY VETERANS FOR FUNERALS

ALD. MURRAY SEEKS TO HAVE FUND FOR THIS PURPOSE

At the meeting of the City Council held last night Alderman Murray who was present for the first time since his illness succeeded in having a suggestion which he had made some time ago to have a certain sum of money set aside to defray expenses of veterans going to funerals and in connection with which the Finance Committee had recommended no action, reconsidered.

He stated that it was unfair to expect these men to turn out to the funerals of their comrades and lose half a day's pay each time and thought it would be a lamentable state of affairs if as a result of this difficulty the funeral of a returned soldier would not be largely attended by his comrades.

Some time ago he proposed setting aside $1,000 to be held by the City Treasurer and paid out as required to the bandsmen, pallbearers and members of the firing squad at each funeral of a returned soldier. Alderman Murray was, under the impression that the suggestion had not been considered before.

Goes Back to Committee

Chairman Taylor of the Finance Committee assured him that it had received the consideration of his committee and that a report had been submitted recommending no action.

Alderman McIntyre who had seconded the motion to have this suggestion considered upon the former occasion again acted as seconder and the matter was again sent to the Finance Committee.

Alderman Murray's idea is that the men who are required to attend the funeral of a comrade and who are absent from work half a day as a result will be re-imbursed out of this fund for their loss of time for which they would not be paid by their employer. He figured that $2.50 for half a day would be about right and that each funeral would require the expenditure of $100.

Alderman Edgar drew attention to the fact that at that rate provision was being made for 10 funerals in the year.

MILITARY HEADS FORCED THE KAISER TO ABDICATE

Held to Title of "King of Prussia," However—Schulenburg Declares There Were Enough Loyal Troops to Quell Revolution.

Berlin, April 8.—While admitting there was a difference of opinion among German generals as to the practicability of fighting to maintain the imperial regime in November, Count Schulenberg, commander of a guards regiment, maintains, in an article on the abdication of Emperor William, published in the Freiheit, that there were enough loyal troops to have marched on Aix la Chapelle and Cologne and put down the revolution.

The Count says that Field Marshal von Hindenburg and Gen. Groener, Prussian War Minister, would not assume the responsibility for such a move, however, arguing that things had gone too far and that only the abdication of former Emperor William could save the situation. The emperor, he says, was emphatic in declaring he did not desire a civil war and that he would not call upon the army to engage in such conflict. Internal conditions becoming worse, William at length agreed to Count Schulenberg's advice to abdicate as emperor, but not as King of Prussia. Field Marshal von Hindenberg endorsed this course, but in the opinion of General Groener, it was too late, althought it might have saved the situation two weeks earlier.

Oath Only An Idea.

In the meantime, there came rumors from Berlin of the imminence of civil war, and street fighting was actually begun there. Finally the imperial chancellor telegraphed that civil war might break out at any moment if the abdication was not announced at once.

Hurried conferences were held by the Emperor, the Crown Prince and the leading generals, the article says. One of the commanders asserted there was a feeling among the generals that the entire army could not be depended upon in case of civil war. To this Count Schullenberg said he replied, "No soldier would break his oath to the colors."

"The oath to the colors and the supreme war lord is only an idea," was the rejoinder of General Groener.

At this moment, Admiral von Hintze, the foreign minister, entered, and tendered his resignation. William then consented to abdicate as emperor, but insisted on retaining his office as king of Prussian and head of the army. The imperial chancellor had in the meantime, however, announced the abdication without waiting for the emperor's declaration.

Count Schulenberg says that William's flight to Holland was due to pressure brought to bear on him by Field Marshal von Hindenburg and Gen. Groener.

MISS LAW WINS CASE

At the Division Court sitting last week, His Honor Judge Huycke, dismissed the case brought against Miss Law, of 426½ George street. When he had heard the evidence of expert witnesses, His Honor decided that the coat was of good workmanship, and an excellent garment in all respects dismissed the action which had been brought against Miss Law and allowed Miss Law her costs.

This was an action, begun last December, against Miss Law for the value of material supplied to Miss Law by a customer to be made into a coat. After the coat had been delivered and paid for, the customer began to find fault with it, and brought action against Miss Law for $39.44.

MATRONS FOR THEATRES IS NOT A POPULAR IDEA

Women of Toronto Say What is Required is Stricter Censorship of Moving Pictures

Toronto, April 8.—The amendment introduced by the Hon. T. W. McGarry in the Legislature to provide matrons in the different movie theatres to supervise the children in attendance and the attitude of adults toward them has not met with much approval by the women connected with different children's organizations. They think that more restrictions not less should be enforced.

"How can one matron in a darkened theatre look after the many children?" asks Miss Edith Mairs, Dominion secretary of the Girl Guides. "I have not really considered the matter, but it looks on the face of it as a loophole for the theatres. However, the executive have not yet discussed the matter, but will do so shortly."

Mrs. Ross Stewart, secretary of the Women's Liberal Association, informed The Star that at the last meeting of Liberal women a resolution was forwarded to Mr. McGarry asking that on Fridays and Saturdays more suitable pictures of an educational value be shown for the benefit of the children.

Mrs. N. Brock Wilkins, who is much interested in social service work, said it would require a matron on every seat to look after the children or group of children who would attend, that all social workers felt that the pictures now shown have a most demoralising effect on impressionable minds. Speaking as a mother and interested in many poor families she thought that a matron would not solve the difficulty and that it was stricter censorship that was required.

Mrs. Laughton, the newly appointed secretary of the Big Sisters' Association, was another who spoke strongly aainst the pictures shown to children. She thought that the matron would not combat the harm done by the pictures. When girls of 14, 15 and 16 spend every night in the movies, their minds were upset and their whole lives changed.

Miss Beatrice Sullivan, when asked her opinion said: "Very successful, if the matron in question had incandescent eyes, Marconi eyes and a tongue like Ella Wheeler Wilcox."

"WORTH ITS WEIGHT IN GOLD," HE SAYS

JOHN ANDERSON TELLS OF HIS RECOVERY THROUGH TAKING TANLAC.

"From the way Tanlac has fixed me up I consider it is worth it's weight in gold," said Jno. Anderson, of 103 Stuart street, West, Hamilton Ont., recently.

"I had suffered terribly for several months from indigestion and kidney trouble," he continued, "and during the past few months my condition was so bad that I was obliged to lay off from work. My stomach felt as if it had lumps in it, and I had terrible pains in my chest and back. My kidneys worried me constantly and I was so dizzy at times that I would stagger and almost fall.

"One of these dizzy spells came on me when I was in the shop one day, and when a friend gave me a dose of Tanlac I got over it right away. I bought a bottle and haven't had the slightest touch of indigestion in some time, and I have felt different ever since my first dose. My kidneys don't trouble me any more and all the pain is gone from my back and chest. My appetite is just great, I eat anything I want and never have any trouble afterward. I am working every day and feel fine all the time."

Tanlac is sold in Peterboro by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield, by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowler's Corners, by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

DEFENCE OF ONE VETERAN A.W.L.

BURIED FIVE TIMES IN FRANCE AND NEVER HIMSELF AGAIN.

(By Associated Press)

London, April 8.—"I was buried five times in three days in France and have not been the same man since," pleaded Major Donald Gray, of an eastern Ontario regiment, when court martialed for absence without leave. He pleaded not guilty.

The accused was arrested in London by Col. Clifford, Canadian provost marshal. The accused told the court that in August, 1914, he joined the Princess Patricia Regiment. He was badly shaken up at Sanctuary Wood and twice wounded afterward. He was not fit to return to France after his leave and so wired his division. He had no idea that he had been posted as an absentee. He was about to apply for medical board when arrested. The decision of the court will be promulgated.

COMMISSION TO LOOK INTO THE GUELPH AFFAIR

SIR SAM HUGHES WITHDRAWS HIS RESOLUTION FOR PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

Ottawa, April 8.—Following a promise by Hon. Arthur Meighen, acting minister of justice, that a royal commission will be named to inquire into the Guelph Novitiate affair, Sir Sam Hughes' resolution calling for investigation by a parliamentary committee was withdrawn by Sir Thomas White, who stated that he did so at the request of General Hughes.

The investigation by the royal commission will not begin until the return of Hon. C. J. Doherty, minister of justice who is chiefly interested officially in the matter.

General Sir Sam Hughes moved for an inquiry by a select committee of the house into statements made public in June 1918, regarding the Guelph Novitiate, and charges made concerning the evasion by young men there and the connivance of others to defeat the end and aims of the M.S.A. The novitiate, he claimed, failed to report their men for medical examination or to report them under the military service act for any purpose. The novitiate repeatedly refused to give any facts or to recognize in any way the authority of the provost marshal. Action by the provost marshal was resisted, and Sir Sam stated that while the military police were busy arresting people elsewhere, no arrest was made at the novitiate. About forty or fifty able bodied husky fellows defied the law.

Asks Equal Rights

Sir Sam reviewed the charges made by Rev. Mr. Palmer and the events of the raid. He referred to the letter of apology sent by Major-General Mewburn to the principal of the novitiate and declared that the principal should have been told to observe the law. The whole affair, Sir Sam went on, was not in accordance with the recognition of equal rights and privileges. The novitiate had arrogated to itself the right to regard itself as a sovereign body. "If these institutions are to be sovereign to the law and to over ride the law," Sir Sam continued, "I cannot, for one, agree that it is a proper condition of affairs, and do not intend to consent to having one sovereign body with another sovereign body." On the night of the raid Sir Sam said, the press was ordered not to publish a word.

Sir Sam added in conclusion that he would be willing to accept investigation by some tribunal other than a parliamentary committee providing the full light of day were thrown on all the circumstances

MABEL NORMAND in "MICKEY"

GRADN OPERA HOUSE, FRIDAY AND SATURDAY, MATINEE DAILY

AT THE GRAND

Vaudeville at the Grand Opera House last night, tonight and Wednesday night is considered by those who were at the theatre yesterday to be the best of its kind that has ever been staged at a regular performance in the city.

Mario and Duffy upon the horizontal bar showed the audience a real exhibition of fine acrobatic work, and Gabby Brothers and Clark, the talkative manipulators of hats and clubs, were the cleverest jugglers that have appeared at the Grand in the memory of most of the theatre-goers.

A comedy skit entitled "Love Me, Love My Dog," by Archer and Archer, was much enjoyed, if the applause of the audience can be considered as a dependable indication.

In addition to the vaudeville features there was an excellent movie program.

"MICKEY"

"Mickey," featuring Mabel Normand, to be shown at the Grand Opera House on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, is filled with unexpected situations, not called for in the scenarious, and although this spontaneity brings many a brilliant flash into the picture, still Mabel Normand admits that the life of a comedienne is not all giggle and gurgle.

One day when Mabel was called upon to dust a chair, during one of the scenes for "Mickey," she tripped over a rug, took a header and landed up against one of those old-fashioned nine foot high hall clocks and tipped it over. Mabel had just time to brace herself and throw her hands over her head when the clock came down on her. For several seconds she struggled, and then Bill Colven, butler in the scene, came to her rescue. The camera man, realizing that the stuff, though not called for, was good action, filmed the incident, and it has been added to the great number of humorous situations in "Mickey."

But sometimes they don't film the unexpected. Mabel Normand as "Mickey" was to fall through a roof, which, to be effective, she must land on her feet. Mabel found it easy enough to fall, but landing head up was another matter. "Oh, for one of those German helmets," she cried, after the "steenth attempt."

SCENIC RAILWAY FOR N. ONTARIO

DEPUTATION FROM THIS DISTRICT WAIT ON PROVINCIAL MINISTER OF MINES.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, April 8.—The construction of a scenic highway through northern district of Ontario was urged on by Hon. G. H. Ferguson, Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines, by a deputation, fifty strong, from Ontario, Victoria, Haliburton, Muskoka and other counties today. The scenic beauties of such a highway were pointed out to the Minister by several speakers, after deputation had been introduced by John Carew, the member of the Legislature for South Victoria. It was suggested that route followed be along Cameron Lake and Balsam Lake, thence along shores of Mud Turtle Lake up the Gull River and finally to the Lake of Bays.

Hon. Mr. Ferguson in reply promised that an engineer would be appointed to investigate the project and that his report would be given serious consideration. He expressed himself personally as favoring the proposal.

DODGE BROTHERS NAME LOCAL MAN AS DEALER

Realize Big Possibilities in Automobile Field of Thriving Community

Recognition of Peterborough and vicinity as a thriving community that gives promise of big opportunities in the automobile field, has led Dodge Brothers to establish representation here, with the Duffus Garage as the newly appointed dealer. Mr. Duffus now has the exclusive selling rights in this territory.

The remarkable popularity of the Dodge Brothers Motor Car has caused automobile men all over the country to clamor for sales privileges, but Dodge Brothers policy of quality in selling methods, as well as quality in the car, requires a painstaking investigation in every instance before a selection is made. In Mr. Duffus Dodge Brothers have a dealer on whom they believe they may rely for both progressiveness and fair business methods.

An idea of the popularity of Dodge Brothers Motor Car may be gained from the fact that within three years after the first car was turned out the aggregate sales had exceeded $175,000,000.

This is a record without precedent in the motor car industry. It is regarded as a striking testimonial to the high regard in which the name "Dodge Brothers" was held by the public even before they marketed a motor car bearing this name. Prior to that time Dodge Brothers had built the vital parts for more than half a million other cars, establishing a reputation for thoroughness and mechanical skill.

This reputation has been more than upheld. It is said of Dodge Brothers in explanation of their unusual success, that they spare no money or effort in building a car to suit their particular ideas of thoroughness in manufacture. What their ideas on this subject mean to the purchaser of their product may be imagined from the fact that they have a staff of more than 750 inspectors who do nothing but check up on workmanship in the various processes of manufacture. In addition there are several large departments devoted entirely to similar work, such as physical and chemical laboratories where raw and finished materials are subjected to tests so thorough as to leave no doubt of the quality.

It is significant that the first Dodge Brothers Motor Car ever built was made up exactly as a car is made in the regular line of production. Ordinarily the "experimental job," as the first car is known, is built of castings because of the great time and expense involved in preparing dies for forgings. Dodge Brothers, however, decided that their experimental car should be like the car they expected to build, in every detail, so that neither they nor the public might be "fooled." So they spent almost a year in making these dies and preparing otherwise for a completely manufactured car. As a result, when the car was built they knew what they had and what they and the public might expect of their product. As a further result of this first car, although only an "experimental job," is still in daily service on hardest runs—experimenting under all sorts of road conditions—and with a record of more than 150,000 miles behind it. This is but an illustration of the many things unique in the history of Dodge Brothers as manufacturers.

Public approval of their principles of their principles is seen in the rapid expansion of Dodge Brothers Works made necessary by public demand. In December, 1914, it was a plant of less than 20 acres. Today Dodge Brothers Works covers 72 acres of floor space, employs more than 14,500 persons, produces more than 400 cars a day and is still unable to keep pace with the demand.

READING TAKES PLACE OF SYRACUSE IN THE LEAGUE

International is Now Complete With Eight Clubs Ready For Action—Toronto Team, Now Nearly Full Strength.

Toronto, April 8.—Baseballically speaking things are looking up, not only from an International League but a Toronto Club standpoint. Syracuse has been definitely "passed up" as a member of Fultz's circuit in favor of Reading, Pa., while Newark will again be in line, playing at the old Federal League Park. This information was divulged by Pres. McCaffery. "There will be eight strong clubs ready to battle for the pennant," said the Leaf's magnate, who was in high glee over the settlement of the circuit problem and the International will again take its rightful place as the premier minor league organization in baseball. The clubs in the revised circuit are as follows:

Toronto	Rochester
Buffalo	Jersey City
Baltimore	Newark
Reading	Binghamton

Reading will be backed by a strong company of influential business men, while a new company with lots of money behind it, will finance Newark. The schedule will be announced in a few days.

Manager Gibson will be here tomorrow prepared to take up his duties. By the end of the week, it is expected that the bulk of the players will be on hand, including Catcher Snyder, secured from Brooklyn, Russell Gee, (the local semi pro-rated as the most promising back-stop in Joe Lyndon's league has notified Pres. McCaffery that he will try to make a place with the Leafs. Gee has all the requisities of a first class back-stop. He is a peppery youngster with a fine "whip" and a good line of chatter. Manager Gibson has done nothing as yet in regard to "Jeff" Tesreau, but he intends making a special trip to New York in a few days to talk business with the Mammoth heaver. With the exception of Reilly and Onslow, all the Leafs have signed contracts. The first baseman, it is not thought will give any trouble. His grievance is trivial. Reilly's case is different. Though he has held several conferences with both Gibson and McCaffery, he has refused to "listen to reason" and it may be that he will be used in a trade or disposed of to some other club. "Gibby" does not want any dissatisfied players on his team and as far as he is concerned "Duke" can do as he pleases.

Diamond Notes.

Jack Dunn's Baltimore Birds lost on Saturday and Sunday to Connie Mack's Athletics, 5 to 3 and 5 to 2 respectively, but they made the big leagues hustle to win in both engagements.

Ty Cobb objected to the "ten day notice of release" in his contract, but he signed up nevertheless.

The National Board has ruled that the Southern League acted within its rights in passing a "seven players limit." This means that all the minor leagues can pass rules to suit local conditions.

The Toledo club of the American Association financially is in bad shape. Pres. Bresnahan is broke and the stock-holders have refused to advance any more money. The franchise may be moved elsewhere.

First City Ball Team in Field

MATTHEWS-BLACKWELL BASEBALL ENTHUSIASTS ORGANIZED YESTERDAY

Matthews-Blackwell boys were last to join up with the City Baseball League last year, but taking time by the fore-lock, they are first in the game for this coming season.

Yesterday, encouraged by the management and stimulated by the batting, fielding and twirling material, a canvas of the personnel of this big establishment revealed, a meeting was called and a team readily organized under the most promising auspices.

Officers and Executive.

The following officials and Executive Committee were elected:

Honary President—Mr. T. F. Matthews.

President—Mr. Gordon Mathews.

Vice-President—Mr. R. Hall.

Manager—Mr. Dan McCabe.

Secretary—Mr. Carl McLean.

Treasurer—Mr. J. McDonald.

Executive Committee—Messrs. B. Everett, G. Cunningham, S. L. Lorrie and officials.

The outstanding features of this organization meeting were keen enthusiasm and the will to lead at the end of the season, as they have led in organizing. Just so soon as weather and ground conditions permit, the boys intend to get busy at practice of their combination play already studied out. Every member of the club is a sanguine sport and commendably determined that his team shall at all times put up a game "worth while," and end the ball year with a record which will reflect credit not only on the Matthews-Blackwell organization but on the City League itself.

Turnbulls Lose To The Packers

Last night in the 5-pin League at the Water street alleys Matthews-Blackwell took two games from the leaders. For Matthews-Blackwell Stanton was high man with 593. McLean and Everett both reached 525 mark. For Turnbulls, Perry, 524; Williams 522. Scores:

LAKEVIEW CLUB IS REORGANIZED

FAMOUS ORGANIZATION WILL BE IN FIELD AGAIN THIS YEAR

Local sport received another impetus last night when at a meeting held in the Sacred Heart school one of the oldest sporting associations in the city was revived in the re-organization of the Lakeview Club.

This club furnished players to the baseball, hockey and all other teams in the past and participated in the old Trent Valley League. When the war broke out, like many another organization of the kind, it passed into a state of inactivity until revived at the meeting held last night.

It was decided to enter a team in the City Baseball League to be formed in the near future. The Lakeview Club, however, will not confine its activities to this game as they will be ready to take part in all forms of sport from lawn tennis to lacrosse.

Officers elected last night were:

Hon. President—Enos Maybee.

Hon. Vice-President—Peter Malloy

President—W. E. Meagher.

Secretary-Treasurer—John McKarney.

Executive—Eddie Desautel, Walter Jackson and Frank Neary.

VETERANS DECIDE TO KEEP OUT OF POLITICAL ACTION

Hold Balance of Power Now and Will not Ally Themselves With Either of Old Parties—Secretary Whatley's Quarterly Report.

At a meeting of the local branch of the G.W.V.A. held last night, Secretary S. Whatley and Comrade T. Williams were appointed delegates to attend the annual G.W.V.A. convention of the Provincial Command to be held in Windsor on May 14th, 15th and 16th.

Matters, which will be dealt with at the convention and which were sounded out at the meeting last night in order that the delegates might get an idea of the opinion of the local branch concerning them were;—Pensions, vocational training, lands settlement and the Government housing scheme.

A motion was passed last night, unanimously, to this effect: "That the Peterboro branch of the G.W.V.A. feels that the time is not ripe for the association to enter politics inasmuch as we are at present hold the balance of power and should therefore stand aloof from both political parties."

Secretary's Report.

Secretary Whatley submitted the following report for the quarter ending March 31, 1919:

In submitting this report of the activities of the branch during the last quarter, I desire to congratulate the members upon the splendid progress they have made during that period.

Since the beginning of the year 236 members have been initiated into the branch, making in all a total membership of 435 in good standing up to the end of March.

During the quarter your Building Committee has been successful in purchasing the property known as the Murray Street Baptist Church. This property is now under re-construction and when completed promises to be the finest of its kind in the Province of Ontario. This work is being undertaken entirely by local talent, and much of the success of the enterprise is due to the efforts of Comrade R. E. Layfield, who designed the present plans and has worked assiduously in order to make the whole thing a complete success. We are certainly indebted to him for the time and care that he has spent in connection with our new quarters.

During the next two weeks preparations are being made for the annual Tag Day in commemoration of the 2nd battle of Ypres. It is to be hoped that every member who can possibly get out on Saturday, April 19th, 1919, will do so wearing his uniform and taking one of the many boxes that will be used on that day in order that we may have an even more successful day than the two previous Tag Days.

On Sunday, following the annual Tag Day, the annual church parade will be held. This takes place at St. Peter's Cathedral and it is expected that every member will make every effort to attend this service, particularly as it is to be held annually and is one of the most important functions of the association.

During the past quarter we lost by death, two of our esteemed comrades in the persons of Comrades W. Stoke and Comrade J. McLeod. These men were represented by a large body of veterans at their funerals and we are greatly indebted to the services of the band who turned out on these occasions under very diffcult circumstances.

ALLEGED BOLSHEVIST HAS BEEN CAPTURED BY POLICE

Russian With Excrutiating Name Appears in the Police Court Charged With Avowed Intent of Blowing Up Banks—Case Remanded for Week

A Russian, called by the unpronounceable name of Svestelhekoff appeared in police court this morning charged with giving expression to seditious opinions.

Information was laid as a result of conversations which the Russian carried on with several of his countrymen. He is alleged to have said that when he received word from Hamilton, Toronto or Montreal he was ready to rise up in revolt. He boasted that he would be one of the first to do this and that when he had saved enough money he would buy revolvers, dynamite and bombs with which to blow up the rich institutions such as the banks and he also is credited with having expressed a desire to kill the police.

Svestelhekoff as he appeared in the prisoner's dock was a man of some forty years of age. He looked like a Russian although his hair was rather fair and a moustache adorned his features, which resembled to a remarkable degree that of the former Kaiser of Germany with its points waxed up to a level with his eyes.

Although the police claim that Svestelhekoff whom they describe as a genuine Bolshevist, understands the English quite well upon ordinary occasions but in court this morning he seemed to have forgotten it entirely and when the charge was being read to him looked up at the ventilator in the centre of the police court ceiling in a manner which was plainly meant to show the court that he was not following what was being read to him.

An interpreter will be brought from Toronto through whom Svestelhekoff will be questioned and in the meantime the police intend communicating with Col. Sherwood O.C. of the Dominion Police with a view to having the record of the accused investigated as they suspect that he is acting in conjunction with a gang of his fellow countrymen in other cities who are carrying on Bolshevik propaganda and spreading the doctrines for which they are noted throughout the Dominion.

Literature of a most questionable nature was found upon the person of the accused. In these papers appeared gruesome cartoons representing the Government as a monster but as they were printed in Russian no one could understand the articles appearing in them.

Svestelhekoff worked in the C. G. E. for some time and has a wife who it is alleged is an Austrian. He resided on McDonnell street. There are two small children and these were present in the court room this morning during the hearing.

Mr. O'Brien appeared for the accused and stated that his client would neither elect nor plead at this time. Sergeant Newhall and Sergeant Reid for the Crown asked a remand for a week which was granted by His Worship.

Svestelhekoff having been remanded in custody will repose in the jail until the day of his hearing.

MOTOR SHOW TO BE FORMALLY OPENED TO PUBLIC TONIGHT

All Space in Armories is Filled by Imposing Array of Automobiles—The Exhibition of Good Roads Machinery is One of the Features

The Motor Show at the Armouries is open to the public this afternoon though the big exhibition will not be formally opened until this evening when Brigadier-General Williams, O. C., of Military District Number 3 will be present to perform that ceremony.

There is every indication that this motor show will be as big a success as any of the past. Certainly the exhibit is qeite up to that of former years if not somewhat superior.

There are no vacancies in the space marked off for exhibit purposes. Cars of every make and kind are standing row upon row all of them representing the newest models of tee makers

In the central part of the building are booths of every description in which which all kinds of auto and bicycle accessories are on exhibition, as well as other interesting things.

In the west end of the building is an exhibit which rivals any of them for interest and which everyone should make it a point to see. It is that of the Ontario Department of Public Highways and has been arranged by the Provincial Government for the information of those attending motor shows and exhibitions of all kinds throughout the country who are interested in good roads.

There will be seen examples of all kinds of modern road construction from the concrete highway to the ordinary township variety. These models are prepared so as to show the road when finished and each of the underlying layers so that the construction of the highway can be inspected by the [illegible] and its good points noted. There is even a section of the old Roman Appian Way shown in model.

Pictures of good roads throughout Ontario—none of which it may be stated were taken in the County of Peterborough for a very obvious reason—are displayed in connection with this exhibit which is in charge of Mr. J. A. P. Marshal one of the engineers of the Department of Public Highways.

The interior of the armouries presented a brilliant spectacle this afternoon, its gaily dressed boothe and the crowds of people moving along the aisles left for their passage.

Tonight the big motor parade will be held and the exhibition will be formally opened to the public. Every one is urged to attend the event this year as the show is being held under the auspices of the Local Health Association and everyone is conversant with the good work carried on by that organization. Aside from this feature of the case the exhibit is well worth seeing and the man, woman boy or girl who can pass down the rows of beautiful motor cars which are shown there, all this year's model without being interested, should have been born in the closing days of the 17th century when locomotion was accomplished by means of sedan chairs and lumbering coaches. To the motor enthusiast there is enough material at this year's motor show to keep him interested for hours.

Allied Troops Retire From Odessa

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, April 9.—The evacuation of the Black Sea port of Odessa by the Allied forces is confirmed officially.

A Paris despatch Tuesday night said that a wireless message received there from Moscow reported the capture of Odessa by Ukrainian Soviet troops. On Sunday the Paris Matin said that the evacuation of Odessa by the Allies was imminent as the Bolshevik pressure was increasing. The paper said that the Allied forces probably would be withdrawn ultimately to the line of the Dniester, west and south of Odessa.

H. M. Mathews of the Trades Council Receives Ruling From Justice Department.

A few weeks ago Howard M. Mathews, a delegate to the Trades and Labor Council from the Typographical Union of this city submitted a resolution at a meeting of the former organization requesting the Attorney-General of Ontario to take action to prevent the Dominion Police Stationed in this city from bringing defaulters from the County of Victoria and trying them in the Police Court at Peterborough.

The resolution urged that these draft evaders be tried in the county where they lived and had committed their offence in the same manner as other offenders against the law of the land were dealt with. The resolution which was seconded by Secretary Stevens was carried by the vote of the Trades Council and forwarded to the Department of the Attorney-General

This morning Mr. Mathews received the following communication from the Attorney-General's Department:

Toronto, April 7, 1919

Dear sir:—

Again referring to your communication enclosing a Resolution passed by the Trades and Labor Council at Peterborough to which I have referred in my letter to you of March 22, I beg to say that I took up this matter with the Department of Jusice at Ottawa and his morning received a letter from the Deputy Minister a copy of which for your information I enclose.

Yours faithfully,
E. BAYLEY,
Solicitor to the Attorney-General's Department.

Below is the copy of the letter to which the Solicitor of the Attorney-General's Department refers in the communication printed above:

Ottawa, April 4, 1919

Dear sir:

Referring to your letter of 22nd ultimo, enclosing copy of a resolution from the Trades and Labor Council of Peterborough upon the subject of Military Service prosecutions there I may inform you that the Inspector of Dominion Police at Peterborough is instructed to prosecute at Peterborough only cases of offences committed within the county. I think it is well understood that offences should be prosecuted within the jurisdiction within which they are committed, and if offenders have been brought to Peterborough who should have been tried at Lindsay, I think it must have been by mistake. At all events I have directed the attention of the Acting Chief Commissioner of Police to the matter, and have no doubt that he will see that instructions are carefully followed.

Yours very truly.
E. L. NEWCOMBE,
Deputy Minister of Justice.

MAJ. ACKERMAN WINS ACTION

CASE OF D. B. IUESON AGAINST HIM DISMISSED BY COURT.

In January, 1918, Messrs Gordon, Widdifield and O'Brien took out a writ in the County Court for D.B. Iveson against Major Charles Ackerman contending that Ackerman owed a considerable sum for wages. Major Ackerman set up that he had from time to time paid Mr. Iveson wages and on December 15th, while in Savannah with the plaintiff, sold the Canadian Trench Exhibit to Messrs Victor and Saxby who amongst other things agreed to pay Mr. Iveson. In the Court yesterday Mr. C.R. Widdifield on behalf of Iveson pressed strenuously that no such bargain had been made.

After hearing the examination and cross-examination of witnesses all day, His Honor Judge Huycke gave a carefully considered judgment deciding that Mr. Iveson's claim should be dismissed without costs, Major Medd stating his client did not press for costs against Iveson.

Berlin, April 9.—At this morning's session of the Soviet Congress the Independent Socialists presented two resolutions extending greeings to the Bavarian and Hungarian Soviet Republics. There was a lively discussion, especially regarding Bavaria. The Independent Socialists wanted the Congress to express the hope that the Bavarian proletariat might overcome the opposition and that the rest of Germany might follow its example. The motion was postponed after unfavorable discussion. The greeting to Hungary was accepted, in spite of recent threatening predictions.

Berlin was quiet today, being strongly patrolled by government forces, with artillery. Wilhelmstrasse was commanded by machine guns from the chancellory. No strikes were reported up till noon. Spartacan leaders at Hamburg are plotting to proclaim a Soviet republic in that city, according to the Zeitung am Mittag, which calls upon Gustav Noske, minister of war, to send troops there to prevent this action.

THE MOTOR SHOW.

WHEN THE MOTOR SHOW in the Armories was first instituted two years ago the financial object in view was to secure funds to help on the war work in which the members of the Red Cross were at that time so earnestly and effectively engaged. Happily, the necessity for that work no longer exists, but there is a line of endeavor on the part of public-spirited citizens which is just as worthy of popular support. The Peterborough Health Association, the mission of which is to stamp out the white plague and to care for the victims who are already past hope, require money for the task which they have so unselfishly chosen. One of the plans in view by the organization, which depends almost entirely upon public contributions, is the erection of a sanitarium where tuberculosis cases can be treated.

The receipts of the Motor Show, which opens in the Armories this evening, with a street parade as the preliminary attraction, will be turned over to the Health Association. The function deserves a liberal patronage, having a double claim upon the people of this city and district. Its merits alone should assure a large attendance, while another and equally important inducement is the object which the promoters have in view in raising funds for the benefit of the unfortunate.

CONCRETE VERSUS STEEL.

THE EMPLOYMENT PROBLEM is becoming acute in Peterborough. Men are out of work in all sections of the community. Some industrial plants are practically closed down and others are laying off hands day after day. To create work for these idle men just as soon as possible is the object of the City Council, the members of the Board of Trade, in fact every public-spirited citizen in Peterborough.

If the Hunter street bridge, supposed to be the temporal salvation of the idle workmen, is built of concrete, according to present or modified plans, the bulk of the work will be done at home by residents of the city. The money will be kept and spent in Peterborough, and that fact should be an important consideration in determining the issue.

If, on the other hand, a steel bridge is put up, the bulk of the money will be paid to outside labor. The different parts will be prepared in factories outside the city and will be brought here ready to be put together. Thousands of dollars will leak out of the city treasury to be gathered in by those who have no interest in the welfare of the city.

Work for the home workers should be the first consideration, and this does not necessarily imply wasteful extravagance in construction. It is simply a question of the city caring for its own. Why should steel workers be employed in Toronto or other outside cities at good wages paid with Peterborough money while home workingmen are in idleness and their families in want?

The City Council can control this matter to the extent of assuring all possible work for local men on the bridge by deciding upon a concrete structure. If the present plans are not suitable, they can be revised. It is bad enough to let even the construction work to an outside firm, but this is a point which must be decided by the amounts of the various tenders. If an outside tenderer gets the contract, he will have in Peterborough a business, for one or two years, second to none as a profitable investment to any in the city, and this without the burden of paying any of the city's taxes. Nothing that he uses here can be assessed except the temporary office building he may put up, worth about fifty or one hundred dollars. This demonstrates the vagaries of the tax system of Ontario which taxes a humble pedlar but lets the big outside contractor escape. Even if the latter is obligated to employ local labor, a large part of his staff, and those who are best paid, are sure to be from outside. There are Peterborough contractors well able to undertake this bridge construction, firms who stand as high as any in Canada, and the members of which are large taxpayers. The pity of it is that they could not be given special consideration when the contract is awarded. Home industry, whether national or municipal, is the paramount issue.

Peterborough should put up a bridge worthy a place of its importance. Posterity's rights are to be considered, as posterity will help pay the bill. In the meantime, however, it is the idle workmen in the city who have a claim, and many of these men will be taxed for the outlay.

THE PROPOSED PLEBISCITE.

THE FOUR QUESTIONS that it is proposed to submit to the electors at the temperance referendum to be taken in Ontario next Fall give an ample opportunity for an expression of every form of temperance sentiment in the Province. The provision that every voter must mark his ballot so as to answer all questions, otherwise his vote is not counted, assures a majority. No other form of ballot could be devised to so fit in with the expressions of opinion that were reflected in the petitions which four years ago made the adoption of the Ontario Temperance Act possible. All sorts and conditions of men signed those petitions. Some were for nothing short of absolute prohibition. Others were for the use of beer and wine only. Still others favored stricter regulations, while a large percentage stood for restriction only for the duration of the war. The out-and-out prohibitionists won four years ago, when war-time prohibition was enacted. The other classes were shown no consideration, but that is to be accorded them now, when all the soldiers are home again and a full verdict from the people can be obtained.

One or other of the four questions will be assured of a majority. If the first question carries, the old license law will be restored. If the second secures the most votes, then the Government will sell light beer in packages. The open bar will not be restored. If the supporters of the third question prevail, light beer will be sold in the bars of standard hotels, unless such sale is prohibited by local option, and no three-fifths majority will be required as formerly. If the fourth question is carried, the Government will control the sale of liquor in sealed packages only, and there will be no public drinking places.

If the Government take over the control of the liquor business under the present Temperance Act or at any future time by authority of a new mandate from the people, there is an excellent opportunity for the correction of many abuses. There will be no monopoly for any private vendor who is fortunate enough to get a license as such. If there is any profit in the business it should go to the people, not to an individual. The price of liquor will be set by law, not maintained at a figure which makes it a luxury which only the well-to-do can enjoy, placing it beyond the means of the poor, even when prescribed by a physician.

The question of the open bar will always form the basis of argument. If light beer is allowed to be sold by virtue of the coming referendum, then a problem will arise as to whether it would be the part of wisdom to prohibit such sales in standard hotels, and so converting the homes into so many drinking places. If the sale is permitted in hotels, then the traffic can be subject to official regulations that would otherwise be impossible.

Still, at present it would appear that the restoration of the bar as it formerly existed or as a place where the sale of beer alone will be permitted, is a remote eventuality.

PANHANDLING THE LEGISLATURE.

THE LATE SIR JAMES WHITNEY, after he had heard a delegation, never sent the members of it away cherishing any false hopes. That stereotyped answer, "This matter will receive careful consideration," had no part in his code. When a case was laid before him, he gave it its quietus if it did not appeal to him.

A short time before his death a delegation of residents in the Grand River Valley waited upon him to ask if he could not do anything to prevent the spring freshets peculiar to that region. After listening to a statement of the case, the late Premier gave his answer in the form of a question. "Do you expect," he said, "the Legislature to do your ditching for you?" That ended the first and last chapter.

It is interesting to conjecture just what Sir James Whitney, if alive and in office, would have said to the delegates from the City Council that waited on the Government yesterday to ask for a grant for the Hunter street bridge. If the Legislature of Ontario proposes to build the bridges for the municipalities, the new field of endeavor that is thus opened up before the lawmakers is a wide one, and some new tax levy must be invented to meet the cost. But the suave Sir William Hearst, who is honest without the bluntness of his predecessor in office, sent the delegates away with the promise that their request would be considered. This will at least soothe the feelings of the aldermen, and in a measure at least compensate them for the expense and the discomforts of the trip, discomforts of which they are given to complain when taxed with taking a holiday.

Anyway the delegation have won the distinction of setting up a precedent in the matter of approaching the Legislature for a grant. Let them settle among themselves the question as to whom belongs the honor of first conceiving the idea. Approaching the Hydro Commission with the same object in view is another bootless task. Even if Sir Adam Beck consented to make a grant, it would be nothing more than a loan to be repaid with interest when the city takes over the street railway system. If the city is out to borrow money, the aldermen can find customers for the civic paper much nearer home.

It is true that the Government at Ottawa has made a grant of $50,000 to the bridge, but that is no reason why the city should approach the Legislature for aid. The Federal authorities simply donate an equivalent to the price of the draw they would be forced to put in if the city built other than a bridge that would not interfere with the ordinary traffic on a navigable stream.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

WITH SOME MEMBERS of the Dominion Parliament it seems to be just one muck rake after another.

● ● ● ● ●

ANYWAY, the deputation, if they did not conquer after going and seeing, at least established a precedent.

● ● ● ● ●

THE POPPIES are blooming again on those myriads of graves in Flanders, and still the dove of peace cannot find rest for the sole of her foot.

● ● ● ● ●

TAKING CANDY from a baby is an entirely different proposition from trying to induce the Legislature to come across with a bridge donation.

● ● ● ● ●

MICHIGAN has had a year's trial of bone dry prohibition, and the other day on a referendum refused to loosen up the restrictions. And they say the new woman's vote did it.

● ● ● ● ●

ELEVEN newspapermen have been shot in Kiev. Here the most they can do to a reporter is to shut him out of a meeting or enjoin him not to publish something about the new bridge.

● ● ● ● ●

WHY NOT ASK the North Monaghan Council for a contribution to help build the Hunter street bridge? Such a move would at least have the merit of establishing another precedent.

IS PROHIBITION LOSING GROUND?

(New York Commercial)

Nebraska has repealed its anti-cigarette law. Chicago has voted "wet," its women voters favoring it three to one. Similar illustrations are multiplying, and are regarded as prophetic.

Negative laws are distasteful to the American temperament and philosophy. Prohibitory legislation, which has floated in with the tide of restrictive measures made necessary by war emergencies, has "arrived"—so far as its appearance in the statutes is concerned, but by no means as regards the public mind. Its manner, in a grotesque attempt to become unfamiliar, fails to be ingratiating. Proximity brings disenchantment.

Prohibition, in the wide application of the principle, cannot hold favor for the plain reason that it prohibits. It is not without its good and useful points, but these will have to be expressed in some other way.

One of the chief faults of the prohibition of the manufacture and sale of alcoholic beverages is, of course, that in its present form it proposes to go to the limits of negation. Colonel Roosevelt used to say that "every reform has a fanatic fringe," which is apparent in the present instance since no farseeing prohibitionist, even though radical in his ultimate purposes, would attempt complete results at a single heavy blow. The rubber ball bounces the higher the harder it is thrown and revulsion and reaction to sudden drastic prohibition are appearing with unexpected suddenness and strength.

Prohibition enactments in the various communities and states have not had uniform causes. This is the underlying reason why a Federal amendment is unwise. States' rights are much talked about, but there is a stronger argument against the addition to the Constitution in the fact, for instance, that Georgia's main reason for going dry is a considerably different one from that of Ohio. In some sections the reason is largely economic; in others a wave of puritanism, against which we do not scoff, but in which we see dangers because of its ephemeral character, due to the near-fanatical and extremely repressive elements within it. Blue laws prove impractical because, as has been said many times, moral precepts cannot be created by legislation. They come as the evolution of ages of human experiences.

There is a golden mean to be found somewhere in the matter of prohibition. The reaction from present prohibition legislation of state-wide and national scope will bring a realization of that golden mean appreciably nearer. Laws must not be set up to be abused; they must be workable. Regulation can be of permissive character. Time will probably bring a system of uniform regulation, but coupled with self-determination, as in the case of local option, as to whether alcoholic beverages shall be available.

TO-DAY'S STORY

"Now, see here, Jane," said Stephen Ellis, angrily pacing up and down in front of a prim, middle aged woman. "This is the first time you have been here since Emily died and I took Philip, and I want you to understand your position with regard to him. You must treat him as my son and your nephew, and I'll not allow you to do otherwise. I don't want to be harsh, but I insist on that. Will you do as I say?"

The woman, his maiden sister, hesitated a few moments. With every one but Stephen she was stern and commanding, but she stood a little in awe of him. At last she replied. "Yes, Stephen, I'll do as you say, though it will be most trying. You know I never approved of your adopting him at all, and—"

"Oh, yes; I know it. You've rubbed it in enough times in your letters. We'll not discuss it again. I'll make living here as pleasant as possible for you, provided you forget Phil's birth." And sitting down, he took up a newspaper with an air that boded no good to his sister if she dared to resume the conversation.

Miss Jane Ellis had come to live with her brother. She would have done so years ago, after his wife died, if she had not had to care for her helpless old mother. Her release had come a few weeks before. She had closed the old home, ready to be sold, and had made the long journey to the great city where her brother lived.

Stephen Ellis was a prosperous banker and a well liked man. He had all the qualities of a good business man and a "good mixer." In addition he had one peculiarity or "hobby." This was his firm belief that environment can overcome hereditary traits. To prove this he had adopted a baby whose parents were thieves. This child, the Philip of whom he had been speaking to Jane, he had brought up with every attention as his own son. The boy, now a fine lad of 17, knew nothing of his real parentage; he thought himself really Philip Ellis. Of course, Ellis' friends had predicted dire things when he took the boy, but for some time no one had spoken about Philip's ancestry. Now, Jane's advent reopened that subject.

When Philip came in his aunt greeted him as cordially as she ever greeted any one and obeyed her brother's orders to the letter.

All went smoothly for a few days until one morning Mr. Ellis was surprised to hear an agitated rap on his door. He was dressing and was annoyed at being disturbed.

"Yes. Come in!" he called, and his sister entered.

She said at once, "Philip isn't here this morning and didn't sleep here last night. Also, my gold brooch which used to be mother's and which I foolishly left lying on my dresser yesterday, has mysteriously disappeared." There was a world of sarcasm in her harsh voice, for her day of triumph had come. "It's just what I always told you—it's blood that counts in the end."

"Nonsense! I don't believe it. Phil was home last night he'll turn up again tonight. You've just mislaid the brooch and will find it when you looked carefully for it."

"But I have looked for it, though I know perfectly that I haven't lost it. It's that precious boy of yours," she ended, flouncing out of the room.

Ellis uttered some not very complimentary words about his sister, but what could he do to prove Phil's honesty? He had absolute faith in his adopted son. When that day and the next, however, passed with no sign of either Phil or the brooch he did begin to wonder where the boy was. His sister's "I told you so" airs were almost more than he could endure. Once or twice he vented his anger against her, but she remained as insolent as ever.

When Mr. Ellis came home the second evening of Phil's absence his sister met him at the door, contrary to her usual custom of not seeing him till dinner. She seemed nervous and her manner was much changed from that of the last two days.

"Stephen," she began with apparent difficulty. "Stephen, I—I fear that I have wronged Philip. A—a most strange thing happened today. As soon as you are ready to listen to me I'll tell you about it."

"I'm ready now," answered her brother, perplexed to see her as much moved as she now showed herself to be.

"Well, this morning I was speaking to one of the housemaids—the youngest, scarcely more than a girl. I happened to make some observation about Philip's absence and noticed that she looked rather queer. I suspected that she knew more than we did and asked: 'Do you know where he is?' She said: 'Oh, no, ma'am. I don't know. How should I?' Then I inquired what she did know. She stuttered and tried to avoid answering, but I wouldn't allow it. At last she blurted out: 'He d-didn't t-take the brooch.' 'How do you—' I started to say, but she burst into tears, confessing that she had taken it herself? She overheard me talking to you and accusing Philip of the theft (for I told nobody of our suspicions) and could not bear to have him blamed. She claimed she had not intended to take it. She returned it and I did not discharge her, because she promised very readily never to do anything of the kind again."

Ellis with difficulty forbore making any ironic comment. He felt happy and relieved, even though Phil was still gone. He was confident that the boy would write to him soon.

He was very much pleased when the next day he received the following letter:

"Dear Dad: I know you must wonder what has happened to me. I am at the Great Lakes naval training station. I just had to enlist. I asked you several times and you wouldn't let me, so the only thing for me to do was to beat it. I was afraid you'd stop me if I left a note in my room. It's great here and I am crazy over it.

"Your loving son,

"June 30, 1918. PHILIP."

DRINK HOT WATER BEFORE BREAKFAST

Says you really feel clean, sweet and fresh inside, and are seldom ill.

If you are accustomed to wake up with a coated tongue, foul breath or a dull, dizzy headache; or, if your meals sour and turn into gas and acids, you have a real surprise awaiting you.

To-morrow morning, immediately upon arising, drink a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This is intended to first neutralize and then wash out of your stomach, liver, kidneys and thirty feet of intestines all the indigestible waste, poisons, sour biles and toxins, thus cleansing sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal.

Those subject to sick headaches, backache, bilious attacks, constipation or any form of stomach trouble, are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store and begin enjoying this morning inside-bath. It is said that men and women who try this become enthusiastic and keep it up daily. It is a splendid health measure for it is more important to keep clean and pure on the inside than on the outside, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing disease, while the bowel pores do.

The principle of bathing inside is not new, as millions of people practice it. Just as hot water and soap cleanse, purify and freshen the skin, so hot water and a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. Limestone phosphate is an inexpensive white powder and almost tasteless.

GOVERNMENT TO LOOK INTO THE BUTTER PRICES

MINISTER OF LABOR WILL TAKE MATTER UP WITH CONSUMERS

Ottawa, April 8.— Representations have been made to the government by W. F. Maclean M.P., for South York respecting the recent sensational rise in the price of butter with the request that the government investigate and take suitable action in the promises. There is undoubtedly a real scarcity in the butter supply, but it is believed that the recent advance of 20 per cent per pound in price is partly due to manipulation, and also to butter being exported. The abattoirs have also advanced the price of oleomargerine. Hon Gideon Robertson, minister of Labor said that the subject was receiving the attention of his department. The Minister was called to Montreal shortly after noon but will be here today, and will take up the subject with Mr. J. F. Crompton, the Toronto representative of the labor department, and with some of the cold storage houses and dealers in Toronto. Before leaving for Montreal, he mailed instructions to Mr. J. F. Crompton at Toronto and also wired the Canadian Swift and the Harris Abattoir to learn whether this had advanced the price of oleomargerine, and why.

Will Break Combines

The visible supply of butter, said Mr. Robertson, is undoubtedly small, but I do not think any considerable quantity is being exported. If there be any exportation going on it is to the United States. My department has no power to fix prices of butter, but we can and will intervene to regulate the price by breaking up any combine and by giving widespread publicity to all the facts. The governor-in-council, however has ample powers to embargo the export of butter and to fix the price if necessary. Should the investigation I have ordered in Toronto, show such a course to be advisable, I have no doubt the government will take appropriate action. The situation however, is not a local one as the price of butter is as high in Ottawa as it is in Toronto, and has risen rapidly in every part of the country.

"As to oleomargerine," the minister continued, "I am not certain at the moment whether the advance in price is due to the manufacturers or to a combine among the retailers. There would be less difficulty in dealing with oleomargerine than with butter.

What some public speakers need is better terminal facilities.

Michigan Stands For Prohibition

PROPOSED AMENDMENT TO AMEND DRY LAW IS REJECTED.

Detroit, April 9. — Casting the heaviest vote ever recorded at a biennial Spring election, Michigan electors on the fact of incomplete returns rejected a proposed amendment to modify the prohibition law adopted a $50,000,000 road building program and gave the Republican ticket a minor State officers an overwhelming majority. The feminine vote, a factor for the first time in a State election, figured prominently in the balloting on the liquor amendment.

EVEN CROSS, SICK CHILDREN LOVE SYRUP OF FIGS

IF FEVERISH, BILIOUS, CONSTIPATED, GIVE FRUIT LAXATIVE

Don't scold your fretful, peevish child. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with sour waste.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomachache, indigestion, diarrhoea, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul waste, the sour bile and fermenting food passes out of the bowels and you have a well and playful child again. Children love this harmless "fruit laxative," and mothers can rest easy after giving it, because it never fails to make their little "insides" clean and sweet.

Keep it handy, Mother! A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Remember there are counterfeits sold here, so surely look and see that yours is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup.

CHILDREN'S FETE

Otonabee Chapter, I. O. D. E.

Those who desire to have their children take part in the Fancy Dress Party given by the Chapter on Saturday afternoon, April 26th. are reminded that it would be well for them to secure their tickets as early as possible, as the number, for both children and spectators, is necessarily limited. Tickets may be obtained from any member of the Chapter.

It is expected that the entertainment will be one of the prettiest of the season, as well as being absolutely new to Peterborough. All sorts of entertainments are being arranged for the little ones, as well as those for the older children.

Miss Littlefield has kindly arranged to have some fancy dances presented by her pupils.

On Wednesday, April 2nd, at the manse, Keene, Ont., by Rev. McEachern, Jean Olive, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Barrie, of Birdsall, Ont., was married to Mr. Thomas Cardwell of Westwood.

Mrs. Thomas Howson, who has been quite ill the past ten days, is able to be out again.

Old Fashioned* Brown Sugar

There are many other good things in this book suitable for simple entertaining; little plain cakes for the afternoon tea party; a delicious caramel ice cream which takes no cream at all; even a few candies for the children (since children must have candy for their health's sake), and Grandmother's candies are both wholesome and economical.

Lantic Old-Fashioned Brown Sugars come in three kinds known by your grocer as Lantic Light, Brilliant and Dark Yellow, but the Brilliant is more generally recommended for the dishes in the cook book.

If you do not regularly use brown sugar in home cooking, buy some to-day and try it. It costs a little less than granulated, it sweetens as well as flavors, and gives to many simple dishes a delightful flavor that makes them more acceptable than richer foods. PETER WRIGHT TELLS TORONTO CHURCH IS REMISS IN ITS DUTY

Says Christ Would Be Found Anywhere but in Places of Worship in That City.

A direct accusation that the Church is not living up to its opportunities, and is not sufficiently Christlike in its deeds, was made by Mr. Peter Wright, British seaman, in the course of an address delivered at Bloor Street Presbyterian Church, Toronto, when he made an appeal to the Church to wake up and live as Christ would live were He on earth today." The fault which Mr. Wright found with the Church in general was that it was too much swayed by outside influences, instead of controlling those influences, the chief influences he referred to being the powers of finance. Undoubtedly, he added, the Church is crawling behind something, instead of getting out in the open and creating public opinion. There are thousands and thousands of men and women in the world today, he added, living under conditions which make it absolutely impossible for them to be either pure or honest, and if Christ were in the world today He would not be found in the churches of cities such as Toronto, but He would be living His life out with those who are considered as outcasts and beneath the attention of church people.

Money the Standard

"We are just on the starting point of a great new era," he continued "where it will become possible for God to be represented in His true form, and where it will be possible for people to live a true life such as they have never been able to live in the past. In the past a man has been judged, not by his spiritual qualities, but by the amount of money he had in the bank. The tendency has been to go to his banker for a character reference instead of to his minister, but the time is not far distant when that filthy lucre will not have such great weight; the time is coming when a man may be judged by his dignity and his character; and that is more like the views of Christ. If Christ were to come to earth today He would be found anywhere but in the churches. The churches are too respectable for Him. He would not find in them the spirit of the Sermon on the Mount. He would find them spoiled by wealth, so the atmosphere would not be congenial to Him, nor would He find that high and living spirit of sacrifice which He exhibited while on earth.

"Though I am not a church member He has stood by me, not only on shore, but has comforted me in the forecastle, and has given me the power to control myself. I would far sooner have Him and His friendship than all the dirty money I could lay my hands on.

Church is Controlled

"The churches could be made the greatest power under the sun, if they only occupied their legitimate place in the world. They could rule affairs at Ottawa, instead of being ruled by them. They could set the standards of comercial value, instead of being controlled by the standards which other people set up, but such a condition of affairs has grown up that the outside world creates the standards of morality upon which the Church lives."

One point where the speaker found the churches very remiss was in handling the problems of poverty. Referring to New York, he declared the churches of that city would be filled with great wealth at the [illegible] time thousands of men and women were living in huddled masses, [illegible] and 12 in a room, in a constant struggle to keep alive, and to-day they would go out and work from [illegible] to 14 hours, merely to keep body and soul together. Such conditions, he declared, should not be tolerated; it should no longer be possible for one-tenth of the people to control the destinies of the other nine-tenths, and, referring to Toronto, he found that there are buildings in the city which are a disgrace to civilization. Those are existing conditions, but if the Church did its duty, they could be swiftly swept aside.

A WEEK IN THE LEGISLATURE

Temperance Bill Most Important Measure Brought in This Session.—Tax Experiment in Ottawa.

Toronto, April 9.—The outstanding event in the transactions of the legislature during the past week was the announcement late Monday afternoon by the Prime Minister of the intention of the Government with regard to Temperance Legislation this session. Already as foreshadowed in the speech from the throne the Government proposes taking over entirely the distribution of liquor as now carried on by the licensed vendors and increasing the same extent the facilities for purchasing liquor. In addition to that there has been under discussion the form in which the promised referendum on the whole liquor question is to be submitted.

Before announcing the plan adopted by the Government the Prime Minister reviewed the cour of Temperance Legislation in Ontario from the time the Ontario Temperance Act was first proposed. Going back to conditions that existed prior to 1916 the Premier pointed out that the Ontario Temperance Act was passed as a War Measure and that subsequent events have proved that the Legislature acted wisely in adopting the course that was followed at that time' In that connection the Premier referred to the language he used in moving the second reading of the Bill in 1916 that "I would not think of urging the passage of this Bill through the House without a vote of the people, but for the war and the obligations imposed thereby." Continuing he said that following the trial that has been given to the Ontario Temperance Act it was evident that public opinon was strongly against the restoration of the old license system with open bar but nevertheless there were people who argued in favor of a stronger beer beverage. The Government had consequently come to the conclusion that to submit only the question of continuing the present Act would not give public opinion "an opportunity of expressing itself in the ballot box as freely and untrammeled as possible" as promised when the former legislation mas passed. I order that the referendum would register the full sentiment of the people on the whole question the government had decided to submit four questions on the ballot as follows:

1.—Are you in favor of the repeal of the Ontario Temperance Act?

2.—Are you in favor of the sale of light beer, containing not more than 2 and 51-100 per cent. alcohol weight measure through government agencies, and amendments to the Ontario Temperance Act to permit such sale?

3.—Are you in favor of the sale of light beer containing not more than 2-51/100 per cent. alcohol weight measure in standard hotels in local municipalites that by majority vote favor such and amendments to the Ontario Temperance Act to permit such sale?

4.—Are you in favor of the sale of spirituous and malt liquors through Government agencies and amendments to the Ontario Temperance Act to permit such sale?

The Premier explained that to avoid confusion each question would be kept separate and in order that every voter should give full expression to his views each question would have to be answered "Yes or "No," and any ballot not so completely marked would be rejected.

As the vote will be in the nature of a referendum the provisions of the new legislation will operate automatically with the registration of the vote so that there will be no delay in implementing the expressed will of the people when the vote is recorded. In the meantime there will be no change in the present features of the Ontario Temperance Act except as indicated until the vote is taken.

The persons entitled to vote on these questions will be those who vote on any election to the Legislative Assembly, namely, men and women of 21 years of age, British subjects and qualified by residence. Owing to the difficulty of determining when the soldiers will return the date of voting will be fixed by proclamation but in all probability will be early in the fall.

The light beer referred to will meet the requirements of those who have discussed the matter with the government and conforms with similar legislation in the Province of Quebec and is declared to be easy of manufacture.

It is pointed out that the legislature has no authority to deal with the manufacture or importation of intoxicating liquors as that is an authority resting entirely with the Federal Parliament. The manufacture of intoxicating liquors has been prohibited in Canada since December 31st, 1918 and importation since December 24th 1917.

Bills Brought In.

Important amendments to the assessment Act following the consideration of certain proposals by a Select Committee will give municipalities the power to apply a differential rate on improvements as follows:—On dwellings valued at $2,000 to be assessed at 50 per cent. of their value; $2500 at 60 per cent.; at $3,000 at 70 per cent.; at $4,000 at 90 per cent. In country districts this exemption shall apply to all buildings not exclusively dwellings.

An Experiment in Taxation.

The principle of total exemption of improvements as discussed for many years by tax reformers has been conceded as an experiment to the city of Ottawa in its Private Bill. By a vote of the ratepayers improvements may be exempted 25 per cent. per year over a period of four years until there is no assessment whatever on improvements. Pending the result of this experiment its application further is to be withheld in order to determine whether it operates in favor of a more equalized tax incidence than the present system.

An important measure introduced by the Attorney-General provides for the reduction in the number of County Judges. This will mean that outside of the large cities no junior judges will be appointed, and those at present holding office will be transferred from time to time as vacancies occur. The fee system is to be abolished and the Province will pay a fixed salary of $1,000 per year. The saving to the country through this arrangement will be ultimately about $100,000.00 a year.

Amendments to the Workmen's Compensation Act provide for the entire cost of medical attendance in respect of injuries being borne by the Province and an increase in the monthly allowance to widows from $20 to $30 and children from $5.00 to $7.50. The maximum to all dependents being limited to $60 per month if the statutory limitation of 55 per cent. of the average earnings will permit.

A Labor Saving Combination

EDDY'S TWIN BEAVER

"It is the last straw that breaks the camel's back." So runs the old proverb. And it is the little extra efforts which tire you out on wash-day.

Eddy's
Indurated Fibreware
Washtubs and Washboards

form a combination which save you much extra labor. Indurated Fiberware tubs are much easier to lift and to move about. They keep the water hot for a much longer space of time, because they do not conduct heat as metal does. They are easier to keep clean, because they are made in one piece without joint or seam, and the hard, glazed surface is impervious to liquids or odors. And they cost no more. Last longer, too.

Eddy's Twin Beaver Washboard has a double rubbing surface of Indurated Fibreware which loosens the dirt quickly and saves many tiresome motions.

Ontario's Temperance Record

Some correspondents of the daily press want to know when the people of Ontario gave the Hearst Government a mandate for prohibition of the liquor traffic. The following is the copy of a letter which makes answer to the question and which is as true today as itw as in March, 1916 when it appeared in several newspapers.

In Oliver Mowat's time as Premier on January 2, 1894, they voted 192,489 for and only 110,720 against, being a majority of nearly two to one for Provincial prohibition.

Next, not five years later, September 29, 1898, a Dominion-wide vote was called for, and this resulted as follows: 154,498, as against 115,284. Majority 39,214 from Ontario.

Then again, in Mr. Ross' time, we went once more to the polls, and this time upon the same Manitoba act on which that Province is to cast its ballots on the 13th inst. On this Occasion the vote resulted in 199,745 for to 103,548 against. Majority, 96,201, or within 7,347 of being two to one.

That was three times, and on every January 1st from that time until now the people have voted in large sections on the question under the Local Option Act, with very large majorities in nearly every case, until out of our 851 municipalities 576, or over two to one are now in the "dry" column.

The province will again vote squarely on the issue next fall and the result is not hard to anticipate with the figures available as above quoted.

GREAT REVIVAL HELD AT OSHAWA

EVANGELIST KENNEDY CONCLUDES THREE WEEKS' OF MOST SUCCESSFUL CAMPAIGN.

(Special to The Review.)

Oshawa, April 9.—The greatest revival that has been seen in this place for many years has recently come to a close. Evangelist H. D. Kennedy, of Peterboro, was here for three weeks. Again and again the question was asked: "Has Billy Sunday come to town?" There seemed to be something about the man that compelled people to listen, to think, to decide. The key note of all his preaching was "Ye must be born again." Sin in every shape and form was dragged from its hiding and exposed by this fearless preacher

Mr. Kennedy has a most wonderful message and preached in a most wonderful way and with most wonderful results. Every sermon seemed to be hurled forth with an earnestness of a soul held in the grip of the Holy Spirit and "many who came to scoff remained to pray."

It is a long time since any of the churches of this town has seen the place packed and the altar crowded with seekers, yet night after night this was witnessed in this great campaign here. As a direct result of the meetings, over 170, besides a number of children, publicly confessed having found Christ as their personal Savior indicating a desire to join this and other churches of the town. Habits long formed were abandoned, family altars were set up and broken family circles were united.

There is nothing sensational or emotional about this evangelist's work His preaching appeals to the common sense and reason. There is no reaction after he leaves—the good work still goes on.

Mr. Kennedy is planning to open an evangelistic campaign in Peterboro early in June and we are sure he will be held up in prayer for the work there, by hundreds of kind friends he has left behind him here.

EDITOR'S MAIL

Editor Review: There appeared a telegram in your paper March 18th, headed "Cheap Power for Lakefield," wired from Toronto by Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., as follows: "Notwithstanding the request to the Reeve of Lakefield for further postponement the Lakefield Council accepted Mr. J. H. Burnham's invitation and joined him in the appointment to meet the Hydro-Electric Commission this morning. The interview was most satisfactory. The chief engineer said that the prompt application from Lakefield for power would mean cheap power for Lakefield, instead of dear, etc."

Now, Sir, I think Mr. Burnham should have acquainted himself with the fact and been careful from whom he got his information, as the Reeve of Lakefield is one of the strongest supporters of the Hydro-Electric power and always has been. Mr. Burnham wired me from Toronto saying he had made an appointment with the Hydro-Electric Commission for ten o'clock the following morning which was indeed a surprise to me as Mr. Burnham had never been authorized by the Lakefield Council to do so. However, what Mr. Burnham has done is all right and I hope Lakefield will get the best of results from it, as for my self. I was confined to my room through illness and was unable to go with the deputation to Toronto, but it was on my suggestion that the deputation went to Toronto to meet the Hydro Commission.

Furthermore, it has been stated by some parties that the Lakefield Council are playing into the hands of the Dickson Company but there is no truth in the matter whatever. Personally, I have always worked for the best interest for power for Lakefield and I am not now nor did I ever play into the hands of any private company as some selfish parties are trying to make it appear. I remain,

Yours truly,
P. J. MOORE,
Reeve of Lakefield.

ENGINES MUST BE REDESIGNED

Low grade gas is about the most serious problem confronting the motorists of today. Yet eminent engineers all agree that there are more thermal units or power in low grade kerosine gas than in high test gasoline. The big difficulty is in getting an engine that will extract this power. Two years ago a famous engineer said that automobile engines would have to be redesigned to use to advantage present-day inferior gas. The Chalmers Motor Co. was the first to adopt the policy. They have already built in two new features, the Hot Spot and Ram's horn manifold, specially designed to cope with the low grade gas situation. That these devices have been a success is proven by the increased demand for the Chalmers car. Dealers all assert that it is the Hot Spot that is responsible for their greater sales. That owners are all responsible about the Hot Spot and claim it has made the Chalmers the one great car today. The device called the Hot Spot in the Chalmers car acts upon the gas immediately it leaves the carburetor. It breaks it up into tiny dry particles which engineers call "dry gas." In this condition the gas explodes much more easily than ordinarily, more can escape. This eliminates all raw gas troubles. The Ramshorn Manifold is so designed as to carry this "dry gas" to the cylinders quickly and without turning sharp bends. This feature assures equal distribution of the gas to each cylinder.

These features would seem to prove that it is necessary to redesign this automobile engine or at any rate incorporate some new appliance. Because the Hot Spot and Ramshorn Manifold even on today's low grade gas have certainly given the Chalmers car the soft flow of power so essential to motoring satisfaction.

JUST IN TIME FOR BIG SHOW

An International Harvester Company's Two-Ton Truck, sold through the Duffus Garage to the Imperial Oil Company, this city, came to hand this morning. This truck is a fine specimen of reliable construction, and is fitted with a huge tank for the delivery of oil and gasoline.

The durable and serviceable qualities of this truck are evidenced in the fact that a firm of long standing business reputation like the Imperial Oil Company have made it their selection from a big list of competitors.

The International Harvester Company is permanently established in Canada and enjoys an enviable reputation for efficiency and service. Its big truck will be on exhibition at the Motor Show.

THE SAFETY CURTAIN

Kopling's India has been brought to the screen! What a world of satisfaction there is in the thought! To see pulsating in visualized form, the people immortalized in "Plain Tales from the Hills," "Under the Deodars," and in "The Story of the Gadsbys"—this means much for thousands of Kipling lovers. It is not, to be sure, the characters from Kipling's novels of which we speak; but the people and the scenes in the famous hill country of which Kipling wrote. It is these that have been brought to the screen.

Norma Talmadge it is who has performed this service to the hundreds of thousands of people who have delighted in Kipling's stories. In "The Safety Curtain," Miss Talmadge's latest Select Picture which will be shown at the Grand Opera House, next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, Matinee daily, the opening scenes of the story are laid in England, but afterwards the action takes place in India. Here it is that we pick up Kipling's trail.

First in Bombay, on the coast, and afterwards in the hill country at Simla, that the English officer, portrayed by Eugene O'Brien, sends his young wife when the season of rains and fever sets in. And it was at Simla that Kipling's most famous stories were laid. The Young wife in this case is portrayed by Norma Talmadge, and the many admirers of Miss Talmadge will find a sentimental satisfaction in seeing her graceful form moving through scenes which might well be laid in Peliti's Hotel.

If you know your Kipling, you will remember that Peliti's figures in many of the stories—"The Phantom Rickshaw," for instance. To Peliti's it was that "Ahasuerus Jenkins of the 'Operatic Own' " came when he "took two months at Simla when the year was at its Spring, and underneath the deodars eternally did sing." Here was the ballroom immortalized in "The Plea of the Simla Dancers" —perhaps the very ballroom shown by Miss Talmadge on the screen in "The Safety Curtain."

The Simla hills, the heart of Anglo-India—where "all things begin and many things come to an evil end"—it is this region that Miss Talmadge has brought to the screen in "The Safety Curtain." Even the Simla station, where so many scenes in Kipling's stories are laid, is portrayed in the course of the photoplay. And perhaps the ending of the story on the screen justifies that deathless refrain from Mr. Kipling's "Lover's Litany":

"Eyes of blue—the Simla hills—
Thus ran the Lover's Litany.
'Love like ours can never die!"

THEATRICAL

MICKEY

Several weeks prior to release of "Mickey", featuring Mabel Normand, Miss Normand was arrested and fined $2.00 by Judge House for violating traffic regulations, in trying to learn the detail of running an automobile while she used the English side of the thoroughfare. Spurning the opportunity for further publicity, Miss Normand was sparing of her remarks to the reporters to this very limited extent.

"I was so scared I didn't know what to do," This from the lady who does the breathlessly venturesome "stunts" during the progress of "Mickey", to be shown at the Grand Opera House, on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, creates a problem, to wit: How did Miss Normand keep her face straight on conveying her terror at driving an automobile at snail's pace, while being "chauffeured" into the mysteries of motor driving. Lucky thing she was arrested before the opening of "Mickey" or those reporters would have nipped the sarcasm.

Mickey plainly defines and illustrates the word "thrill," as applied to motion pictures, as she swings along from cliff to cliff in a mountain range or recklessness. In "Mckey" there is everything imaginable that might be conceived by the most inventive producer, past or present to put "thrills" in films and "project" junches upon the screen. Mickey proves herself the feminine and artistically concentrated essence of a Chaplin-Fairbanks combinations or humor and agility. And its might real, taking a dangerous fall off a horse; or hanging from the top of a building while the brave hero is forced to postpone temporarily rescuing her.

FUTURE TO FAVOR LIGHTNESS IN CARS

MORE ACCELERATNION MUST BE GAINED, SAYS ROBT. GRAY.

There will be but little new in the automobile field within the next twelve months, says Robt. Gray, president of Gray-Dort Motors, Chatham. When the new cars do come through they will not be radically changed from what we have now, but rather will be replete with detailed refinements which tend to make reformance better and the car more accessible.

If there is any tendency in general design it will be toward lighter cars, in which the lightness is secured by more scientific design and better utilization of less space. In other words, the car of the future will get better performance and have more room for driver and passenger although mounted probably on a shorter wheel base than the average car of today.

A question often asked automobile engineers is what effect is the war going to have on car design. The war is not going to have any material effect on car bodies or the general appearance of cars, although there is no doubt but what the lessons learned in the strenuous war service will leave their imprints on a number of details.

Probably the most important lesson that can be learned from the war is the necessity of accessibility. The time should come very soon in which it will no longer be necessary for a man to pay a bill of $9 or $10 to reach some part of his car which it costs 50 cents to replace. The cost of automobile labor is so high that it is very bad efficiency to have an inaccessible car. Every car is bound to wear in certain parts and the car should be so designed that the parts which wear quickest can be most easily reached. There are numberless cases where enormous bills have been paid for replacing some small part which should have geen designed so as to be accessible in a few minutes instead of requiring several hours of work perhaps by two men, to reach it.

Some of the things which are coming in the future are more scientific chassis, lubrication in which the troublesome grease cup will be eliminated and a system of chassis oiling devised that will not require the use of overalls every time the car is to be relubricated. The lighter weight of future cars will give them better acceleration than we have at the present time and better performance on hills. They will be economical from the fuel standpoint, and will use less oil. Furthermore the lighter weight and increasing use of cord tires will make 10,000 to 15,000 miles an average, instead of the exception on one set of tires.

CANADA HAS SURPLUS OF OVER HUNDRED MILLION

Financial Statement Made in House—War Cost Million Daily and National Debt is Now Two Billion Dollars.

Ottawa, Ont., April 9. — The budget speeches according to present expectations will not be delivered until the first week in May. This is the latest on record for the budget is usually brought down in February or March.

It can be stated definitely that the Government has not yet decided upon the changes to be made in the tariff. The Ministers have had lots of advice, and undoubtedly most of them have reached fairly final conclusions, but the specific changes to be made this session have not been settled. It is understood that the Easter recess will largely be devoted to the tariff.

Satisfactory Changes

The Western ministers, Hon. T. A. Crerar, Hon. Arthur Meighen and Hon. J. A. Calder had a conference with the Western Unionist members Tuesday. Nothing has been given out but the whole question was thrashed out. There was pretty unanimous sentiment in favor of a reduction on agricultural implements. One thing is certain that there will be no government crisis on the tariff. There is lots of gossip as to tariff changes, but they are only gossip. All that can be stated positively is that there will be no general tariff revision until conditions become more settled and that there will be some changes this session — changes which Sir Thomas White predicts will prove satisfactory to East and West.

Cost Million Daily

In view of the coming budget the financial statement for the fiscal year ending March 31st, which was issued yesterday is exceedingly interesting. This statement shows that the revenue for the year has exceeded all expectations and will pass the three hundred million dollar mark. The exact figures are $305,230,803. The expenditure was $196,073.805, or a surplus of nearly one hundred and ten millions, which will be devoted to the capital war expenditures. The revenue last fiscal year was $232,372,508 and the expenditure $141,989,541. The war cost us last year $347,843,274, or slightly under a million a day. Last year the war cost Canada within a few dollars of three hundred millions.

Increased Revenue

The chief increase in revenue during the year was due to income and business war taxation, the revenue from these sources totalling between sixty and seventy million dollars, as compared with under thirty-five millions last year. Customs revenue for the year showed an increase of three million dollars. The problem of raising our revenue if the tariff is abolished is emphasized by the financial statement. The customs brought in $147,740,215 or nearly fifty per cent of the total Dominion revenue.

Debt Rates Up

The Canadian National dept keeps piling up. On March 31 the total net debt was $1,438,377,293, an increase of some three hundred millions for the year. On March 31, 1918, the total [illegible] debt was $1,101,394,023. The prediction has been made that by the time demobilization is completed the debt will reach two billions and the prediction seems likely of fulfilment.

Future of Unionism

No budget speech for years has been awaited with so much interest as the one this year. Upon it depends the future of unionism. If Sir Thomas White can bridge the chasm between Eastern and Western unionists, then the future of the new party is assured and organization will be completed immediately. If it fails it is difficult to predict what may happen. Westerners may gravitate to the opposition, or what is more likely form a separate political group.

However, the sentiment among the Government followers is overwhelmingly in favor of a new political party and this seems to be the most likely outcome of the present political turmoil.

ADVERTISE IN THE REVIEW.

Poor Papa!

"Mother, dear, I need $100. Will you ask father for it?"

"No. You must ask him yourself. You'll have a husband some day, and now is your time to practise."

A HOT SPOT Chalmers wrings the power from gas

As any one knows there is just so much power in a gallon of gas; and the great trick in a gas engine is to get all the power out and convert it into mileage.

Yet do you know how little power actually is taken out of gas by the average car? And how much power goes out the exhaust?

Ask any motor car engineer.

A Chalmers engine simply wrings power out of gas. Its famous Hot Spot "cracks up" the gas, just as constant chewing of food prepares it for good digestion before swallowing.

To get power out of gas the gas has got to be "cracked up." Then it has got to be placed into the cylinders in a "dry" condition. This the great Ram's-horn does to a work of engineering art.

You can tell how true this is the minute your foot touches the accelerator button of a present day Chalmers and you get the feel of that throbless, frictionless power that means so much to your peace of mind, your tires, your bank balance and your self satisfaction.

GRAY-DORT

Ask—and be convinced

To those who still doubt, we say—talk to a Gray Dort owner and be convinced.

Ask him about the motor——that puts at your command a smooth, quiet flow of real power—instantly. Ask him about the comfort of this generously-large light car. Ask him about the equipment—about economy of tires, gasoline. And the longer he has his Gray Dort, the more enthusiastic he will be.

A fine example of practical and sound, careful construction. Performance and marked economy is the truest index to its rare value.

For pleasure riding, its 50" Springs make it superior to any car of its class. By a single ride you can easily verify this for yourself.

LAND OF PROMISE AT KNOX CHURCH

YOUNG PEOPLE'S GUILD WON LAURELS AS AMATEUR PERFORMANCE.

Knox Church lecture hall was crowded last night when the members of the Young People's Guild presented the play entitled "The Land of Promise."

Those taking part played their various roles most effectively and while all did well it might not be out of place to mention especially the good work of Miss Keturah Hall as Indiana, one of the daughters of the Rev. Franklyn Sunday.

The plot of the play was most amusing. Noticing a contest in which prizes were offered for the best sermon forwarded to a magazine, the daughters of the Rev. Franklyn Sunday, thinking that they were sending one of their father's discourses, got a sermon which had been written by a theological student, Prentiss Whitfield, and sent it along.

Their father had already sent one of his own sermons, and to their consternation the first prize was awarded to the sermon written by the student, though credited to himself. His endeavors to solve the strange problem afforded the audience much amusement. The play will be repeated tonight.

Concert By George St. Choir

Peterborough music lovers were out in full force last evening to hear the concert presented by the choir of George Street Methodist Church, augmented to 65 voices and under the direction of Mr. J. H. Renwick, in George St. Church. Despite the inclemency of the weather the church was thronged to the doors and Mr. Renwick added another triumph to his fine record of achievements in Peterborough.

The concert opened with the singing of the National Anthem by the full chorus, with an enjoyable arrangement of parts.

The program was well-balanced and finely executed, every number being much enjoyed. The audience showed especial appreciation of the several readings admirably given by Mrs. Frank L. Jenne and Miss Winnifred Parker, both of whom responded with encores.

Miss Laura Logan, in her usual finished style, captivated her audience with her rendition on the violin of "Reverie." She was heartily encored.

The leading chorus was an excellent presentation of "Damascus" by Sir Michael Costa, in which contralto solos sung by Miss Ida Lynn, made a most favorable impression on the audience.

The duet by Miss Doris Rathbone and Mr. T. Ward, "O that we two were Maying," has never been heard to better advantage by a Peterborough audience.

Owing to indisposition Mrs. Renwick's soprano solos had to be omitted, much to the regret of all. The solos which Mrs. Renwick had intended singing were: (a) Madrigal—Charminade, and (b) Orange Blossom—David Dick Slater.

A musical triumph was scored by Misses I. Baird, R. McKee, L. MacFarlane and B. Elcome, in two piano quartettes.

Mr. Otto Gliddon's clarinet solo was much appreciated he had to respond to insistent applause, with an encore which also was well received.

A fitting climax to this most delightful evening's entertainment was the chorus, "In the hour of softened splendor."

The program in detail was as follows:

Chorus—Damascus— Sir Michael Costa. Contralto solo—Miss Ida Lynn. Organist—Miss Bessie Elcome.

Piano quartette— War march of the Priests, (Athalie)—Mendelssohn. 1st piano—Miss Laura MacFarlane, Miss Bessie Elcome. 2nd piano—Miss Isobel Baird, Miss Roxie McKee.

INDEPENDENT LABOR PARTY CANNOT SEND DELEGATES TO THE TRADES COUNCIL

President moore of the Dominion Trades Congress so Rules—Action Last Week in Seating Such Representatives Now Held to be Illegal

At the last meeting of the Trades and Labor Council a new departure was made, when five delegates from the local branch of the Independent Labor Party were admitted to membership. The matter was disposed of without debate, as the move came in the nature of a surprise to the delegates from the various unions.

There is in the Trades Council a certain element that is firmly opposed to the introduction of anything like party politics into the organisation, and in this they are upheld by precedent if not by the constitution. Religious discussions are also barred. Since the meeting of the Council last week some of the local unions represented have held their regular meetings and discussed the admission of the new labor party delegates. There was, of course, a difference of opinion, some being willing to permit the innovation, while others opposed it as unconstitutional. In order to get an official ruling on the question, The Review this morning sent the following despatch to Tom Moore, Ottawa, president of the Dominion Trades Congress, with which the Trades Council is affiliated and from which it holds its charter:

President Moore sent back the following reply:

> "Independent Labor Party not entitled to delegates in Trades Council. No delegates but from affiliated trades unions should be seated."

Any member in good standing of a trades union in this city is entitled to attend the sessions of the Trades Council, even if not a delegate, but can neither vote nor take part in the discussions. This is apparently the only status which the Labor party representatives can maintain in the Council.

More Fighting On Hungarian Border

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, April 10.—Violent fighting has taken place between Hungarians and Czechs at Ungvar, near the Moravian-Hungarian border. One hundred and fifty Hungarians were killed. The Czechs also had considerable losses. A proclamation of a Soviet republic in Salzburg, German Austria, has been made. Salzburg is near the Bavarian border.

LIFE EXTENSION INSTITUTE HAS BRANCH IN PETERBORO

Members Are Entitled to the Medical Advice of Leading Physicians in America.

The Life Extension Institute is the descriptive name applied to an organization which flourishes in the United States and which has as its object the promotion of public health and the prolongation of human life amongst its members.

This movement is not confined to the States, but is of an international character, there being a branch of the association in Peterborough, although a great many people are not aware of the fact.

There is a yearly membership fee of $12 in connection with the Life Extension Institute and this entitles the member to an annual examination by a physician, a report of which is forwarded to the headquarters in New York city. Dr. Scott on Hunter street is the medical representative of the organization here.

In addition to the report of the medical examiner, each member is expected at stated intervals to fill out a form giving particulars as to the state of health, occupation, and mode of life especially in regard to observation of the laws of health. This is forwarded independ of the report of the medical examiner and medical attendance is sent in return.

Each member receives free medical advice from the headquarters of the association where expert medical men consider the reports which are forwarded to them. Ex-President Taft is the chairman of the executive board of the Institute.

There are foreign advisory boards in England, Japan, Canada, France, Italy, Russia and Chili.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berlin, April 10. — Government troops are reported to have entered Essen and to have occupied the Krupp plant, which, according to previous reports, had been seized by the Essen strikers. Troops posted artillery and machine guns at the entrances to the plant. The result of intervention by the government forces was that two-thirds of the workmen resumed their labors.

GEN. WILLIAMS FORMALLY OPENS THIRD MOTOR SHOW

Characterizes Peterborough as a City of Homes—Big Attendance and Exhibits Worth While Outstanding Features—Continuous Musical Program and Special Attractions.

WARDEN M'INTOSH
Who has been in public life in North Monaghan as councillor, reeve and tax collector for twenty-four years.

The formal opening of Peterborough's third motor show in the Armories last night exceeded the committee's most sanguine anticipations, both in point of attendance and pronounced appreciation of the successful efforts of all concerned to make this event the banner one since the show's inception.

The huge building in its festive dress of flags and buntin, together with the costly display of varied exhibits, interspersed with tastefully decorated flower, candy and cooking booths, to say nothing of a fascinating gypsy camp, all made for attraction quite irresistible. One continuous musical program was in evidence all evening for when the Conservatory orchestra rested between number, instrumental and vocal selections by the world's famous artists were heard from Edison and Pathe phonographs. Musical renditions of a very acceptable nature were also contributed by Miss Florence Scott, Miss I. Lynn and the Misses Harrington.

The Parade.

The streets were lined with citizens, old and young, to see the motor parade, which left the market square at 7.35. This parade was headed by the fire chief's natty runabout, followed by the big motor fire truck. Then came the Salvation Army band on motor floats, Brigadier-General Williams, Lieut.-Col. Mills and Major (Canon Davidson in a gayly decorated car, his worship the Mayor and city officials, the G.W.V.A. band and the rank and file of enthusiastic motorists.

Formally Opened.

Shortly after eight o'clock Brigadier-General Williams, officer in command of this military district, accompanied by the Mayor, Major McManus (of Kingston) and Lieut.-Col. Mills entered the building, and all gentlemen uncovered while the National Anthem was played.

Mayor Duncan in a few well-chosen sentences introduced General Williams and welcomed him to the city.

General Williams in a fitting address formally opened the big show. He was, he said, honored in being offered this privilege, especially so when the occasion was for so worthy an object as assisting financially the Peterborough Health Association. During his ride in the parade, he continued, he could not but appreciate what a magnificent city Peterborough really is. He would call it a city of houses—compactly built and beautifully maintained. He congratulated Peterborough on the noble part its citizens had played in the war, both at home and abroad, and referred eulogistically to the fact that Peterborough had sent 4000 troops to the front, where many casualties had been sustained, especially in the second battle of Ypres where out of 217 Peterborough men but 17 answered the first roll call, following that fight. But those who fell, he said, including Major Bennett, although dead, still live in the memory, not only of their home town, but of the whole civilized world.

The speaker here touched in glowing terms on the glorious work accomplished by the Canadian Red Cross from which no man could have benefited more than himself and Captain Harry Rogers. "Both of us," he asserted, "prisoners and wounded in Germany, would have starved had it not been for the Red Cross."

Talking of his treatment while a prison, he said: "I never want to lay my eyes on a German again; they are brutes, and brutes they will remain. All you read in the papers of their brutality and atrocity is absolutely true."

In conclusion the distinguished visitor paid warm tribute to the work of the doctors and nursing sisters throughout the war, and also to Mrs. Bell, a Peterborough lady, for her capable matronship of the military hospital at Kingston. Drawing attention to the array of motors on either side of him, he declared that without that splendid motor transport service with which the Allies had been blessed the war could not have been won

American Troops Threaten Mutiny

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Archangel, April 10.—A company of American troops recently showed some resistant in returning to the fighting front south of Archangel, declaring that the war with Germany was over and that the United States was not at war with the Bolsheviki. The regimental commander in a speech, said that they were fighting a desperate defensive battle and appealed to them to stick it out. The company then left for the front.

RUSSIANS AND BAVARIA AGREE

TWO SOVIET GOVERNMENTS SET UP DIPLOMATIC RELATIONS.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berlin, April 10.—Diplomatic relations have been established between the Russian and Bavarian Soviet governments, according to a despatch. As late as April 8 the Russian Soviet government had not got into touch with the Bavarian Soviet authorities, according to wireless messages of that date from Nikolai Lenine, Russian Bolshevik premier, who sent a message to Bela Kun, the Hungarian revolutionary leader, asking him to send details of the revolution in Bavaria. "We have only the barest announcement," Lenine's message said.

Found Liquor At Express Office

AND INSPECTOR STEWART TOOK POSSESSION OF THE ENTIRE SHIPMENT.

This morning Inspector Joseph Stewart in police court applied for authority to forward to the Governments' warehouse in Toronto a consignment of liquor which he seized on Saturday last.

In his testimony he stated that he had seized the whiskey while at the office of the Dominion Express Co. It was in a trunk containing five wooden cases, four of which contained bottles of Gooderham & Worts' whiskey.

On the trunk were the initials "F. D. P.," and the address was "Mr. Davenport." Inspector Stewart stated that he had never heard of any one of that name in Peterborough, and investigation had failed to clear up the matter. He presumed that it was a fictitious address, but requested Sergeant Reid to call the name in court, which he did, and received no reply.

Agent Seels of the Dominion Express Co. was examined and his testimony corroborated that of Inspector Stewart.

His Worship gave the inspector the required authority to dispose of the liquor he had seized.

NEW LABOR PAPER FOR PETERBORO

All that is required to launch this new venture is the promise of organized Labor in the city to get behind it with their support.

LICENSE PROBE IS UNDER WAY

FAMOUS HOMER CASE IS BEING INVESTIGATED BY THE COMMISSIONERS.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, April 10.—Sir Wm. Meredith, sitting as commission today, continued his investigation into the Hartley-Dewart charges against the license department, particularly with relation to the famous Homer consignment, about the time of the by-election in the adjacent city of St. Catharines. Harley Clyde, formerly hotel keeper, said he was the man who selected Homer as the place for the consignment of liquor. License Inspector King, of St. Catharines, told how he lid for the party bringing the liquor into Homer, but failed to catch them.

"HOME RULE FOR QUEBEC" IS BATTLE CRY OF WETS IN REFERENDUM TODAY

Province is Voting on Temperance Issue—Beer and Wine Licenses Running Close Race With Prohibition—Dry Districts Are Not Affected.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Montreal, April 10.—The Province of Quebec is today voting on a referendum as to whether wine and beer licenses shall be issued or whether the Province shall go "dry." Both liquor interests and temperance organizations have conducted vigorous campaigns and vote is expected to be heavy. All Protestant ministers have denounced the granting of wine and beer licenses, but Roman Catholic priests in some cases have not directed their charges. Last night the "wets" organized a torchlight procession in this city. It marched through the city bearing such announcements as "Let's All Go Home," "Let Toronto Run Show," "Home Rule in Old Quebec," Vive La France," Long Live Its Wine," Look at Bone Dry Russia." The Great War Veterans' Association for the Montreal district last night passed a resolution against prohibition.

Pastor Arrested.

Rev. S. F. Newton, pastor of the East End Methodist church, was arrested yesterday for distributing temperance literature on the public streets of Montreal without a permit.

Mr. Newton was arrested outside the plant of the Consolidated Rubber Co. He said he had the permission of the company to operate there. He contended the literature was given away outside Roman Catholic churches every Sunday, but no one was arrested.

"Wet" Districts Affected.

The ballots provided for the voter to answer "yes" or "no" to the following questions: "Is it your opinion that the sale of light beer, cider and wines as defined by law, should be allowed?"

If the affirmative should win the sale would be allowed of beer and other malt liquors, containing no more than 2.50 per cent. alcohol, weight measure and cider and wine containing not more than 6.94 per cent. of alcohol, weight measure. Should the negative win, only two and a half per cent. beer will be allowed, and this will also be under license.

Bars Must Disappear.

Under the present license law which remains in force no matter which way the referendum goes, the bars must all disappear on May 1. If the beer and wine advocates win, there will be drinking saloons but they will have to serve drinks from tables, and no display of liquor either inside or in the windows of any licensed place will be permitted.

Hon. W. G. Mitchell, Provincial Treasurer, who sponsored the new license law before the Legislature states that the referendum will not affect municipalities which at present are under local option, "dry" regulations. Wherever prohibition now exists it cannot be repealed until such steps are taken as are now necessary under either Federal or Provincial law. The referendum only affects the "wet" districts.

Quebec, April 11.—Voting on wine and beer licenses early today seemed to be largely in favor of the measure. Voting in the rural districts was light owing to the bad roads and sugaring season.

There was a meeting of the officers of the 57th Regiment after the Motor Show last night, at which plans for reorganization were discussed. The results were most encouraging.

Wounded Soldiers Incited to Demonstrate Against Soviet Congress.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berlin, April 10.—The discordant elements looking to disturb law and order are making a strenuous effort, according to an official announcement, to bring about a demonstration by the wounded soldiers in connection with the Soviet Congress now in session here. The idea behind the plan, it is said, is to provoke loyal troops to pursue cruel tactics with the result that any conflict that might arise, might be used as a pretext to call a strike and imitate the establishment of the Soviet Government at Munich. Parades are forbidden under the martial law which still applies to Berlin. The Government adds it was impossible for any parades to be held on Wilhelmstrasse where it was reported the demonstration was planned, so that the paraders might march before the chancellory and the foreign office.

BRITAIN WILL NOT FALTER NOW

LLOYD GEORGE SAYS FULL INDEMNITY WILL BE INSISTED UPON.

London, April 10.—Premier Lloyd George has addressed a message to the members of Parliament, saying: "My colleagues and I mean to stand faithfully by all the pledges which we gave our constituencies. We are prepared at any moment to submit to the judgment of Parliament, and, if necessary, of the country, our efforts loyally to redeem our promises."

The Premier's message was in reply to a telegram sent to Mr. Lloyd George yesterday, signed by 200 members of the House of Commons, holding the Premier to his election pledges to exact the utmost indemnity from Germany. The movement was initiated by a group of Conservative members under the belief that it would strengthen the Premier's hand at the Conference.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

THURSDAY, APRIL 10, 1919

CITY VERSES COUNTRY.

HONEST NOW, is there any wonder that there is a feeling of rivalry, not to say animosity, between the residines of the city and those of the rural sections in this as well as in evry other district of the Province? And for this condition, which side is responsible to the greater degree?

The farmer comes in to the local market with the produce of his farm, which he sells at the regular price, a price that is by no means regulated by himself. Because, in common with that of everything else, the price is high, the farmer is branded as a profiteer. His wife shares the same fate when she sells butter at the ruling price of seventy cents, and threats are made to boycott the farmers so as to force down the rates.

Idle and foolish talk. The farmer could stand such a boycott much better than the residents of the city who need his commodities.

The Government, too, it seems, is possessed of this same spirit of narrowness, as it is announced that an official investigation is to be made into the price of butter. Not into the price of clothing or other manufactured articles, let it be well noted, but simply into that of something the farmer has to sell. And yet there are innocent people who marvel that the farmer is disposed to hew out his own economic pathway and because he is given to regard his city contemporaries in other than a spirit of fraternity.

Allan B. Mann is one of the representative farmers of this district, a man who has elevated his calling to the dignity of a profession. No one who knows Mr. Mann—and about everybody does—would for a moment suspect him of a motive to evade his duty as a citizen or to dodge any financial obligation. Mr. Mann owns an auto, and no man in city or country is more entitled to maintain such an innovation. During the winter his car was laid up, and in the meantime the yearly license expired. When the roads became fit for autoing Mr. Mann took out his car and ran into the city to secure a license for 1919. He was late and the license office was closed. Next day he autoed in again and secured the necessary tag, but in the meantime the police had lodged a complaint against him for running his car without an up-to-date license. In police court his explanation was ignored and he was fined $5 and costs.

If there ever was a case in which leniency was justified, this looks like it. But Mr. Mann was a farmer and had to be taught the traffic bylaws and other enactments. It cost him something like $10 to learn that about the only safe way to come to town in order to secure an auto license is on foot, on a bicycle or in a wagon.

DR. CODY'S PROGRAM.

WHEN DR. CODY was chosen by the Hearst Government as Minister of Education, much was expected of his administration, and the announcement of his program was awaited with more than ordinary interest. That announcement has been made and the hopes of the public have been justified. Dr. Cody shows himself a man who has a grasp of his subject and who is practical in every detail. There is nothing of the dreamer or the faddist in his propaganda. He does not start out to revolutionize the educational system of the Province. Rather, he proposes to retain the main features of a plan which has brought creditable publicity to Ontario as an educational centre, while he also proposes to lop away all useless frills and to remedy those parts which experience has proved defective. One feature alone places the platform of Dr. Cody high above anything of the kind that has been evolved by his predecessors, and that is the part which provides for a general medical inspection of the school children of Ontario. A well-trained mind is of little avail in an unsound or defective body. The late war has shown an alarming number of physical defectives among the young men of the Province. Some of these defects were detected in time to be remedied, others had progressed into the stage of hopelessness. Every child in Ontario is entitled to physical as well as mental care, and if the State provides for the one it should also do as much in the other case. Bodily health is the first essential. Without that all natural endowments and developed talents are likely to prove so many dismal failures.

One great objection to the educational system in the past has been the centralization of authority which deprived the teachers and inspectors of initiative in their work. Under a financial penalty all the regulations have had to be complied with. The system was managed from a central office in Toronto; the inspectors have been simply so many executive officers to see that these regulations were rigidly enforced, and the teachers have really been under orders from the inspectors. The principal of a public school in Ontario is rather more the servant of the inspector than he is of the School Board or the parents of the children. If there has been autocracy in this regard, that autocracy has been nurtured by the system. Inspector and teacher alike were required to carry out instructions from their respective superiors in order to retain their positions.

Like every other practical educationist, Dr. Cody recognizes the necessity of a measure of regulations, but there is promised a relaxation of those already in existence. Inspectors and teachers are to work together under different conditions, and the new relations cannot fail to improve the school work. Something like originality of method is to be permitted.

Thoroughly educated himself, Dr. Cody has the advantage of a varied scholastic experience. He began as a pupil in the rural schools and also served as a country teacher. He has been through High school and university and is therefore familiar with every department of the work that lies before him. He recognizes the disadvantages under which the rural schools labor, and proposes to give these institutions a better chance than they have ever enjoyed. Provision is to be made for higher salaries for teachers, so that this department of the service is sure to be improved. If rural sections are desirous of consolidating, the way is to be opened for them to do so. Special attention is to be given to the teaching of compositon, practical grammar, reading, writing, spelling and history. He proposes to "strike a blow at the undue burden of arithmetic." The latter announcement probably means that Dr. Cody has [illegible] to tolerate, especially in the rural schools, which see the end of the academic career of so many pupils, the teaching of arithmetic that will be valuable in practical life. This much abused science is no longer to be a series of traps like the catch-penny problems in a certain class of weekly papers.

Dr. Cody does not believe in exclusive agricultural education in rural schools, and wisely so. The country boy has as much right to choose his profession as has the pupil in a city school. If the plan that some educationists advocate had been in vogue when Dr. Cody was a boy, a successful career would have been denied him. Ontario would likely have in his person secured an indifferent farmer and lost the services of a brilliant preacher and a minister of education from whom the people expect marvels of achievement in developing the school system of the Province.

TEACHING PATRIOTISM.

THE SCHOOLS OF ONTARIO under Dr. Cody's regime are, it seems, to pay special attention to the teaching of the fundamentals in composition, grammar, reading, spelling, writing and history. No man or woman can lay any claim to education if unable to write an ordinary letter, correct in grammar and orthography and legible as to writing. Let them be made arts instead of sciences, let them be related to the actual needs of those who acquire them. The fewer finely-spun grammatical theories the better for the purity and the clarity of the English language, which, after all, is supposed to be a vehicle for the expression of thought rather than a conglommeration of pollysylables to submerge anything in the shape of an idea.

Gratifying, too, is the assurance that more stress is to be laid upon the teaching of history. Here is a subject, the value of a knowledge of which it is impossible to exaggerate. The best Canadian patriots are the people who are familiar with the records of their country and the Empire. The early call for volunteers was answered by the graduates of schools and colleges, young men who understood what the war was about and who realized the danger that threatened humanity. What, for example, has been as a rule the academic acquirements of the young men who are now undergoing prison terms or who have paid fines for evading the call to military service?

Dr. Cody believes that good manners and patriotism, as well as the fundamentals alluded to, should be taught in the schools. Naturally that is the place for such work if the schools are to turn out the higher type of citizens and to supply the neglect of such matters that is common in so many homes.

Patriotism must be imparted. It is impossible to make a man loyal by force of arms. Making the playing of the National Anthem compulsory in theatres is well intentioned on the part of our legislators, but at the most it is merely an outward show. The deplorable fact remains that so many refuse to accord this part of the musical program anything like a measure of attention, but prepare to leave the theatre even while the orchestra is rendering the selection.

Someone has suggested that all such persons should be arrested for disorderly conduct. That would certainly multiply the duties of the police. It is, however, hardly the duty of the police, or the lawmakers, either, to instruct the populace in good manners, and the disrespect of which mention has been made is due in nine cases out of ten to a lack of ethical training.

Dr. Cody's system is to be preferred. The human animal, to be properly broken, must be caught fairly young, like the broncho or the denizen of the jungle. Begin with the children if we would develop a race of Chesterfields and patriots.

BRITAIN'S WATCH ON THE RHINE

"Dear fatherland, thou need'st not fear. The Rhineland watch stands firmly here." The Rhineland watch today is the most peaceful that ever bivouacked by the historic waters.

Hence the Fatherland has nothing to fear. No truer friends — strange as that word may sound — ever posted sentries, stacked arms, or sounded the reveille along its echoing banks.

The militant German now witnesses the astounding spectacles of an army, many units of which never lost an inch of ground and never failed to gain an objective, made up of men who have never known barrack life, and amateurs as compared with the Germans in military training, occupying their main highway as conquerors.

The words will have a new meaning now, since the lusting god of might has been laid in the dust:

"The Rhineland watch stands firmly there."

No better lesson of the superior imperialism of the British people could possibly be staged for the enlightenment of the enemy than the northern watch on the Rhine.

A selfgoverning people, with no knowledge of war, elect to enter the lists of war, choosing affiction and bloodshed rather than to be untrue to the national conscience.

Germans who knew nothing of ethics and believed holy in the power of might, today see an army of men who treat women with courtesy and gentleness who would scorn to take anything not their own.

Historic.

In relation to historical interest the River Rhine has only one serious rival—the Tiber—rising in the Alps, its general course is north by northwest to the sea.

The total length is about 850 miles. It leaves Swiss territory at Basle, having fallen nearly 7,000 feet. From Basle to Mainz, or Mayence, it is shadowed on the east and west by the rangers of the Black Forest and the Vosges. It is very wide at Mayence, but turns north and enters a narrow valley at Bingen, where stands the historic Mouse Tower.

The Mouse Tower has its name from a German verb meaning to watch, and the name simply means Watch Tower.

But it gave the Rhineland imagination, a chance, and it made the gruesome legend of Bishop Hatto.

This heartless Churchman in a time of famine invited his people to his barns, promising them grain. Then he shut them in and burned them up, to rid the country of such rats, as he said.

His doom was to be eaten by rats, though he hid in the tower.

"And in at the windows, and in at the door,
And through the walls by thousands they pour,
They have whetted their teeth
against the stones,
And now pick the Bishop's bones;
They gnawed the flesh from every limb,
For they were sent to do judgment on him."

This according to Southey's poem "The Tradition of Bishop Hatto." It is proper to add that the Bishop was both wise and good, the friend and counsellor of the Emperor Otho the Great; moreover, he was two centuries dead before the Mouse Tower was built. It was restored in 1856 and was used as a signal station.

The most poetic part of the whole stream is just here—castles, crags and vineyards all conspiring to be witch the traveller. The current at this point is at least six miles per hour.

Rubenstein lies just across the river, from which place the great National Monument, which towers high above the river on the wooded height of the Niederwald, can be conveniently reached by railway. The monument commemorates the unificvation of the German Empire in 1870-71.

A Rebuke.

This colossal statue of Germania, adorned with historical and alleggorical reliefs, will surely silently rebuke every war-seeking German who looks upon it for all time to come.

Taking a sharp turn before reaching Coblentz, the stream runs for a little distance in an exactly opposite direction to its general course.

Coblenz is the capital of Rhenish Prussia, although Cologne, higher up the river, has the greater population. At the former place very formidable fortresses exist, and the Moselle River, coming in from the West, joins the Rhine on its journey to the sea.

Entering Holland the river grows sluggish, and grows still sleepier as it nears the ocean, owing to the unfriendly levels. It can be navigated from Basle to its mouth, a distance of 550 miles, 450 of which lie in Germany.

France is now asking the Peace Conference to advance her borders to include the West bank of the Rhine. She also wants the Saare Valley—so rich in minerals — restored to her. The Saare, by the way, was in her possession one hundred years ago.

Trains run on either side of the Rhine, and pleasure steamers do an immense business in the summer.

But the greatest asset of all which the river provides for Germany is that of mercantile highway. Running the entire length of the kingdom, it becomes at once the main artery of commencer, especially for the western frontier.

Hence the wisdom of our occupation until a proper settlement can be reached regarding the terms of a permanent peace.

TO-DAY'S STORY

It was evening. "I feel fine now mother," said the "Little Fellow," as the Canucks always called him when he heard the band of the Canadians playing "The Marseillaise." Then he died.

That's the end of the story, which comes from Alfred E. Ley, of the Canadian tramway engineer corps.

The scene of this one pitiful little unnecessary tragedy, offered as a random sample of Hun brutality, was in territory recaptured from the boche by the Canadians and Yanks last October.

This area had been held in durance four long years, and the people, of which the "Little Fellow" and his family were part, were virtually slaves. Ley knew the family well and had often been invited by them to have a cup of coffee, supplied to them by American relief organizations.

"The Boche assured the civilians they were driving the British out of France," writes the Canadian engineer. "A day or two later, however, back they came on the double, announcing that the British and Canadians were coming instead of going."

"The 'Little Fellow' was out, eager to see the deliverers, when a piece of shrapnel caught him below the eye and lodged in the angle of the jaw. His mother took him to see the Boche doctor, who said he was 'all right, although the boy couldn't get his mouth open. The doctor refused to allow her to call in the civilian doctor, who was still in town.

"For ten days the lad suffered, being able to swallow only a little coffee; they had no milk or meat to make into suitable broth. When the Boches were driven out and madame was able to call in a French doctor it was too late; the little jaws were paralysed and the case was hopeless.

"As the band passed and the boy told his mother he felt fine now, he added: 'Don't forget to tell the Canadian doctor to come and take this pain out of my head.'

"At the end he said: 'Mother, I want the Canadians to carry me when I am buried.' Then he faintly sang a verse of the national anthem, and another victim of 'kultur' was added to the long list.

"Eight of our boys carried the 'Little Fellow' to his last home, as he had wished."

This wasn't the only story Engineer Ley had to tell. But it is perhaps the most striking. Speaking of the people in the reconquered territory, he said:

"As we listened to their simple stories there was not a man among us not glad at heart he was over here and not determined to fight to the last before giving back these simple, good-hearted French of the poorer class into the hands of the beasts. They told us how, when the Boches came, the latter took every woman between sixteen and forty the first few days and put them on railroad work.

"The children under sixteen, from tots on up, had to work in the vegetable gardens. If one took a carrot home or nibbled it the mother had to pay a fine of twenty francs.

"When the Boches had been in possession a while dead cats and dogs began to have a real value. From five to ten marks was the market price, for they made 'hot dogs' out of cold ones."

LITTLE BENNY'S NOTEBOOK

(By Lee Pape.)

Me and my cuzzin Artie was up in my setting room smoaking some old mattriss stuffing in our clay bubble pipes, taisting kind of funny but smelling mutch werse and all of a suddin pop came in without hardly giving me and Artie time to quick stick our pipes in our pockits pop smelling out loud with his nose and saying, Pew, I think the inferior quality of gas thats being sippled to us is a skandil and shame, you can positively smell it all over the house weather its being used or not. And he tried all the gas things to see if eny was turned on, and then he went erround going, Pew, pew, and opening all the windows, saying, Do you meen to say you boys dont smell that?

Yes, sir, I smell it, pop, I sed, and Artie sed, So do I, Unkle Will. Wich we both did, us being the neerest to it of enybody, and I sed, Well, gosh, pop, I dont think it smells so fearse. I've smelled fearser smells than wat that is.

That aint enything alongside of some Ive smelled, sed Artie.

Well then I pity both of you frum the bottom of my hart, sed pop. Meening we must of smelled some awfill smells. And jest then ma came in, saying, Willyum, for mersey sakes wat have you bin smoaking?

And he took the pipes and threw them out in the alley, and we could heer them breaking all up, being a mutch werse of a punishmint than the smell.

LESSONS IN RIGHT LIVING

By Dr. W. A. BRADY

An ear that runs more than a few weeks is always a menace to health and life until the cause of the discharge is determined and properly treated.

An intense pain, more severe than the ordinary earache, in the ear accompanied with excessive tenderness of the ear canal and sometimes with swelling of the face in front or of the skin behind the ear, usually is produced by a boil in the outer ear canal, painful enough to the victim but comparatively harmless.

An earache is always caused by inflammation in the middle ear, the business part of the ear inside the ear drum where the famous bones of our schoolday physiology troubles are housed—the hammer, anvil and stirrup. This middle ear cavity is about the size of a pea. It communicates through the ventilating shaft, called the Eustachian tube, with the pharynx, which is a doctor's way of naming the upper part of the throat and the rear room of the nasal chamber on either side. Let the Eustachian tube swell a bit, as in the presence of an alleged "cold in the head" or from adenoids occluding the pharynx end of the tube, and, if not deafness, there is likely to be at least earache experienced by the patient. When germs from the nose or throat travel up the Eustachian tube to the ear and lodge in the middle ear, then there is inflammation of the middle ear (otitis media as it is popularly called). A simple inflammation accompanies acute earache.

The earache must therefore be treated as an inflammation and an infection. As in other acute respiratory infections, such as bronchitis and so called "cold" in the head, there is no home or doctor's remedy better for earache (otitis media) than a hot mustard footbath administered to the patient in bed—a feat that demands some knowledge of the art of nursing.

If the ear runs copiously, then you may reasonably suspect the patient, child or adult, has mastodiditis. That means that some little air spaces in the mastoid prominence of bone immediately back of the ear have become infected from the ear. Nine out of ten cases of mastoditis proceed rapidly to recovery if not disturbed by operation or unwise treatment; the tenth case proves recalcitrant, the fever or other signs of illness persist, and operation becomes imperative to save the patient from brain abscess, meningitis or other grave result.

Never put any oil in an ear.

Never keep cotton in an ear — it needs oxygen to help destroy infection, and if there is a discharge the discharge should not be obstructed in any way.

Never drop laudanum in an ear—it is a crude and dangerous way to administer a narcotic.

Glycerin, warm, instead of oil, in any case.

A thin wick of gauze instead of cotton in any case.

Prolonged irrigation with water as warm as endurable, instead of laudanum and other dopes.

Gargle For Singers.

"A friend who sings told me you recommended a gargle which has overcome a huskiness that had troubled her a long time. She said the gargle contained kino, if I have the name right. Can you recall such a formula? And, if so, will you please reprint it? "C. D. V."

Potassium chlorate, two drams; boiling water, four ounces; powdered alum, one dram; stronger rosewater, two and one-half ounces; glycerin, sirup, of each, one-half ounce; fluid extract of kino (U. S. P.), two drams.

(The mixture should be clear ruby-red, pleasant in odor and taste). Use a tablespoonful with as much water to gargle once or twice within the half hour before singing or speaking.

CONDITIONS ON ONTARIO FARMS

The following is an advance report of the April Crop Bulletin about to be issued by the Ontario Department of Agriculture:

Fall wheat entered the winter looking vigorous and full of promise. The season proved to be an unusually bare one yet, with the exception of that grown on low land or poorly drained soils the crop withstood the extra exposure surprisingly well—in fact, never better. When correspondents reported about the beginning of April a spell of cold weather with strong drying winds was prevailing, and some anxiety was expressed as to the effect on the young crop. Later reports are, however, rather reassuring.

Winter rye is not now largely raised, but so far it has come through nicely.

Clover has not done so well as the other wintering crops, as the seeding of the previous season was not very successful. There were some complaints of heaving, and some anxitey was expressed as to the effects of the very trying weather prevailing as the returns were sent in.

Orchards are apparently in good condition, any injury noticeable having resulted from the severe weather of the winter of 1917-18. Peach and other fruit buds are reported to be unusually forward, and so far have been uninjured by frost.

Live stock have wintered well, the weather having been unusually mild, and all fodders except hay being plentiful. Farmers' Clubs are declared to have been a factor in the finishing and margeting of stock.

There has been a fair demand for heavy horses, which have changed hands at from $150 to $200, several shipments from Western Ontario being reported. Light horses, however have been hard to dispose of. Not so many colts as formerly are being raised.

Beef cattle as a rule have been marketed rather light in weight, but otherwise in good condition, for all classes of live stock have practically a clean bill of health. More straw and less hay has been fed cattle than during recent winters, and mill feeds have been so high in price that they have been rationed more sparingly than usual. Complaints have been made of the poor feeding value of this season's ensilage, much of it being rather sappy and carrying fewer cobs than usual. There was plenty of home-grown grain on hand, but it was carefully fed owing to its high market value.

The swine market has ebbed and flowed during the winter. The slump in prices a few months ago nearly created a panic, but matters steadied soon, and the return of high prices for bacon animals has caused a boom in the sale of young pigs and brood cows, which are once more in keen demand. Spring litters are doing well, as sows have wintered nicely, owing to the favorable winter.

A number of counties both East and West report an increase in the number of sheep, and the newer flocks as a class are of better quality than those formerly kept. Ewes wintered comfortably, and lambs are coming along well.

Fodders, excepting hay, are in sufficient supply to meet all ordinary needs until grass comes, a good quantity of grain being on hand.

The prosperts are fair for increased farm production. Good pogress was made with fall plowing, except in a few Eastern counties where rainy weather hindered the work. Indications favor an early spring working of land. An increase in the acreage of spring wheat and some of the other cereals is predicted by several correspondents, while as many more look for about the same area in crop as last year. Much depends, however on how the labor supply turns out. Kent correspondents report the likelihood of more tobacco and sugar beets and less beans being grown this year. Some of the two first-named crops will be cultivated on shares.

The high cost of labor still confronts the farmers of the Province. Ordinary farm workers expect from $30 to $40 a month, while more skilled men are asking from $40 to $50 a month, and even higher. One correspondent says that as a result "Farmers are going it alone." Another says: "Were it not for the school boys we would not be able to stick to it." While good farm hands are comparatively scarce one return states that "A farmer willing to pay the price can get the help." It is too early yet to judge to what extent the home coming of the troops will relieve the farm situstion; but so far returned men have not applied for work on farms in any large numbers.

MISS LAW AND HER CUSTOMER

Editor Review:—The report of the recent case of the dressmaker and her Customer in Tuesday's issue is identical word for word with that of the other town paper, showing that it was supplied to you from an interested source. Your report is wrong. The Judge did say it was a good coat for the money but he did not and could not say it was made according to order because the whole evidence was the other way and the statement as to costs is wrong too.

Unfortunately there is no appeal from a perverse judgement in the Divisional Court and so the Plaintiff has to put up with a denial of justice. The judgment amounts to this, that, there is no remedy for anyone entrusting valuable goods to a person to make up if she spoils them and when persons put up a shingle they need not live up to it.

The coat is useless to the customer however good it may be and anyone that wants to see it may do so.

THE CUSTOMER

COPYRIGHT AND MANUFACTURING

Editor Review:— Copyright is merely the formal enforcement of the common law right of an author to own and control his work. It has no relation to printing, publishing or any other trade activity. For this reason I regard with misgiving and concern the announcement that certain business men are asking for an amendment to the Copyright Bill brought down last week in the Senate.

A "manufacturing clause," as suggested, would provide that no copyright could be granted unless the multiplication of the original copy of the work were done in Canada by Canadians. The Berne Convention purposely did not take into consideration such a proposal. The British Act has no manufacturing clause. The protection is for authors of all nationalities. The Act recognises the right of creation without reference to the national origin of the creator. That is the ideal legislation.

In the United States Act there is a manufacturing clause covering the production of books alone. Copyright in music, sketches, and all other special productions is granted without reference to the place of multiplication. There is also a clause in the American Act declaring that the privileges granted by the United States to citizens of that other nation. Under a Canadian Copyright Law which compelled the printing say, of a song in Canada, before rights could be granted, the Canadian author would be compelled by Washington to print also in the United States before getting American protection. This the popular song writer would be in a worse position than ever.

Publishers and printers who seek the "manufacturing clause" cannot reasonably ask for greater privileges than the same class of business men get in the United States. It is my opinion that they should not be considered at all in the case, since the law is not a trade measure. Protection for business is provided by the tariff. It should not be granted in a roundabout way in legislation which is utterly foreign to the subject.

But if such persons insist upon a "manufacturing clause" of some sort, it should go beyond the printing of books—even that is objectionable. The bill might better contain a clause providing for reciprocal privileges, that is to say, Canada should treat American authors exactly as the republic treats Canadian authors. Thus our own writers could get a fair deal. They have suffered too long under chaotic laws which permitted in some instances unrestricted piracy. It is time that they had a chance, without interference, without being forced to modify their plain, natural rights for the alleged benefit of some section of the business community.

CONCRETE VERSUS STEEL

Editor Review: The Review of yesterday contained an editorial in favor of a concrete bridge in order to make work for the working man. The first duty for the aldermen to consider is that they were elected by the citizens to act as trustees to secure the proper handling of the city's money. I don't claim to know anything about the building of bridges, and if it is better to have a concrete let us have it, but if it is going to be an extra burden on the property-holder in order to make work, I don't consider that good business. If the city is going to help the working man why not pave some more streets instead of spending the money on a concrete bridge if one equally good could be built for $100,000 less?

I can't afford to buy the beets
And beans my table needs;
But thank the Lord, I can afford
The price they ask for seeds.
If in my garden I can raise
The pictured foodstuff which
The pages show I ought to grow,
Next summer I'll be rich.

A Remarkable Invention Is The Pathephone

An exhibit at the big Motor Show which arrests the attention of both ear and eye is that of the Pathe Pathephones entered by Mr. E. V Warne, 325 George street. He is showing this year seven instruments, including a Louis XVI. Electric Machine, a Jacobine Cabinet in Walnut, chine, a Jacobean Cabinet in Walnut, a William and Mary Mahogany Model, one Imported New York Pathe, a Console Table in Walnut, and one in Walnut Adair design. Each of these Pathephone cabinets is beautifully constructed and would harmonise with the most artistic home surroundings.

The Pathephone is the invention of Pathe Brothers, whose inventive genius has created a talking machine of perfect sound reproduction. Not only does it give the greatest number of musical selections from all world musical centres, but will play disc records of other makes. An outstanding feature of the machine is that in playing Pathe discs there are no needles to change and no metal points to dig into and ruin the surface of the records. The marvelous fidelity of the Pathe is universally admitted by thousands of delighted Canadian owners. Among the many reasons for its popularity is its sweet tone, natural sound reproduction, an all-wood sound chamber which eliminates any suggestion of mechanism when playing, its stupendous record repertory, double-faced discs and perfect Tone-control device.

Since assuming the sales management of the Pathe for Peterborough district Mr. E. V. Warne has met with phenomenal success. His sales recorded have exceeded his most sanguine anticipations, until the Pathe department of his business at 325 George street, has grown to gratifying proportions. Hear the Pathe at the Motor Show and consult Mr. Warne as to terms and conditions of sale which make buying easy.

Baby Conference Feature of Show

The Baby Conference was well attended yesterday, for the opening day and the mothers as well as those in attendance, seemed to thoroughly enjoy the two hours spent together.

Some of the babies were not so sure that they enjoyed the attentions of a strange doctor and a white-capped nurse and expressed themselves accordingly.

The room allotted to this clinic is an excellent one, roomy light and warm, and when everything was aranged it looked quite attractive.

At one end an inviting-looking tea-table had been arranged by Mrs. A. W. Turner and afternoon tea was dispensed by Mrs. Gardiner and served by the two members of St. John's Ambulance Corps, in attendance, Mrs. Jamieson and Miss Hay.

WAR IS NOT YET ENDED.

Vienna Sends Request to Great Britain for Help.

London, April 10.—Defending the Military Service Bill in the House of Lords, Earl Curzon of Kedleston, President of the Council and Government leader in the House of Lords, declared that Vienna, "being in a serious position and apprehensive lest it should share the fate of Budapest, had turned to Great Britain and said: 'If you will send 10,000 British troops we can guarantee the situation.'"

Earl Curzon was not sure that war conditons would not revive. He said:

"I see clouds on the horizon which may burst at any moment in a more sinister form than anything yet seen. If the critics of this bill can show the Government how to rule Ireland without maintaining 40,000 troops there they will confer a great favor on the Government."

THEY ACTED in TIME

During 1917, twenty men, all hale and hearty insured their lives in the Sun Life of Canada. All paid the first premium, none lived to pay the second.

They paid a total of $5078.26 and their beneficiaries received $74,212.60.

The records for 1918, owing to the ravages of the "Flu." will show the above record repeated many times, and all such acted in time.

What are YOU going to do about it? Act in time or be forever TOO LATE.

The Sun Life of Canada paid these claims willingly and promptly and will do the same for your loved ones IF YOU ACT IN TIME.

Great Interest In McLaughlin Exhibit at Show

SEE THE NEWEST MODEL CAR WITH CALIFORNIA PERMANET TOP.

A very complete and varied exhibit of McLaughlin cars is that of A. Brown & Co., at the Motor Show this year. A hearse and seven different models are displayed and great interest was shown by the large crowd of spectators last evening.

One has only to note the number of McLaughlin cars on the streets of Peterborough to get an idea of the splendid success this firm has had in the past, and judging from the great interest displayed at their exhibit the McLaughlin has lost none of its popularity.

The exhibit comprises a McLaughlin Hearse, a Seven Passenger 49. Five Passenger Extra Special, a 45 Mistomarue Touring Car with California stationary top, a 44 Special Roadster, a 62 Coupe (five passenger), H-63 Special and H-63 Standard.

Particular interest centred around the Mistomarne car with the California top. This is the very latest idea in automobile tops and illustrates that the trend is to do away with the old folding top

The McLaughlin Hearse displayed has been procured for D. Belleghem, undertaker, and this firm has been using a McLaughlin Ambulance for the last couple of wears, this will make two up-to-date vehicles equipped with McLaughlin motors.

A. Brown and Co. are agents for the Republic Truck Co., in Peterboro and it was expected that two of these trucks would have been here for the show, but owing to freight conditions they may not arrive for a day or two. If it so happens that their arrival is too late for the motor show, they will be displayed at the company's show rooms on Water Street and will be well worth looking at.

The Republic Truck Co. has purchased a large tract of land at London, Ont., and will build a Canadian factory at once according to a letter received by Mr. Brown this morning. This will greatly facilitate deliveries among Canadian purchasers.

Prolong the Life Of Your Tires And Car Motor

SEE DIXON'S GRAPHITE AUTOMOBILE LUBRICANT EXHIBIT AT MOTOR SHOW.

An exhibit at the Motor Show which is well worth spending a little time at is that of the Kingan Hardware Co., corner of George and Simcoe streets. It includes quality hardware, paints and above all, perhaps, Dixon's Graphite Automobile Lubricant, for which the Kingan Hardware Co. are sole agents for Peterborough and district. This exhibit is under the care of Mr. T. W. McClellan, who has earned credit for attractive display.

Dixon's Graphite Automobile Lubricant affords the correct lubrication for a car, which is of vital importance, and it should be realized that one or two kinds of grease will not contribute to efficiency and durability as conditions are different in each part, and must be treated accordingly. This auto lubricant, when properly used, will acceptably imperve the performance of any gas engine, and add to its life. Either at the show or at the Kingan Hardware store, no pains will be spared to instruct car owners in the use of graphite, which is applied with the oil recommended by the car's manufacturers. This timely graphite lubricant maintains cylinder walls and bearings in perfect condition, improves compression and causes an engine to operate with the acme of smoothness. Another remarkable feature is that when used on tires in place of talc it prevents the tube from adhering to casing and this reduces heat, prevents blow-outs and prolongs the life of the tire generally. Altogether, Dixon's Graphite Automobile Lubricant fills a long-felt want in fastering economy in car maintenance. Just look into it!

STATE CONTROL OF TELEPHONES

HAMILTON VETERANS TO SEND IN PETITION FEDERAL GOVERNMENT.

Hamilton, Ont., April 10.—Several important announcements were made today by A. H. Peart, local member of the Provincial Executive, G. W. V. A., and president of the East Hamilton branch. Among them was that the Great War Veterans' Association would petition the Dominion Government with a view to having the Bell Telephone Company taken over as a national utility. The veterans claimed this corporation in 1918, after paying bond interest, eight per cent. on common stock and meeting all expenses, had an undivided profit of $1,200,000.

Another announcement was that the G. W. V. A. would protest against alien enemies and persons who refused or evaded military service being allowed to vote at any future election.

The Provincial Executive had forwarded to the Ontario Legislature a resolution asking for the elimination of property qualifications with respect to candidates in municipal elections.

Last fall Orillia bought a large quantity of wood at $10 per cord. Some of the wood was not up to standard, and a settlement has been made at $9 per cord.

An Early Start In Exhibition Preparations

The farmer directors of the Peterborough Exhibition Board made the first break this morning toward making the Exhibition Grounds better than ever before. These directors came to town and held a lively levelling bee, as a result of which marked improvement is already discernible. Thirteen teams and one horse were at work all morning. Mr. Merrill of Merrell and Meredith, one of the directors, showed commendable interest by donning the overalls and driving a team. This early start demonstrates a large measure of energy and enterprise animating the Exhibition board, which augurs well for our next Industrial Exhibiton.

FARMERS AND DAYLIGHT SAVING

Writer in London Paper Says Nature Will not Respond to the Order of Any Government.

(Margery Mills" in London Advertiser)

If one thing more were needed to convince the farmer of Canada that he is not considered to have average intelligence, this last move on the part of the aggregation of the best brains of Canada surely supplies the deficiency. If the best brains have evolved this daylight saving system (or to be exact, utter lack of system) of 1919, what would mediocre or inferior brains have planned for us

There may be a "Union" at Ottawa, but they are not making any great endeavor to unite the people of Canada while "class legislation" is the order of the day.

Railroads and Friend Hayseed.

Was ever a greater farce than the decision not to re-enact the daylight saving system, since our friend the farmer found it so inconvenient ?But the railways will run on new time. Friend Hayseed hasn't any connection with them. His place from now until next October is on the back fifty acres, working 18 to 20 hours a day.

It is not so many years since the M .C. R. ran on a different time standard from the other railroads, and we managed to do business with them and they did with us. It suited their convenience to do so. If those U.S. roads choose to run on U.S. time, surely Canada need not cater to them. I noticed a few days ago that a correspondent in The Advertiser thinks that the opposition to daylight saving in the country arises from : 1 The disinclination to change any established custom. 2 Opposition to urban viewpoint.

Nature Does Not Change

Now, being the only remaining class of men in this country who think politics in the terms of Grit and Tory, as their greatgrandfathers did, the unorganized farmers must plead guilty to charge number 1.

However, their disinclination in regard to the subject under discussion is based upon the fact that the power which controls nature has failed to adjust certain phenomena to accord with this daylight saving plan.

It still seems to be the custom for the dew to remain in the fields until about 7 by "God's time" in the summer mornings and the evenings are the most comfortable time for working. God's 6 o'clock is plenty early enough to leave off.

For the farmer 6 o'clock is too early to begin, and an hour is wasted here.

To go out into the mid-day heat is utterly impossible, being dangerous to both men and horses, and when dinner is between 11 and 12 more time is again lost here. Quitting time is 6 o'clock, just when the farmer could work.

Town help demands big wages, and will work only between prescribed hours.

Three Too Early to Rise

Many farmers in this section make a practice of rising at 4 o'clock for chores, etc.; that means 3, and when people work hard they need their customary sleep.

It is a fine thing for the city and town man to be free early in the afternoon for a long evening's pleasure, but he could have such a system for himself without disarranging the business of this country, which is agriculture. Eighty per cent of the wealth emanates from it.

The united capitalists are doing everything in their power to breed disunion among the workers, setting class against class and legislating in favor of their own class every time.

Yet in spite of this, farmer after farmer hangs back from this organization which by proper affiliation could control the situation. He calls it "Grit Dodge," and is "satisfied" to be a mere lackey for the class whose masters he should be.

Read History

Is it against the law to read and quote and teach from past history? Once upon a time, says the public school text book, which as far has not been tabooed by order-in-council, a parliament in the motherland declared that it could not be resolved without its own consent.

It is relates that one whom that book does not call a traitor, cleared the house, locked the door, and put the key into his pocket. We are told that history repeats itself.

And while all true and worth-while leaders are counselling moderation it might be possible to infringe too far upon the liberties of a loyal people.

No wonder thinking by the people is discouraged! If the bulk of the Canadian electorate were to awaken suddenly to the positive menace to constitutional representative government, which faces this land today, what would the result be?

Self-Restraint and Organization

We only hope that we can educate ourselves slowly that self-restraint shall accompany all knowledge acquired so that quiet, orderly, intelligent organization and co-operation of our forces shall, when the time comes, make of Canada a democratic government in reality as well as in name.

As matters stand either Webster does not know the meaning of the word democracy, or we misuse it, in honoring the present system by the title.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Look Young! Bring Back Its Natural Color, Gloss and Attractiveness

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea at home though is troublesome. An easier way is to get a bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use. This is the old time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark glossy, soft and luxuriant.

POPULAR SONG WRITER SERENADES "MICKEY"

Nell Moret Discloses Inspiration

Neil Moret, the popular song writer, gave the "Mickey" cast a great surprise at their studio one day, by an unexpected musical recital, in which he serenaded Mickey. There were many exclamations of delight, of course, since no one had imagined he had even seen any of the scenes in this great photoplay, which will be shown at the Grand Opera House, today, Friday, and Saturday. Miss Normand, particularly, was pleased with the song, which brought out in such sweet melodious music, the very spirit of the photoplay.

Today this song, which the photoplay inspired, is proving one of the most popular hits of the year, one million copies having already been sold to the public, song and dance records having been made by the leading talking machine companies, and piano roll companies.

There was a good deal of questioning later on as to how he knew anything about "Mickey." No one in the company had ever noticed Mr. Moret there during the rehearsals. In order to get some peace on the subject, therefore, he told them that he had first noticed Mickey when he dropped into the studio for a chat one day with one of the directors. At that time the very first scenes were being "shot" and attracted by the charming personality of "Mickey" he stayed the entire day. Two hours later, inspired by this fascinating photoplay he wrote the song dedicated to "Mickey," and which he called "Mickey."

But why Miss Normand should be at all peeved, after the first surprise of the song, no one could quite fathom. As for Neil Moret, he set it down as "just like a woman." It leaked out, however several days later, when Miss Normand said she was "afraid" of Mickey. "It sticks so," she complained, "just as Peter Pan is identical with Maude Adams." Nevertheless, just ask Miss Normand some day how proud she is of her twin sister "Mickey." She loves that mischievous little girl as much as everyone else does, she has confided many times.

Maxwell
—a car of rare charm and—able

YOUR first impression of this present day Maxwell as it passes you on the street is one of decided beauty.

Your first ride in it, whether at the wheel or in the tonneau, tells you of its rare charm.

But after six months you find a new admiration for the Maxwell. You find it shuns the repair shop, that it runs and runs and runs and never stops running.

Then after a year is past you develop an enthusiasm for it that dictionary words don't seem to fully describe.

And then after you have had it for more than the average life of a motor car and you find it far better than even the Maxwell salesman said it was you search for the reason.

This is what you find:

For 5 years Maxwell cars have been built on the single chassis plan. To date 300,000 have been turned out on this plan. Each car better than the other. Each one better looking than the other.

There have been more than 1000 refinements in the Maxwell, but never once have the Maxwell executives swerved from the original program.

You conclude that reliability was designed "into" the car and built "into" it, and that a policy of 300,000-all-alike is the soundest kind of reason for writing your check for a present day Maxwell.

GERMANS, TOO, START WAR ON TITLES OF NOBILITY

Soldiers Section of Soviet Congress Introduce Drastic Resolution at Session Today.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berlin, April 10—A resolution adopted at the opening session of the Soviet Congress here peremptorily demanding the release of George Ledebour, Independent Socialist Leader, arrested during the Spartacan outbreak, has placed the Prussian and National Government in an awkward predicament. The Prussian ministry of state is said to be opposed to setting Ledebour free but the Independents propose to press the issue to the extreme limit and hurry a decision. Among the resolutions introduced in Congress is one calling upon the Government to appoint five delegates of Congress as members of the German Peace delegation.

Twenty-four mentions were announced on the printed calendar, covering a wide range of subjects, including governmental military measures in connection with strikes, amnesty for political prisoners, food problem, ranking of officers and status of volunteer regiments that have been employed for the past few months in throttling insurrectionary movements. The soldiers factions submitted a resolution calling for the abolition of all insignia of rank and of honor medals with the exception of a badge for wounded men, and the cancellation of patents of nobility. Another resolution calls upon the state to assume the functions of an undertaker in that it assume charge of all burials.

MEMBER OF HOUSE DEFIES ANOTHER TO FIST COMBAT

G. B. Nicholson of East Algoma Enraged at Statement Made by Lucien Cannon.

Ottawa, April 10.—Enraged over a taunt that Ontario members, in voting for conscription, were actuated only by a desire to win the election, Mr. G. B. Nicholson, of East Algoma, who lost his only son in the war, sprang to his feet in the House of Commons, denounced Mr. Lucien Cannon of Dorchester as "a miserable, cowardly slanderer," and challenged him to "repeat the remark to my face outside."

Parliamentary procedure, he complained, prevented him from giving Mr. Cannon a thrashing there and then, but he intimated that he was quite ready to whip the Dorchester member if the latter dared reiterate the slander on the green outside the House.

Members Grew Angry.

It was a stormy scene. Members from Ontario and the West were furious, and the acrimonious discussion which ensued from the reckless remarks of the Quebec man might very easily have resulted in a free fight.

Mr. Cannon bitterly opposed conscription from the start, and is alleged to have told his electors in Dorchester in 1917 that Canada had done enough in the war, that it was not Canada's war and that we should not ruin our country for England. When Mr. W. F. Nickle, the member for Kingston charged him with making these serious statements he did not deny them; neither did Hon. Dr. Beland, when asked directly by Mr. Nickle, deny writing from his prison cell in Berlin that Cannon's speech was being widely reproduced in German newspapers to show that Canada was getting weary of the war.

Mr. Cannon's Allegations.

The storm broke during discussion of a resolution moved by General Sir Sam Hughes demanding uniform punishment for defaulters, deserters and slackers. The debate was very moderate, in fact very tame, until Cannon, who has been dubbed "the Dorchester Firebrand," jumped into the proceedings with a bitter speech in which he said that the Ontario members who voted for conscription were actuated "only by a desire to win—not the war, but the election"; that Premier Borden was anxious to save—not the Empire, but the Conservative party," and that the Ontario members and Cabinet Ministers who misled the electors with promises of exemption from military service "should be placed in the prisoners' dock beside the victims of their promises."

Ask—and be convinced

To those who still doubt, we say—talk to a Gray Dort owner and be convinced.

Ask him about the motor——that puts at your command a smooth, quiet flow of real power—instantly. Ask him about the comfort of this generously-large light car. Ask him about the equipment—about economy of tires, gasoline. And the longer he has his Gray Dort, the more enthusiastic he will be.

A fine example of practical and sound, careful construction. Performance and marked economy is the truest index to its rare value.

HOW BOB HEDGES MADE BIG FORTUNE OUT OF BASEBALL

Former Owner of St. Louis Browns Had $5,000 When He Started and Sold His Stock for Half a Million.

A baseball plant which rolls around the tailend spot in twelve of the fourteen years naturally is expected to turn up as a financial loser. Robert Lee Hedges was associated with an American League franchise from 1902 to the eve of 1916. He finished in 1902 and in 1908. He had twelve entries which either were tailenders or mighty close to the cellar. He invested $5,000 and when he disposed of his stock he received $500,000. In his prosperous year, 1908, he raked in profits close to $165,000, and year after year during his second division days his books showed a surplus.

Manufacturer, Then Magnate.

Hedges was a buggy manufacturer in Cincinnati. He was a financier, a promoter. He confessed to Ban Johnson, John Bruce, C. J. McDiarmid and others launching the American League that he did not know a base hit from a submarine when he was asked to promote the St. Louis American League club in the winter of 1901-1902. His reputation for turning meter to oil, brass to gold, though, convinced the American League that he was the man to oppose the National League. And so in an [illegible] secretary and treasurer of the St. Louis Browns.

"I was in Kansas City," said Mr. Hedges, in relating his experiences in breaking in as a major league owner, "when I was invited by Bruce and McDiarmid of Cincinnati to invest in the American League venture to enter St. Louis. When they talked about baseball I laughed at them. I told them baseball wasn't my profession, that I was making buggies and serving as silent promoter for New York amateurs.

Bought Stock Instead of Selling.

"They told me that a promoter was wanted for St. Louis—someone to go there and organize sufficient stock to operate a ball club. I was asked to visit Chicago for a conference with Ban Johnson, and up to that time I did not know who Ban Johnson was.

"I was afraid of tackling another man's game, but I consented to take a shot at it—as a promoter—to go to St. Louis, organize the club, sell the stock, and I told them that when the thing was on a sound footing I would get out. Instead of selling, though, I bought.

"It wasn't long before I discovered that they were not operating the game the way I believed it should be run. I noticed that the fans were crowding and pushing at the gates; it was a regular stampede for the seats, and I immediately decided that something had to be done to change the comforts of the public.

"For days and days I stood at the grand stand entrance to greet the people as they came in. I gave them a smile, a good [illegible], a cigar to the fellow who was a regular customer; if he had a lady with him I called an usher to see that he received a front row seat.

"I paid more attention to the turnstiles than to the ball club. Jim McAleer was my manager, and I told Jim that each of us would have to handle our business—on the field Jim and in the grand stand for myself.

Sought Patronage of Women.

"I made a close study of my patronage. I found that out of a crowd of almost five thousand fans there would be hardly twenty-five ladies. Studying the pulse of the public, I knew that only a first division club would attract the regular fans.

"I had to do something to get them out when my club was losing and I decided that the scheme was to cater to the ladies, to get them interested in baseball, to get them talking about the game and to get them out to the park.

"In the early days I never missed a day around the grand stand entrance. When a lady visited once or twice a week with an escort I made a habit of finding out who she was who they were. If the man's mother wife, sister, sweetheart or chum, I wrote him a letter and invited him to accept my private box for a box party and limited three gentlemen to a party of twelve.

"I knew that with nine ladies in my box they would tell their friends about the ball game they attended. If you want a secret to come out, give it to the feminine sex. That's why I invited them to box parties. I wanted more ladies at my park.

"The result was that my park became a promenade for the spring and summer fashions. Our Fifth avenue and Michigan Boulevard became deserted. The ladies with their plumes, silks and gowns were at my ball park.

"Increasing my attention for the ladies, I moved to the bar. I noticed day after day that the men would enter the park sober. They would leave intoxicated. When they were intoxicated they hooted the players. Their language was not proper either.

"I found that with a winning club the profits of the bar were not needed. For a losing club the people who visited the bar drove away the high-class patronage. My next move was to close the bar, and I believe I was the first major league club owner to remove the sale of liquor."

FAMOUS WRESTLER SAYS HIS IS TRUE ART OF SELF DEFENCE

"Strangler" Lewis Offers to go Against Jess Willard in an Empty Room for $10,000, Agreeing to Win in Ten Minutes.

Ed ("Strangler") Lewis, who lost a gruelling match to Zybszko for Earl Caddock's wrestling championship, objects to boxing as "the manly art of self-defence."

"Ridiculous!" says Lewis.

"Why, the fists are the least effective of nature's weapons! Wrestling is the true 'art of self-defence.' To prove it, I hereby challenge Jess Willard to a contest with nature's own weapons in a ring or an empty room and will bet him $10,000 that he will not last ten minutes. I think that about two minutes will be long enough for me to prove the superior effectiveness of wrestling over boxing. Unless Willard knocked me out with the first punch he would never have a chance, and I have a way of showing a man, without approaching near enough to be hit."

As for Willard accepting the husky wrestler's challenge? It is out of the question.

Dr. B. F. Roller, the famous physician-athlete and mat man, challenged Jess to a go in a gymnasium with a jury of newspapermen and city officials to settle once and for all the question of which is the better method of self-defence, boxing or wrestling. But Willard dared not.

"Farmer" Burns, another famous wrestler, issued a challenge to any prize fighter in the world to meet him in an empty room. This challenge stood for years without a taker.

Muldoon, one time champion wrestler, who trained Sullivan for his fight with Mitchell, could handle Sullivan at will. A mixed match was proposed between Muldoon and Mitchell, but Mitchell never accepted because he wisely listened to the experts, who told him that Muldoon would make him jump out of the ring.

Lewis, who served as an instructor at Camp Grant, also takes a crack at boxing in the army.

"Boxing is only valuable to a soldier as entertainment. As a means of vanquishing the enemy boxing is useless. Experience has shown that a disarmed man coming in contact with an enemy soldier has almost always lost his head and confined himself to struggling and tumbling about. Wrestling would be far more valuable to a soldier than boxing in such an encounter. My manager, Billy Sandow, has proven that in camp. We matched up twenty soldiers who had been taught wrestling with twenty who had been taught boxing. The wrestlers cleaned them up in fine style.

Here are a few hints by Lewis:

"When you have your opponent down and are the aggressor, keep him there by means of your weight. This will serve the double purpose of preventing him from changing his position.

"Go through the motions quickly and with vim, whether on the defensive or offensive.

"When you are the under man, keep on moving constantly, thus not only preventing your opponent from securing a hold, but also enabling you in the change of position to secure a good hold on him.

"Feature the strangle holds, for an opponent may be made unconscious by one of them.

"You can break him arm, leg, neck or shoulder with various holds. It is a simple matter.

Sporting Gossip

If John McGraw did his scrapping in the ring instead of on the diamond, he would have had to retire long ago. The "Little Napoleon" was born in Truxton, N. Y., on April 7, 1873.

McGraw commenced his professional career on the Olean, N. Y., club at $60 per month when he was only 16. Then he went to Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and in 1892 was bought by the Baltimore club of the National League. As a member of the famous Oriole infield he acquired a taste for pennants that has never left him. In 1902, in mid-season, he became manager of the Giants, and has held that job ever since. When the ownership changed hands recently, it is understood, McGraw came in for a share of interest in the team.

When he first took hold of the New York club he fired all the misfits who were posing as Giants. He couldn't get the club out of the cellar in 1902, although the team won about half its games after he took hold, but in 1903 the Giants put up a strong race for the flag and finished second. In 1904 the club won the pennant, and the world's flag as well as the National League bunting was hoisted over the Polo Grounds in 1905. During the next five years Chance's great Cub machine won the leadership four times and Clarke's Pirates copped one flag, but during that period McGraw's team finished second three times, third once and fourth once. In 1911 the Giants came back to first place.

To date McGraw has won six pennants, surpassing all past records of National League pilots. Anson, of Chicago, Sallee, of Boston, and Hanlon, of Baltimore, each annexed five pennants and Chance and Clarke each won four, while Connie Mack of the Athletics has won the flag five times.

At Winnipeg the city may be asked for permission to further increase street car fares to meet demands for increased pay, which represents a million dollar outlay.

De Lavals Take Six From Shamrocks

Last night in the 5-pin league at the Water street alleys the De Laval won all six games from the Shamrocks. In the first match for De Laval Rishea was high man with 593, Barrette second with 531. For the Shamrocks Coras was high with 572, while Sullivan had 571. In the second match, for the De Laval, Rishea had 591, Garrow 438, and Lafoe 510. For the Shamrocks Coras hit 544.

Economy.

It's heartbreaking the way some girls are careless in these hard times.

Aunt Martha went into the kitchen the other evening and found her young servant sitting by the fire, which was gaily consuming much coal.

"Goodness me!" gasped the old lady. "You should always burn cinders in the evening, Esmeralda."

Next day auntie saw Esmeralda heaping coal on to a huge bonfire in the back garden. She couldn't speak for rage, but the girl understood her gesture.

"Please, mum," she explained, "I'm making cinders to burn this evening!"

When the ceremony had been concluded Mr. and Mrs. Ackison drove to the home of the latter's parents, where a dainty wedding luncheon was served. They then proceeded to their new home on the second concession of Smith.

Mrs. Ackison was well known in the city and very popular, being in the office of the city treasurer for fourteen years, and during a great part of that time was the assistant treasurer. At the time of her resignation, about six weeks ago, the civic officials and aldermen presented her with several handsome gifts.

See Better Milk Exhibit at Show

One of the most instructive and interesting exhibits at the big motor show is that of Pure Milk Products, which should not be missed by any visitor. Unfortunately this exhibit and demonstration of how milk should be treated to be perfectly safe from disease contagion, has been relegated to a rather out-of-the-way corner of the building. It may be found in the east gallery of the building, next the baby welfare exhibit, and a visit will repay one and all.

This Pure Milk Product is in charge of Mr. Alfred A. Thal, who explains the difference between pasteurized and clarified milk and that not so treated. Pasteurizing kills all germs and clarifying cleanses. At this exhibit one should see the wonderful clarifying machine in operation, when after examining the amount of injurious foreign substances removed by this process, all doubt will be removed of the need for clarifying and pasteurizing fresh milk from the cow This better milk product unquestionably removes a long-standing menace to the health of milk consumers. Inspect it in the east gallery at the motor show tonight and all day tomorrow.

NOVITIATE CASE STIRS UP QUEBEC

PAPER SAYS IT IS INTENDED TO SATISFY IGNORANT AND RUDE.

Quebec, April 10.—The decision of the Federal Government to appoint a Royal Commission to investigate the Guelph Jesuit College incident, is criticized by both L'Evenement, Conservative, and Le Soleil, Liberal.

L'Evenement says: "With a view mainly to serving mean political jealousies and also the fanaticism of an ignorant band, the peaceful retreat of the Jesuit fathers at Guelph was twice the object of military expeditions by soldiers, who went through the institution in an effort to discover absentees.

"And this was not enough. To satisfy the self made condemnable sentiments, the Government orders today a Royal Enquiry in order that others may bear the responsibility of a judgment proclaiming the full innocence of the Jesuits."

After Doherty's Son.

The paper adds that it was the son of the Hon. Mr. Doherty, the Militia were mainly aiming at in this Guelph affair.

"In order to sap the Hon. Mr. Doherty's influence in the Cabinet and place him in a bad light before public opinion, an attempt was made to give the impression that his son had entered the Novitiate of the Jesuits to escape conscription.

The article closes by saying:

"But what must we think of a public man like Sir Sam Hughes, who demands this enquiry to satisfy the prejudices of the ignorant and rude sections he so perfectly represents in the House of Commons?"

"But," adds Le Soleil, "Sir Sam was not satisfied. He championed a coterie. He claims that the director of the institution was arrogant and showed small respect for authority.

"This is too clearly a German's quarrel, or to speak more adequately, an Orangeman's quarrel. But, in the end, it all amounts to the same thing, for here is manifested the very same mentality, and quite naturally so, since Guillaume d'Orange, the patron of the lodges, was, to speak truly, nothing but a genuine German and his traditions still prevail in this sect in our present days."

Government Should Have Acted.

The paper contends that the Government should have taken it unto itself to institute an enquiry into the allegations against the Jesuits, but it charges that the Government was afraid to do it, preferring to leave this task to others, so that the Unionist Government would not have to admit that the Jesuits were innocent.

"And this was done." it concludes, "without doubt, to prevent any displeasure for Sir Clifford Sifton, the great Manitou of Unionism, and the most expert stage manager in Canada, to take advantage of prejudices."

DAYLIGHT SAVING NOW OFFICIAL

RAILWAYS UPHELD IN THEIR DECISION TO OPERATE ON THE DAYLIGHT SAVING PLAN

Railway Commission so Decides—Parliament Agrees to Adopt Same System—Adoption or Rejection of Daylight Saving a Matter Within Provincial Jurisdiction.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, April 12.—The Dominion Railway Commission has decided that the railways acted for public safety and convenience in adopting the daylight saving time in conformity with the United States.

Following the judgment of the Railway Commission on the daylight saving, Parliament adopted Ottawa time for the sittings of the House. Just before the House adjourned, Hon. Arthur Meighen, who was leading the Government, rose and stated that the effect of the judgment was that the setting of standard or local time was a matter for provincial jurisdiction. That being the case, he suggested that the House, when it adjourned, should meet again at 3 o'clock, local daylight saving time on Monday.

D. D. McKenzie, leader of the Opposition, suggested that the judgment of the Railway Board, which could only have been come to after a great deal of deliberation, be placed in Hansard. Mr. Meighen agreed to this suggestion, and the House adjourned.

CONFERENCE REFUSES DEMAND OF THE JAPANESE DELEGATES

Race Equality Has no Place in Covenant of the League of Nations but Japan Reserves the Right to Bring Matter Up Again.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, April 12.—With the single exception of the amendment specifically exempting the Monroe Doctrine from being affected by the covenant, no vital change was made by the League of Nations commission in that document, in its meetings Thursday and Friday night, last night's meeting marking the conclusion of the consideration of the covenant.

Last night's discussion lasted four hours. No date was set for a plenary session of the Peace Conference to consider the covenant. The covenant, as the commission left it, did not include any section granting Japan's request for the recognition of racial equality, and neither was a section introduced covering the request of France for an international military general staff. Both Japan and France announced that they reserved the right to bring up the amendments they desired before a plenary session of the conference. As it now stands, the covenant contains twenty-six sections.

DEBATE IN EUGENICS IS AGAIN UP IN THE HOUSE

Dr. Godfrey's Marriage Bill, However, is to be Postponed Until Next Session.

Toronto, April 12.—Dr. Forbes Godfrey's Marriage Bill, after having been voted down in the Legislature because of the principle involved, was re-considered by the special committee. The Bill is to be held over till another session, though considerable merit is admitted by the members of the committee. It aims at making it compulsory for contracting parties seeking marriage to produce a certificate of health before the ceremony, showing that neither party is the victim of communicable disease or tuberculosis and to secure such affidavit, a change in the system of the issuing of marriage licenses is suggested.

Hon. T. W. McGarry pointed out that to appoint in issuer of marriage licenses in either a county or municipality would cause considerable hardship in his portion of the province, for instance, where men would have to travel fifty or sixty miles to be examined by a doctor [illegible]ficate of health. Such a measure would be of prevention of marriage in many cases.

[illegible] suggested that some change might be made in the affidavit to improve it. He had several petitions from Women's Institutes and W.C.T.U.'s from all over the Province urging the acceptance of Dr. Godfrey's bill, in which all agreed that a bill of health should be secured and a blood test made.

Dr. Robb and Dr. Jacques both pointed out that there were very few doctors in the Province capable of making a safe blood test. Dr. Godfrey admitted that the whole question was complicated and that it would require careful consideration before a radical change could be made. He suggested that the provincial laboratory should assist with the blood tests.

On the suggestion of Mr. McGarry, the committee asked leave to make an interim report and to still further discuss during the recess the principal of the bill with a view to gradually changing the system of issuing marriage licenses to meet the suggestions of Dr. Godfrey, which, he admitted, were worthy of consideration.

GAVE CLUB BAG TO ALD. MURRAY

POPULAR MEMBER OF MACHINISTS' UNION HONORED BY FELLOW WORKERS.

At the meeting of the Machinists' Union in Labor Hall last night, Alderman Alexander Murray was presented with a handsome initialed club bag by his fellow members as a token of their esteem for one whom they declared had done a great deal to advance their interests in the city of Peterborough.

In reply, Alderman Murray stated that while he prised their gift very much, it was not necessary in order to give him an idea of their regard for him, as they had shown it in a most tangible way upon many occasions in the past by appointing him their representative at three conventions and recommending him to the Trades and Labor Council as the choice of the Machinists' Union for alderman.

COMMITTEE ASK CONTRACTORS TO TENDER AGAIN FOR BRIDGE

Bids Are Wanted on Lump Sum Basis—Cost is Reduced by Elimination of All Trimmings—Concrete Still in Favor.

As was stated in an article which appeared upon the front page of this paper a few days ago, the aim of the special committee entrusted with the task of bringing in a report in connection with what action should be taken regarding the awarding of the contract for the construction of the Hunter street bridge is to obtain a price which could be met by the funds available, or as an alternative, obtain enough additional money to meet the cost entailed by the adoption of the lowest or most satisfactory tender.

A deputation waited upon the Provincial Government and received the usual reply that their request would be considered. It is stated that the Hydro Electric Commission were interviewed in connection with some matter, which it is presumed concerned the bridge, as the same deputation met this body upon the same day. No information has been given by the deputation in regard to the prospects of a grant from either the Government or the Hydro.

The next step taken by the committee at a meeting of the Special Bridge Committee called at the last minute last night, at which the newspapers of the city were not represented owing to the fact that they were not notified of the intention of the members to hold such a meeting, efforts were made to cut down the expenses connected with the building of the bridge in every conceivable direction, and the tenderers were asked to again tender upon the lump sum basis, giving a detailed account of the reductions they would make in connection with each of the proposed alterations.

The object is plainly to endeavor to cut down the cost of the construction of the bridge to a more reasonable figure. In this connection it may be stated that in all probability there will not be such a difference in the sum total as would be expected, as the construction companies will without a doubt demand a greater amount as their share of profit for the work if they are to take all the risk in connection with the construction of the bridge and risk their capital to the extent which will be required in this case at a time when the labor market is in such an unsettled condition.

The tenders are to be received not later than 5 o'clock on the evening of Monday, April 21st.

The resolution which finally disposed of the matter for the time being follows and is self-explanatory:

Moved by Alderman McIntyre, seconded by Mayor Duncan:

"That lump sum prices be asked for the construction of the bridge in accordance with the present plans and specifications and with the follow alterations:

(1) Elimination of the granite facing below the floor of the bridge and the substitution of concrete of the same class as in the adjoining sections of the bridge, with ribbed finish.

(2) Elimination of the granite masonry and the substitution of concrete of the same class as the rest of the work adjoining.

(4) Elimination of the sidewalks and curbs over the earth fill on the approaches.

(5) Shortening of the earth fill approach on the west side of the rived to make a grade on this approach of 4 per cent. the length to be determined by Mr. Barber to accomplish this and there to be no filling west of the point where the grade begins.

(6) The fill on the east approach to begin at the centre of the intersection of Burnham street.

(7) The reduction of the width of the bridge by 9 feet.

The tenders to give the amount of the reduction for each of these items separately, and the Council to have the option of making any or all of the reductions and that this information be sent by Mr. Barber and prices asked on it from Fraser, Brace & Co.; J. O'Toole; Raynard Concrete Pile Co.; Chambers, McQuigge & McCaffery Co.; J. H. Tromanhauser Co.; Canadian Engineering & Contracting Co.; R. Sheehy; Concrete Constructors; E. Conroy; Russell Townshend Co.; and Sherwood Construction Co.; and to be addressed to H. Phelan, Chairman of the Board of Works and marked Tenders for Bridge, and to be received up to 5 o'clock on the evening of Monday, April 21st.

The Clerk was instructed to forward a copy of this resolution to Engineer Barber.

The committee forms a majority of the Council so that the above resolution is sure to be adopted by the Board in regular session.

Special Attention Given to Work of Labor Convention—Overseas Premiers Had Conference With Lloyd George Yesterday and the Results Were Satisfactory on All Issues.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, April 12.—(By Leon Trepanier, Canadian Press Correspondent.) At a meeting of the Plenary Council yesterday afternoon Canada was represented by Sir Robert Borden and by Hon. Mr. Sifton and Hon. Mr. Doherty, who have been giving special attention to the details of the labor convention, which has formed the subject of discussion. There were long conferences in the morning between the British prime minster and the prime ministers of the overseas dominions, to whom Mr. Lloyd George gave a full report of the proposals now under consideration by the Council of Four, and whose advice and assistance he sought on several questions of great importance.

It is understood that representatives of the dominions were favorably impressed with the progress which has been made in reaching tentative conclusions, and that the proposals placed before them were discussed with satisfactory results. By means of such frequent consultations, representatives of the dominions enjoy especially favorable opportunities of keeping closely in contact with the proceedings of the Council of Four and also of urging their views in respect of all matters that concern their interests.

Last Night's Fire On Charlotte St.

At 7:10 last evening the fire brigade were called to the home of Mrs. O'Brien, 213 Charlotte street, as the result of a fire which had broken out in a portion of the house, caused by an overheated pipe setting fire to the woodwork surrounding the thimble in the wall.

One of Mrs. O'Brien's boarders ran to the firehall, which is just around the corner from the house, and gave the alarm.

Upon the brigade arriving on the scene it was found necessary to use water as well as chemical, and 1,150 feet of hose was laid in two lines and 46 gallons of chemical used.

The house is a frame one and is the property of the Chamberlain Estate. It was insured, but Chief Grange is not able to state the extent of the damage until he has made a further investigation.

MOTOR SHOW CLOSES WITH A RECORD ATTENDANCE

Most Successful Affair of its Kind Ever Staged in Peterborough—Health Association Will Receive Substantial Financial Aid.

Peterborough's Third Motor Show closed last night to a capacity attendance, and those responsible for the admirable manner in which every details of the event was so successfully carried through are to be congratulated in presenting this year a show which excelled all preceding ones in every particular.

The exhibits have during the past three days and evenings proved a source of interest, instruction, and in some cases wonder, while the exhibitors have had continually on hand courteous demonstrators of motor cars and motor accessories, and this latter patient catering to the public has in no small measure stimulated a repitition of visits to the Armoury by an appreciative public.

Record Attendance

The attendance during the show totals up to a record one, and all concerned in its conduction express their unqualified satisfaction at the loyal support accorded them by exhibitors, entertainers, those in charge of special attractions and citizens in general. While it is not yet known how much has been realized, the Advisory Board of the Red Cross, under whose auspices the show was prepared and engineered, hope for a substantial amount of cash to be handed over to the Peterborough Health Association.

Auction Sale

At the close of the show, Mr. J. F. Thornton auctioned off all that was left in the sales booths, such as flowers, confections, refreshments accessories, and the public responded generously.

The services of the gypsy fortunetellers were gain in considerable demand, the cafe chantant enjoyed, if anything, increased patronage, and the dance room was taken advantake of by a host ow lovers of the light fantastic.

Angling enthusiasts had great luck at the improvised fish pond, and many a tale remains to be told of their marvelous catches.

Musical Program

The Conservatory Orchestra excelled themselves in their last program for the event. "Mr. Thos. Ward's vocal number in clear well-trained tenor, and Mr. Asa Huycke's stirring baritone solo, "The Palms," elicited pronounced appreciation. The orchestra earned marked credit in their presentation of those ever popular selections from "Robin Hood."

The earnest thanks of both the Show's management and the public are due Mr. Rupert Gliddon and his orchestra, and those vocal soloists who so generously contributed to each night's musical programme. This feature gave the event an atmosphere of joyous pleasure and attraction in itself.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

SATURDAY, APRIL 12, 1919

WHEN PETERBOROUGH GOES TO WORK.

HOW WOULD IT DO for the man who warmly advocates daylight saving, so that he may have more time in the evening to spend on the golf links, on the bowling green or in his auto, to get up some morning at six o'clock and watch the working people of Peterborough rouse themselves from their slumbers and go to their daily toil? With ninety nine out of every hundred such men, that would probably be a novel experience, and it certainly would be an education in itself. One-half the people in very truth have no idea how the other half lives.

The working population of the city may be divided into four classes—those who go to work at 7 o'clock, at 8, at 9, or later. The investigation referred to can best be carried on during the darkness of a winter morning. The people begin to shake themselves awake and lights appear in the windows of the humbler class of homes. Then the procession starts for the various factories and places where unskilled labor is performed. The first contingent to the army of workers is composed largely of old men, many of them decrepit through long years of early rising and uninteresting toil, and nearly all of them carrying a lunch box or dinner pail. In addition to these come girls, many of them thinly clad, and boys and girls of tender years.

It cannot be that an All-wise Providence Who created such a world as this ever designed that such a condition should exist, that the heavier burden should be carried by the aged, weak womanhood and growing children. It must be that human mismanagement, that has so many ghastly blunders to its discredit, is responsible for such a state of affairs. But day after day, year after year, the procession makes its way through the city streets.

At 8 o'clock another battalion of workers make their appearance. One hour later still another class comes into view. After that the autos of opulence bear their owners to bank or office. And as the daily tide passes before the observer he cannot fail to note that the later the hour of work, the greater the health and vigor and more pronounced the air of prosperity of the workers.

Of course, there are exceptions. There are business men who get down to work at 7 o'clock every morning and it would be safe to set your watch by their arrival. But with the most of these it is a matter of choice rather than necessity. Their mission is not so much to labor themselves as to see that others do not loaf on the job allotted to them.

THAT OLD HOME LIFE.

WHAT HAS BECOME of the old-fashioned family that every winter evening was wont to gather round the fire, each member with a book, magazine or newspaper? What has become of the old home life that remains only as so many pleasant memories of the aged of the present day? Where, too, has departed the culture and the stores of information that characterised the members of such a family? In how many homes today is the Bible systematically studied, as it was only a few years ago? What has become of the family altar, the passing of which is deplored so much by the religious newspapers and the pastors of the present age?

The world has simply gone amusement crazy. In the average town and city of Ontario every week night there is offered some form of entertainment to young and middle-aged alike, from the moving picture theatre to the church concert, debating society and mock parliament. The young people these days are continually on the move, living in a constant atmosphere of excitement. It is an unfailing hurry from the time they give up their daily duties until they can prepare for spending the evening away from home. And it must be admitted that in this severing of home ties the churches themselves are to a certain extent responsible. The weekly program of any place of worship, as published, is the only evidence that is required on this point. Even the public schools are protesting against the exactions of home work, until the abolition of this feature of the educational system is seriously debated. Everywhere the call is for shorter hours of labor, that more time may be devoted to amusement.

Efficiency among the working classes has suffered as a result. The human race is averse not only to the toil but also to the study of which their even recent ancestors were such creditable exponents. Perhaps the world is getting better as to the mental and physical development of the people, but statistics and other records bearing upon this point fail to establish the contention.

FEWER JAILS NEEDED.

EVERY YEAR some member of the Legislature brings up in the House a proposition to reduce the number of jails in the Province, as a measure of economy and a move to benefit the very people for whose punishment such places are maintained. The entire tendency of the times is towards centralization. If it is a good idea to strengthen the county schools by consolidation, then there is no reason on earth why the same argument does not hold good in the case of the county bastiles. Two or more counties have in some districts combined for the maintenance of a House of Refuge, and the co-operation has always proved successful both as to economy and efficiency of management.

Half the jails in Ontario are empty six months in the year, and at other times are simply the temporary homes of vagabonds, or, worse still, places of detention for unfortunates who should be cared for in insane asylums. If the jail is temporarily out of commission, if it lacks for inmates in proportion to its capacity, at all times the same force of officials is maintained in an easy existence, for which the taxpayers pay. A prisoner who is sentenced to one of these institutions for a minor offence and for a term so short as to keep him out of the provincial prisons, can certainly during his incarceration perform no labor that will pay for his board and lodging, crude as these may be. If three or four counties, according to population, would unite in building a jail, if they would operate a farm in connection with it, then a short term prisoner could be sentenced to hard labor without making a joke of the term. Such farms could be used for demonstration purposes, like the prison farms that were the great achievement of the late W. J. Hanna while Provincial Secretary.

This matter has been discussed for years by farmers' clubs and in the Legislature, but, like all reforms, it hangs fire. It was brought up again in the House the other day, but its reception was chilly. The U. F. O., however, are devoting considerable attention to the subject, and the chances are that the idea will be given a definite place in their platform. If public expenses are to be reduced, her is one excellent way to make a beginning.

THE VOTE IN QUEBEC.

WHEN ALL THE RETURNS are in it will likely be found that a comparatively light vote was cast in the Quebec temperance referendum, and that the "drys" in a spirit of over-confidence did not register anything like their full voting strength. It is unthinkable that a province, two-thirds of the municipalities of which were under local option, including the city of Quebec, local option that meant prohibition in fact, could reverse its verdict to the tune of a majority of over one hundred thousand. It was given out that the districts under local option at present would not be affected, no matter what the result might be. Beyond question this engendered a feeling of indifference in these places on the part of the temperance element, an indifference which never affects those opposed to the cause.

There is no end of litigation in sight as a result of the vote in Quebec. The right of the Federal Parliament to prohibit inter-provincial traffic has never been generally conceded, although an order-in-Council to that effect has been tolerated as a war measure. Some are sure to set up the claim that liquor can be barred from importation by one province from another only by enactment of the Provincial Legislature. If this is the case, then the hope of a dry province to so maintain its status will be to outlaw liquor entirely by making its possession illegal. The Dominion Parliament has authority to prohibit the manufacture of liquor, but to do so in the case of Quebec, after the vote of Thursday, could not be interpreted other than as an interference with provincial autonomy.

We hope our Peterborough friends do not think for a moment that the editor of the Canadian Statesman is responsible for an article credited to The Statesman, appearing under "Opinions of Other Editors," on the editorial page of The Daily Review on Saturday. It so happens that the Bowmanville editor on his last appearance in that progressive and splendid city addressed audiences in St. James Methodist and Knox Presbyterian Churches and in the Grand Opera House on the successful operation of local option in Bowmanville and West Durham, and we do not wish the citizens to imagine that we have had a change of heart on the operation of prohibition of the baneful liquor traffic, for we are stronger in the faith than ever now we have seen the results of provincial-wide prohibition, thanks to Premier Hearst. The Statesman quoted is a Toronto publication.

THE DINING ROOM IN THE FLAT

HOW A BRIDE-TO-BE SELECTED FURNITURE FOR THIS PART OF HER HOME AT A COST OF $85.

(By D.E.W.)

"One hundred dollars and not a cent more! for the dining room!" cried the bride-to-be as she danced in on me a few days after our first successful shopping tour. No perplexity was in her glance this day. The fact that she already owned all the lovely things for her living room that we had selected the other time and her bank account was only depleted by $150. had given her courage for the task ahead.

"I won't ask if it can be done. It not only can but it must be done. Come let's hurry," she cried, impatient to be on the way.

Jim came along also, but one might say he was the silent partner in all the transactions. The feminine ideas were generally carried by a majority of one. However, the bride-to-be consulted his taste often, but I did notice toward the end of the morning a tendency on her part to rather minimise the importance of his replies. Such lovely things as we had by that time selected gave her self confidence, you see, in our joint taste.

The dining room in the little apartment opened off the living room and had one window facing West. In the large opening between the rooms we decided to use no portieres. After much persuasion the landlord consented to our having the wooden casing of the doorway (there was no door) painted a bright blue. This, you understand was the wooden strip placed between the rooms, not the casing flush with the wall. It was the strip that is at right angles to the wall. This bright blue made a delightful spot of color, "tied the rooms together and eliminated a necessity of any portieres.

The dining room was not large, so again we decided on using small furniture. We also decided that we wished the room to be most informal in treatment. Neither the use to which the room was to be put, nor the furniture that could be afforded would allow of any but the most simple, informal style. On the wall with the window was a swinging door which led into the kitchenette. This was on the west wall opposite the opening into the living room. On the north wall was a built-in sideboard cupboard, so that we only had to plan on table, chairs and some sort of a serving table.

We wished this room to have individuality. "Let's get away from the usual," said the bride-to-be. "Or, at least as far away as we can for $100." she added. The same cream wall as we had used in the living room was also planned for the dining room. Although the room with its western exposure called for good colors, we considered the impression of space to be of more importance than cool walls: This cream wall still gave us plenty of opportunity to cool off the room with our hangings etc., and by making both rooms of the same color an impression of much greater space was, of course, given.

We chose the dining table first. A small table was what we wished to find, but we also wanted one that could seat six, as the bride-to-be was certain there would be company quite often. "I must throw off all my pretty things," she explained. We were most fortunate in finding the nice table. It was made of gum wood in a mahogany finish, it was of lovely lines and the best point of all was that it was an extension and could be pulled out to the desired size. Did I say the best pint? Let me change that statement The best point, I consider, was its reasonable price. "All that loveliness for $28." as the bride-to-be stated it.

Then came the chairs. In order to carry out the plan of having the room unusual we decided not to buy chairs to match the table. This brought more informality into the room (the quality we desired), and gave us another opportunity to introduce a color. We had planned a blue color scheme, so, of course, we wished to use some touches of its complementary shade, yellow. Some simple cottage chairs that sold for $5.50 each were chosen, and we found we could order them in any color we wished. We selected a soft yellow and the same bright blue that we had used on the doorcasing. The effect of the chairs used with the mahogany table was charming. Four chairs were all that we thought necessary, as the living room chairs could be pressed into service when required, so that $27 was all the bill came to.

What would we do for a serving table? was the next question. As $45 had already been spent we felt this last article must be a most reasonably priced one. The hangings and rug must still be bought, and all of the serving tables shown us mounted to above $20. The happy thought struck me of using in place of the usual table of the kind a tea cart. I say happy thought, as it proved to be so in more ways than one. The bride-to-be expects to do her own work; therefore, the tea cart can be put into use to carry the dishes back and forth from the kitchen to the dining table. When a friend drops in during the afternoon a cosy cup of tea can be enjoyed in the front room by bringing the tea cart into use. Oh, it was a most happy thought. We found a nice one with detachable tray for $11.95, and we were well on our way to having our lovely room.

The hangings and rug came next. A blue rag rug was decided on as suitable in style. Also its price ($12) attracted us. For the hangings also we wished plain blue. We found a delightful shade in a 36-inch material supposed to stand excellently the ravages of the sun, priced at 75 cents the yard.

"Let's dress them up a little," said the bride-to-be. So we chose a fringe 1½ inch deep made up in yellow and blue, and the bride-to-be plans to sew it down the front edge and across the bottom of each curtain.

We had measured the dining room window and found that six yards of material would be necessary. Therefore the price of the curtain came to $4.50 and that of the eight yards of fringe, at 48 cents a yard, $3.84.

At this point our memorandum account stood:

One dining table	$28.00
4 dining chairs, $5.50 each	22.00
One tea cart	11.95
One rag rug	15.00
Six yards of blue material at 75c yard	4.50
Eight yards fringe at 48c	3.84
Total	$85.29

This gave the bride almost $15 for fixings. She chose to put it into a set of china the color of violes and a yellow glass bowl that seemed to sing, so happy it looked when it reflected the sun.

TO-DAY'S STORY

The school that Sammy attended was of the old-fashioned sort that prevailed in 1840. Each boy and girl paid the teacher twenty-five cents a week for her teaching, and she had all ages and all grades up to the third reader and long division in one room. When boys and girls got beyond that they were supposed to be too much for a woman teacher, and had to go to another school, kept by a man, or a master as they were called then.

Every morning Sammy's teacher read the rules of conduct. It was rather a long list of things a scholar must do and must not do. It was the rules that a boy must not do that interested Sammy most. A few of them were things he had never thought of doing, and naturally he fell to wondering just what would happen if he tried doing some of them.

Of course Sam started in the A. B. C class, because that was where every boy and girl was expected to start, even though they could read fluently before they ever saw the inside of a schoolroom. A B C pupils did not have a study, but sat idly looking about the room from one recitation to the next, unless they were engaged in mischief of some sort, which most of the energetic ones usually were.

Sammy was too awed and scared to do much but sit still and listen to the rise and fall of the voices of the other pupils and watch "their mouths go," for they all studied out loud. He wondered how they could tell which was their own voice and which belonged to someone else in such a din.

On the second day young Sammy grew bolder. He experimented several times during the early morning to see how many of the interesting forbidden things he could do and not get caught. His good record of the day before was in his favor, and he got past "first recess' without receiving anything more than a warning as a reward for his badness. He did not expect to be caught again, but once when he was having such a good time and least expected it the teacher walked down the aisle behind him, caught him in the very act, and sent him outdoors for a stick for his own punishment.

Sammy was puzzled. His own mother had always used her hand, or a slipper which she kept always close at hand. He did not know just what sort of a stick to choose, though he had a whole forest before him from which to pick. They all looked so big, and when he shut his eyes and pictured to himself how they might hurt, he could not bring himself to choose any of them.

There was a shop just across the street, where barrels, kegs and tubs were being made. The wind blew a long, thin shaving from the shop right across in front of his feet. Sammy picked it up and carried it in the schoolroom very gravely, handing it over to his teacher.

History does not say what happened after that, but Mrs. Horr was a kindly woman who wished to do only her duty by her young charges, so we may hope that she saw the humor of the situation and let the young offender off.

That Sammy was none other than Samuel Clements, better known as Mark Twain, who later wrote so many humorous stories for boys, and older people as well. So far as is known that this is the first recorded example of that humor which later made Sammy famous.

AS AGE CREEPS ON

As age creeps on, vital force gradually decreases, until, when a man or woman is around 50, the kidneys and bladder need assistance to keep them in perfect working order.

Rheumatism, neuralgia and backache are common complaints of those getting on in years. It seems to be the custom to expect these afflictions—conclude they are simply the inevitable results of old age, and that there is no remedy for them.

There is a remedy—Gin Pills—and there are hundreds of people who can prove that the remedy is good.

Mr. Frank Lalonde, a well-known farmer of St. Raphael, Ont., was enabled to return to work at the age of [illegible] by the help of Gin Pills. Mr. Lalonde writes that he had suffered for years with pains in his back and sides, until finally he was forced to quit work. Gin Pills relieved him to such an extent that he now states he feels as strong at 61 as he did at 30 years.

Mrs. Hugh McLeod, of Lewis Cove Road, had a similar experience with Gin Pills. In her letter to us she says:

"I am 51 years and the mother of 8 children. Five years ago I was troubled with backache and dull pains across the abdomen. I used a box of Gin Pills, and feel so much better that I will continue to use Gin Pills."

Testimonials such as these cannot be disregarded, for the aged speak the truth.

It is foolish to suffer when you don't have to. Use Gin Pills and enjoy your latter years. 50c a box. Sold by all dealers. Sample free upon request to The National Drug & Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited, Toronto, Ontario. U. S. residents should address Na-Dru-Co., Inc., 202 Main St., Buffalo, N.Y. 38

TOURISTS FOR CANADA IN 1919

GILT-EDGED TRADE FROM UNITED STATES EXPECTED THIS YEAR

Tourist "trade" gives quickest returns for service of any commerce any land can undertake. Payment, cash "on the dot," is for exactly those things which the people produce and originate themselves. In this sense tourist traffic forms a most valuable national asset of "gilt-edged import" of practically nothing but dollars.

It is an aspect of Canadian trade which must not be overlooked in this [illegible] conditions.

The Trade Advertiser of the Pan American Union, an international organisation maintained by the twenty Latin-American republics and the United States for the development among other things of friendly intercourse, writes to the Canadian Trade Commission as follows:

"I am inclined to think that all parts of Canada could receive thousands of tourists from the United States during the coming summer if special efforts were made by the Dominion to let it be known generally in this country that Canada wants tourists to come. Possibly articles in journals and magazines, calling special atention to the delightful climate of Canada, the fishing possibilities, the scenery and other attractions would induce more than usual thought being given to that country.

"Our people who wish to be a bit more settled than during the war years 'wish to go somewhere,' and as they cannot go to Europe, or Mexico, and as South America is too far away and passports too difficult to obtain, our own western country and Canada then become more or less Mecca."

Sporting Gossip

Since the heavyweight championship of the world has returned to the possession of the white race, as represented by Jess Willard, the victor has not been challenged by a negro except for the recent noise made by Jack Johnson in Mexico, which cannot, of course, be taken seriously. Nevertheless, had such a challenge been forthcoming, the champion would undoubtedly have followed the example set by John L. Sullivan 27 years ago tomorrow, and would have refused to risk his title in a bout with a negro. It was on April 11, 1892, that John L. Sullivan established a pugilistic precedent by drawing the "color line," and refusing to cross it to accept the challenge of Peter Jackson. Later in the same year Sullivan lost his title to Jim Corbett, who the preceding year had fought a sixty-one-round draw with the big Australian black. If Jackson had not been a cripple at the time, as the result of injuries received in a fall from a buggy, he might have whipped Corbett, and he could almost certainly have defeated Sullivan.

While public opinion is against bouts between white and colored men it must be admitted by all fair-minded fans that the African race has produced some of the cleverest and brainiest ring gladiators in the history of the game. In the opinion of many experts, Jackson was the greatest of all fighting machines, and Geo. Dixon was assuredly a star among the little fellows. Joe Walcott, the welterweight champion, and Joe Gans, who held the lightweight title, rank among the best men of their respective divisions. Whatever else may be said of Jack Johnson—and there is enough to be said—he was certainly a finished boxer, and Sam Langford and Joe Jeanette were not far behind him.

The appearance of the "cullud" man in pugilism dates back to more than a century ago, when a Virginia negro named Tom Molineaux went over to England and challenged Tom Cribb, the champion. It is said that the black man knocked out Cribb, but that the white man was permitted to recover and continue to fight, and in the end the white race was saved from the ignominy of the defeat of its chosen gladiator by a son of Africa.

MUSICAL COMMENTS IN BRIEF

In the early days of church music the boy choirs were not large choruses of fifty or sixty voices as we find today. They consisted of from twelve to sixteen voices. They must have sung well to render the music that was written for them.

Although he studied music from boyhood, Dvorak did win serious public recognition until he was thirty-nine years of age. He is probably known to more people by his "Humoresque" than any other work and yet his "New World Symphony" and his "Stabat Mater" are far greater compositions.

A prominent educationalist is responsible for the assertion that while music as a conservatory subject had no place on the college curriculum, music as a means of mental training for the battle of life, deserves and [illegible] a position of equal importance and related to the other subjects studied.

Transposing instruments are those for which the music is written in one key while the instrument sounds another key. In our bands there are the following transposing instruments: D-flat piccolo, E-flat and B-flat clarinets, E-flat and B-flat saxophones E-flat and B-flat cornets or trumpets and the E-flat of F horns. The baritone, the trombone and B-flat bass are also treated as transposing instruments when reading their music in the treble or G clef notation; but when reading in the bass or F clef notation they are non-transposing, producing the actual pitch of the indicated notation.

AT THE GRAND

"Mickey," the latest Mabel Normand film, which opened at the Grand Opera House Thursday evening, is quite in keeping with the previous works of this [illegible] little actress. The picture is probably one of the best ever put on in the local theatre.

Opening in a California mining camp, one is introduced to Mickey, the be-trousered tomboy, brought up without a mother's influence, and some of the pranks she plays are most amusing.

Of course, Mickey isn't permitted to end her days at the mining camp and one soon finds her in New York with an impecuious aunt. Here, while the aunt thought her the owner of a paying gold mine, she was treated royally, but as soon as her mine was known to be a "fliver", she was turned over to the housekeeper, and put to work.

Her mine finally turns out to be "the goods" and Mickey is once more the prime favorite with the aunt and her family. She again meets Mr. Thornhill and their friendship ripens into love.

The racetrack scene is a splendid one and bring recollections of "sporting life" and "The Whip." The struggle in the deserted house is also worthy of special mention and clearly demonstrates that Miss Normand is entirely without nerves.

In the last chapter love proves triumphant and one sees Mickey and her husband boarding the train and showers of confetti, enroute for the west once more.

A SPRING TONIC GREATLY INCREASES YOUR EFFICIENCY

Lay the Foundation of Good Health Now by Building Up Your Blood and Strengthening Your Nerves.

The good old fashion of taking a tonic in the springtime, like most of the customs of our grandparents, is based upon sound common sense and good medical practice. No matter how mild the winter, it is a trying time, even in the most favored climates, for those who are not in rugged physical health. Many men, women and children go through the winter on reserve strength they have stored up during the sunny summer months, and grow increasingly pale as the spring days approach. A tonic for the blood and nerves at this time will do much for such people, by putting color in the cheeks and banishing that tired feeling that worries thousands at this season of the year.

You cannot be energetic if your blood is thin and weak, or if your nerves are frayed or shattered. You cannot compete with others if you do not get refreshing sleep at night, or if you are losing weight. You need a tonic at this time to add to your efficiency now, as well as to save you from suffering later on. And in all the realm of medicine there is no safer or better tonic than Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. These pills make new, rich, red blood, which circulates through every portion of the body, strengthening jaded nerves and run-down organs, and bringing a feeling of new strength and energy to weak, easily tired, despondent men, women and children.

CURED BILIOUS HEADACHES

Mr. D. C. McClure, Heffley Creek, B.C., says: "As a spring tonic I know of nothing else that can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Last spring I felt weak and run down and suffered a great deal from bilious headaches. I got a half dozen boxes of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and after taking them I felt like a new man. The lassitude from which I suffered had disappeared I had a better appetite, and was in every way stronger and better than before I began the use of this medicine. Almost everyone needs a tonic in the spring, and for this purpose I can strongly advise Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

NEVER FELT SO WELL

Miss Beatrice Bishop, Fendale, N.B., says: "I have never felt so well as I do since taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. When I began their use I was very much run down. I had no color, no appetite, could not go up stairs without stopping to rest on the way. I had frequent headaches and a feeling of despondency. I took Pink Pills regularly for about eight weeks and while I felt a benefit from them almost from the first, at the end of that time I was in better health than I had ever enjoyed before. I freely give you permission to publish this letter as my experience may be the means of pointing the way to new health to some other weak and run down girl."

GAINED WONDERFULLY

Mrs. Herbert Honsan, Lower Hainesville, N.B., says: "I have the very highest regard for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Before I began their use I suffered greatly and a feeling of depression and tiredness. A short treatment with the pills fully restored my health. My daughter Blanche was suffering from anaemia, and through the use of of six boxes of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills gained wonderfully in weight, strength and general health. We think so much of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills that we are never without them in the house and I consider them my best friend."

HAS A BETTER APPETITE

Mrs. M. D. MacLeod, Caledonia, P.E.I., says: "I have used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as a spring medicine with satisfactory results. Before I began their use I was subject to weak spells, but these have now disappeared. I find that my appetite is better, and I have every confidence in your pills as a blood builder.

STRONG AND WELL AGAIN

Mr. H. H. McKelvey, Orono, Ont., says: "My experience with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills has been of the most favorable kind. At the time I began their use I was so weak and run down that I could hardly go about. My stomach was also out of order and the food I took did not seem to do me a bit of good. Then Dr. Williams' Pink Pills came to my rescue, and under their use my stomach grew better, my general health improved, and I was soon as healthy and vigorous a man as I had ever been. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, with the use of Pinklets as a laxative when needed, is now our family medicine, and we would not be without them."

BUILD UP YOUR BLOOD

The purpose of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is to build up the blood. They do this one thing and they do it well. They are, for this reason, an invaluable remedy in diseases arising from bad or deficient blood, such as anaemia, rheumatism, neuralgia, pains in the back or side and the after effects of influenza or fevers. If you are suffering from any troubles due to weak, watery blood or shaky nerves, a fair use of these pills will restore you to full health and strength. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or will be sent by mail, post paid, at 50c a box or six boxes for $2.50 by The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THE HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY

Scope of Work.

To advise and assist the citizens in maintaining pleasant parks, attractive home environments and productive gardens.

As indicated by the select list of opinions presented this year every phase of horticultural work is represented in the activities of the members, from the cultivation of a window box to an expansive garden.

The annual lawn and garden competition provides an incentive to turn ideals into realities with a reward for the effort.

To aid in making city planning a success and to help along the idea that clean, tidy, cheerful surroundings are healthy.

Membership.

Open to any resident of the County of Peterborough on payment of the entry fee of One Dollar.

Options or Premiums.

Each members is entitled to one selection from the list of twenty-seven options, and also to the fall delivery of bulbs. This feature alone is splendid value

Membership Campaign.

In order to properly accomplish the work before it in this year of reconstruction and new ambitions, a membership of six hundred is necessary—600 for 1919. The spring drive is under way and every new member helps in gaining the objective.

Competitions.

Prizes will this year be awarded for the following:

1.—For lawns and gardens.

2.—For church, school and factory grounds.

3.—For flower bed kept by boy or girl of 16 years or under.

Last year it was the war garden. Now it is the peace garden and it is just as necessary because the food supply of the world is still short. With your garden you can celebrate victory in the right way and yourself enjoy fresh vegetables and good health.

Some window boxes, a flower bed, shrubs or a tidy lawn all enhance the appearance of your property and add to the "City Beautiful."

Let the Horticultural Society assist you along any of these lines.

The list of spring options will be published on Monday.

Left Behind.

"So you've been in France?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"And now you're back home with your comrades!"

"No, ma'am. I left my comrades over there."

"How did that happen?"

"I took over a shipload of mules, ma'am."

A full man and an empty pocket book often go hand in hand.

Everyone Should Drink Hot Water in the Morning

To feel your best day in and day out, to feel clean inside; no sour bile to coat your tongue and sicken your breath or dull your head; no constipation, billious attacks, sick headache, colds, rheumatism or gassy, acid stomach, you must bathe on the inside like you bathe outside. This is vastly more important, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do, says a well-known physician.

To keep these poisons and toxins well flushed from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, dring before breakfast each day, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This will cleanse, purify and freshen the entire alimentary tract, before putting more food into the stomach.

Get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from your pharmacist. It is inexpensive and almost tasteless, except for a sourish twinge which is not unpleasant. Drink phosphated hot water every morning to rid your system of these vile poisons and toxins; also to prevent their formation.

To feel like young folks feel; like you felt before your blood, nerves and muscles became saturated with an accumulation of body poisons, begin this treatment and above all, keep it up! As soap and hot water act on the skin, cleansing, sweetening and purifying, so limestone phosphate and hot water before breakfast act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels.

EDITOR'S MAIL

Editor Review:—Shall we open the dam? The floodtide of evil which is the concomitant of drink has been held in check by the O.T.A. and the Federal law and the resultant good has been such that the Premier of Ontario in his speech to the Legislature said, "I do not know of any Act or measure in this province that increased the efficiency of our people, conserved our financial strength, aided thrift and generally contributed to our fighting power, to a greater extent than the Ontario Temperance Act."

If this is a fact and I believe any man with his eyes open must admit that it is, is there any adequate reason why we should vote to have it repealed or weakened?

True, the O.T.A. was passed as a war measure and it is perfectly right and proper that in this democratic country all classes should have a voice in determining the issue, but surely sensible men and women will not vote away an aid to thrift, to efficiency, to conservation of financial strength at a time when we have the waste of a four and a half year war to make good, when we have a multitude of wounded men to look after and provide for, men who suffered in our room and stead, when it will require all the financial strength clearness of vision and firmness of purpose posisble, to build [illegible]

Let the citizens of Ontario look round upon the world at large struggling in the throes of reconstruction with its complex problems, and say whether this is a time when we want the brains of our people fuddled by liquor, their resources wasted and their efficiency impaired. Even under license it was found advisable to close the bars on election days. Why? Because drinking would have rendered the electorate less able to intelligently vote. If this was so in normals times how much more do we need to conserve the brains and energies of our people to contend with the issues before us now.

Do we want the impatience and restlessness that is inevitable before all the questions affecting capital and labor, cost of living and wages are satisfactorily settled inflamed by alcohol, all classes will need as much self-control and steadying power as they can get and prohibition if retained will be found in the reconstruction period as in war time to be the best aid to financial strength and also to that strength which is required to weld a cosmopolitan people into a strong and progressive nation.

ONTARIO GOVERNMENT TO LOOK INTO COAL PROFITS

Estimated That $1,000,000 Has Been Taken From Ontario Consumers With Value Not Given.

Hamilton, April 12—How do these figures strike you, Mr. Coal Consumer?

Estimated amount of overcharge by coal dealers to coal consumers in Ontario—$1,000,000.

Estimated overcharge by dealers in Hamilton—$20,000.

Estimated overcharge by dealers in Ottawa—$20,000.

Estimated overcharge to consumers by coal dealers, Brantford — $15,000.

Refunded to consumers by coal dealers, Winchester—$1700.

And these figures are for anthracite only.

The huge coal pile necessary for the average season in Ontario aggregates something in the neighborhood of 2,500,000 tons of anthracite. Of this amount about 40 per cent. is consumed in Toronto, or between 800,000 and 1,000,000 tons. This last winter conditions were such that Ontario did not use the average amount of fuel by reason of conservation and the mild weather. Notwithstanding these conditions, coal was not easy to obtain in many places, and prices ranged from $11 to $13.50, and in one or two instances to $14 per ton.

Ontario Govt. Inquires.

As a result of the excessive charges for coal made during the winter by dealers, an investigation is quietly proceeding under instructions from the Government in Queen's Park, Toronto. "A few days ago," said a man who is interested in the coal situation, "an officer representing the Ontario fuel controller came to Hamilton and commenced to pry into local conditions, with a result that will reveal some interesting conditions when all the facts are known."

According to rumor, there is sufficient on the files of the Dominion and Ontario fuel controllers to warrant a wide open investigation that will astonish the people as to the amount of profiteering that has been going on during the war. Get-rich-quick methods were not applied only by small dealers, but were resorted to by the wholesalers, and in this respect Montreal and Quebec are said to afford some fine specimens.

Large Refunds.

In Brantford it is more than $15,000 in overcharges have been taken from consumers, and that in the town of Winchester, in the eastern end of Ontario, $1700 has been refunded. It is expected that the refunds here will amount to not less than $20,000.

The overcharges made, it is alleged, vary according to local conditions of supply and demand, and range all the way from 25 cents to $2.25 a ton. A conservative estimate places the amount at easily $1,000,000 wrongfully taken from the people who consume coal in Ontario, and in round figures will represent about 50 cents on every ton.

50 Cents Per Ton Profit.

Under the regulations of the fuel controller the dealer is allowed a profit of 50 cents per ton and above his overhead charges. Coal in Toronto now sells for $11.50 per ton, leaving $2.66 per ton for profit and overhead charges. Just what amount of this margin is profit depends upon the business methods of the dealer and how he figures out his cost of doing business. The 50 cents per ton is understood to be an allowance per ton to cover investment, leaving $2.16 per ton to cover all other charges, office, equipment and costs incidental to delivery.

Where coal sold for $13.50 per ton there is a leeway of $4.66 per ton, and admitting that some of this $4.66 went to the railways, it is a false assumption that very long margins of profit went into the trouser pockets of dealers. No allowance was made to consumers who went to the yards and took home their own coal, which reduced the "overhead" charge of the dealers, some of whom have a unique method of figuring and keeping the records, while others again are not overburdened with records. Investigation has proceeded sufficiently far to show that in some instances in Ontario the method of figuring overhead charges has been manifestly dishonest, and included in some cases instances of "stuffing the account."

Cost of Coal.

From the time the coal leaves the cellars until it reaches the cellars of Toronto consumers there are incidental charges that add to its cost. Coal at the mines costs $6.20 per ton gross, or in car lots of long tons weighing 2,240 lbs., 240 lbs. more than the net ton. The freight rate of $2.60 per ton is charged the coal merchant to Suspension Bridge, making the total cost at that point $8.80. At this point, too, the consignment is figured on a basis of net tons, so that roughly 11 per cent of the $8.80 may be taken off, making 96 cents, reducing the cost to $7.80 a ton. To this must be added again $1, the charge to Toronto, making the total cost of the coal to the dealer f.o.b. $8.84 for every 2,000 lbs.

Water Rate Helps Dealers.

When it is understood that freight rates by water are much less than rates by rail, it must also be understood that this again increases the profits of the local dealers, as the coal is sold on the basis of the all-rail rate.

When dealers are questioned about the coal situation, they all, with one accord claim it is a losing game, and that all the time they are at it they are losing money. There is a case on record of a dealer in Ontario who failed in business because he could not make it pay. He went out of business presumably penniless. But time developed his ability to purchase Victory bonds to the amount of about $20,000 shortly afterwards.

Mining Men Own Railways.

The owners of the mines in the majority of instances are the owners of the railways. The mine owners make a profit of 70 cents a ton on the coal mined, and then must be added the freight rates to Toronto, which net the owners about $2 a ton.

The Philadelphia & Reading Co. (the holding company for the Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron Co.), and the Jersey Central, which in turn holds all the stock of the Lehigh & Wilkesbarre, the Lehigh & Western, the Delaware & Hudson, the Lehigh Coal & Navigation Co. (which owns and controls the Lehigh & New England), the Erie, and the New oYrk, Ontario & Western, control 72 per cent. of the only marketable anthracite in North America.

Miners To Ask More.

The United Mine Workers are preparing to ask for a six-hour day and six days' work a week, and if this is granted the mine owners will ask for still another increase in the price of coal. Thirty per cent. of the men working in the mines are actual miners. They do the cutting and blasting and receive $5.80 per day. Contract miners, doing the same work by the yard or ton, instead of by the day, make approximately the same wages. The remaining 70 per cent. receive from $4 to $4.50 per day. If they were employed six days a week they could live in comparative comofrt, but where they work only two days each week their weekly pay roll is far inadequate.

A GOOD MEDICINE FOR THE BABY

Nothing can equal Baby's Own Tablets as a medicine for little ones. They are a laxative, mild but thorough in action, and never fail to relieve constipation, colic, colds and simple fevers. Once a mother has used them she will use nothing else. Concerning them Mrs. Saluste Pelletier, St. Damas des Aulnaies, Que., writes:—"I always keep a box of Baby's Own Tablets in the house. They are the best medicine I know of for little ones and I would not be without them." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

WHEN YOU SEE A TESTIMONIAL

From a person you do not know, PAY NO ATTENTION TO IT. When you see a testimonial FROM PEOPLE IN YOUR OWN LOCALITY and whom you DO know, if you have any doubt, GO AND ASK THEM. THIS SHOULD CONVINCE YOU

We cannot impress too strongly upon the people of Canada that there are no Stomach and Tonic Tablets just like Dr. Norvall's. There are no tablets just as good as Dr. Norvall's. Dr. Norvall's Stomach and Tonic Tablets are in a class by themselves.

In order to convince you of this we have interviewed the druggists of the City of Peterborough, and as they are all selling patent medicines and preparations of known value, they are in a position to judge the merits of Dr. Norvall's Stomach and Tonic Tablets.

DR. NORVALL'S STOMACH AND TONIC TABLETS

Mr. E. L. Payne, Druggist, says: "Dr. Norvalls Stomach and Tonic Tablets are one of the best preparations we keep in stock, and our customers speak highly of them."

Mr. Weber, Druggist, says: "That dull, dreary headache and tired feeling will disappear if you take one or two of Dr. Norvall's Stomach and Tonic Tablets at bed-time. Try them and be convinced."

Mr. W. J. Kent, Druggist, says: "We recommend Dr. Norvall's Stomach and Tonic Tablets because we consider it our duty to recommend what will give the best results."

James Lynch, Druggist, says: "We recommend Dr. Norvall's Stomach and Tonic Tablets because we get better results from them than from any other similar preparation we keep in stock."

McDermid & Jury say: "Our customers state that Dr. Norvall's Stomach and Tonic Tablets give perfect satisfaction."

Mr. J. A. Burgess, Lakefield, states: "It is always a pleasure to recommend Dr. Norvall's Stomach and Tonic Tablets because my customers are well pleased with the results."

The Tanner Drug Company of Lakefield say: "We have sold Dr. Norvall's Stomach and Tonic Tablets for some time, and customers who have once used them will have none other in their place."

Mr. Vincent Sullivan, Druggist, says that he was surprised the number of people that insist upon having Dr. Norvall's Stomach and Tonic Tablets, and none other can take their place as a gentle laxative and building-up tonic."

We could fill a page with testimonials from individuals in this city but we consider the druggists are in a position to advise the public

Braves That Beat The Athletics Best of All World's Series Teams

According to John McGraw of the Giants, Who Ought to Know, and He Gives Figures—White Sox and Cubs Also Named as Worthy of Mention.

John McGraw, who knows a lot about the strength of world's series baseball contenders, mostly from adverse experience, was asked which of all the teams since 1905—when the first series under Nation Commission supervision was played—was the strongest. His reply:

"For effective strength in the box, ours was in 1905, for we had Mathewson and McGinnity, invincible pitchers. Otherwise the Cubs when they were winning pennants in succession or the Athletics when they were beating us in 1911, 1912 and 1913, were the best for all around strength."

As a matter of fact, the hardest hitting and second best fielding done by any world's series winner in the period specified was done by the Athletics in 1910. They beat the Cubs that year, four games to one, and in doing so made a batting average of .316 and a fielding average of .980. That is the best world's series batting average and the second best fielding average.

The best fielding average was also made by the Athletics, .985, in 1913. The two teams were much the same in make-up. Davis, Collins, Barry and Baker were the infield both years, and a great infield they were. The outfielders in 1910 were Strunk, Lord, Hartsel and Murphy; three years later they were Murphy, Oldring and Strunk. Bender and Coombs were the pitching strength in 1910, and Bender, Bush and Plank did the mound work against the Giants three years later. Schang was the backstop reliance in 1913, and Thomas and Lapp did it in 1910. Either was a powerful combination, strong in fielding, batting and pitching, but considering the exceptional batting, sharp fielding and nigh class pitching done by the 1910 team and that the Cubs, a hitherto invincible club, were beaten easily, it appears that the 1910 Athletics were the best of all the teams in the world's series. At any rate, they were on figures.

Braves Unbeatable.

That they were a powerful team in reality is a fact thoroughly established and recognized, and yet figures and individual stars to the contrary notwithstanding, I believe the Braves of 1914, managed by Geo. Stallings, for normal, if not for physical reasons, were the most effective team—the best equipped to win a world's series that ever took the field.

The Braves, when they won four straight from the Athletics, who still presented that old formidable front, batted .244 and fielded .978. They had Gowdy behind the bat, a superb pitching trio in Rudolph, Tyler and James therefrom getting much of their telling strength for a world's series; Schmidt, Evers, Maranville and Deal on the bases, and in the outfield Whitted, Mann, Connolly and Moran.

Here was real quality in the box, an infield partly class and partly not, consequently unbalanced; a man behind the bat who rose to extraordinary heights and an outfield of mediocrity. Yet there was a determination, a spirit, a fighting poise and confidence about this team, which, added to every man being keyed up to his best, made this the best of all world's series clubs as things turned out. No team before or after, to my way of thinking, with all its physical superiority, could have beaten the Braves in a world's series.

The Cubs Rank High.

The Cubs of 1906, 1907 and 1908 must always be considered with respect, the kind of team you lift your hat to. They rank high among the elect, for such top grade players as Kling, Brown, Overall, Reulbach, Pfiester, Chance Evers Tinker, Steinfeldt, Hofman, Schulte Slagle and Sheckard composed them. They hit .259 when they beat the Detroits in 1907 and fielded .964. In base running in that series they far and away excelled any other contender. They stole eighteen bases an unequaled number for the October classic. Yet they were beaten in 1906 by the White Sox, who batted below .200 and fielded around .960.

The White Sox of the 1906 were another instance of figures being deceptive. With their pitching—they had Walsh, White and Owen—and batters to deliver in a pinch and send in a few runs they needed, they were as well qualified, notwithstanding not the best team in impressive array of material, as anybody to win a world's series.

When the Giants won the series in 1905 they did it with a batting average of only .208 and a fielding percentage of .972. But they did have Mathewson and McGinnity, with Wiltse in reserve, just as the White Sox in 1906 had Walsh and White and the Braves in 1914 had Rudolph, James and Tyler.

The Athletics in 1910 and subsequent years when they were winning the series had great pitching strength too—Coombs, Plank and Bender, for instance. How they would have fared against Mathewson and McGinnity, or Rudolph, Tyler and James or Walsh and White as opposing battery strength is the purest conjecture (save that Plank and Bender couldn't carry the Athletics through in 1914). Yet the Athletics with their own pitching in 1910, the fact that they did the best hitting of anybody in world's series that year, and that against high class pitchers, were the best of world's series aggregations so far as percentages are a guide.

Best Hitting Team.

The Giants of 1905 had Bresnahan behind the bat. Therefore no team excelled from in battery strength. They had McGann, Gilbert, Dahlen and Devlin on the bases, and Browne, Donlin and Mertes in the outfield. They were capable offensively, and, though they won it, as one of the best world's series clubs. The best five, it would appear, were the Athletics of 1910, the Giants of 1905, the White Sox of 1906, the Braves of 1914 an dthe Cubs of 1907.

In 1912 the Red Sox in their memorable series with the Giants batted but .220 and fielded .958. They had Stahl, Yerkes, Wagner and Gardner in the infield. Speaker, Hooper and Lewis in the outfield, Cady and Carrigan catchers, and Wood, Collins, Hall, Bedient and O'Brien pitchers. That was a fine outfield a fine infield on the left side, good catching and ordinary pitching. The pitching hadn't the calibre to make them one of the best world's series clubs.

The White Sox in 1917 batted well. Their percentage was .274. Their fielding was .952. They had Schalk behind the bat, Faber, Cicotte, Danforth, Benz and Russell to do the pitching; Gandil, Collins, Weaver and McMullen in the field and Jackson, Felsch, Leibold and J. Collins to do the outfielding. Yet in a world's series way they were not impressive.

The Red Sox in '15, '16 and '18 played deftly and successfully, and had such effective pitchers as Leonard, Shore, Ruth and Mays to help them to victory. With those pitchers and with Hooper, Lewis, Scott and Barry back of them they would be formidable any year, but I don't consider that they demonstrated their superiority at the expense of as efficient teams as at least five other series winners have done.

WHEN WILLARD MET MORRIS

Crowd Hooted Giant Boxers for Their Slovenly Work in New York.

It was nearly a year after he had defeated Soldier Kearns before Jess Willard boxed in New York again. The big fellow had been suspended by the boxing commission because he had failed to fulfil a contract with a Buffalo club to meet One Round Davis. However, Willard finally went back to Buffalo and stopped the overrated Davis with the greatest of ease and then the boxing commission lifted his suspension so that he could meet Carl Morris in the Garden.

Willard and Morris had been bitter enemies from the start of their careers in the ring. Both were bigger than the average run of heavyweights. Morris hailed from Oklahoma, where he was looked upon as the coming champion. He was the idol of the boxing fans in that region and, when Willard showed up there and asked him for a match, Morris looked the giant over and decided at once that he would have nothing to do with such a dangerous looking person. But Willard persisted in challenging and this aroused the resentment of Morris, who feared to lose standing by refusing and yet did not care to take a chance by meeting the unknown in the ring.

Crowd Hoots Boxers.

The bout that the two giants put up will long be remembered as the most slovenly waged battle that has ever been fought in the Garden between men of any standing. It was apparent from the start that each was afraid of the other. They hugged and mauled and floundered about the ring locked in each other's arms, while the crowd hooted and groaned.

Next day the two big fellows were panned unmercifully, but as a matter of fact Willard was only partly to blame for the dismal exhibition. He was willing to fight as long as Morris remained at long range, but he could do nothing when Morris insisted upon clinching at every opportunity.

Morris, who never could hit with force employed foul tactics from the star, hugging and butting and wrestling. Every time Morris rushed in with his arms extended, reaching for a hold, Willard met him with one good right hander, but after that all hitting ceased until the referee tore them apart once more. As Morris was in no hurry to stand off where Willard could clout him again, the referee's task was a hard one.

If Morris had fought fairly and in the open, there is no doubt that Willard would have done his share But the bout proved that Willard knew absolutely nothing about infighting. He never struck a single blow all the time they were at close quarters, but merely waited passively until the referee could tear Morris away. As Morris was holding on nine-tenths of the time, naturally there was very little action.

However, the crowd did not discriminate between the two big men. Both were held equally guilty and they were roasted so severely that Willard, who had a thinner skin than Morris, never did box again in New York until years later after he had won the championship from Jack Johnson.

An exchange says a good cabbage and a bad siner both have hard hearts. It doesn't say what kind of heart the good sinner has.

CITY LEAGUE BASEBALL IS ORGANIZED

At a meeting of those interested in baseball held at the Empress Hotel on Thursday, City Baseball League was organized with five teams entered and the following officers elected:

Hon. President—Mayor Duncan.
President—Gordon Matthews.
Vice-president—Father O'Gorman.
Secretary, treasurer — Horace Walkey.

The Executive Committee will be made up of representatives appointed from the various clubs entered, which are: G.W.V.A., Matthews-Blackwell, De Laval, Lake View Club and Orientals.

Mr. Ward Patterson, president of the league last year, resigned and the Riversides, last year's champions withdrew from the running this season.

Messrs. Dan McCabe and Ward Patterson were appointed representatives to the O.B.A.A. from the Peterborough City League.

A meeting of the representatives from the various teams entered and the executive of the league as appearing above will be held on April 23rd to draw up the schedule for the season and to formulate plans in connection with the year's program.

Mr. Ward Patterson, speaking in connection with the Central Ontario League last night, expressed the opinion that it was a fine thing for the city players that Peterborough was represented in that league as it would broaden their methods of play and give them a wider experience than could be obtained if they did not leave the confines of the city to play ball. He was sure that would work for efficiency and urged that the City League work in conjunction with the Central Ontario League.

A Hot Spot Chalmers Knows Neither Altitude Nor Weather

ANYONE who has motored much knows how a change of altitude—even of 600 feet—affects the average car. And when the weather changes, even if you never leave your home town, what a terrible affair it is to get your motor "running right."

A Hot Spot Chalmers knows neither altitude nor weather. For the Hot Spot device is proof against both.

No matter what the day, no matter where you are on the map, the Hot Spot carburizes the gas into a "dry" vapor from which all the power is wrung with amazing ease.

It is throbless, frictionless power, and on a cold day the engine runs warm in an instant or on a hot day runs cold consistently.

For "pulverizing" gas nothing yet has equalled the Chalmers Hot Spot and for racing it into the cylinders (a trick that is highly important), nothing has ever been made to approach the Ram's-Horn.

Either one of these two magnificent devices are worth an hour of any man's time. Both of them provide you a mental feast on modern engineering that you'll long remember.

Come see them. They've made the Chalmers one of the few great cars of the world.

TWILIGHT MUSICAL

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. H. King, assisted by Miss Edna Stewart will give a Twilight Musical in Trinity Methodist Church, Good Friday afternoon, from 4 to 6 o'clock. Under the auspices of the Young Ladies' Mission Circle. Watch for further announcement.

FAMOUS READER DELIGHTS AUDIENCE AT ST. PAUL'S

Jessie Alexander Assisted in Entertainment by Mrs. Maurice Park, Miss Laura Logan and Mr. Douglas Carlisle.

Peterborough's citizens always turn out in large numbers to attend any concert in which Jessie Alexander of Toronto, for many years one of Canada's outstanding elocutionists, is billed to take part. Last night was no exception, the auditorium of St. Paul's church being filled on the occasion of a concert given by the Fraser Mission Band of the church. Jessie Alexander Roberts who had the leading role, was ably assisted by some of the best of Peterborough's musical talent, namely, Miss Laura Logan, Mrs. Maurice Park and Mr. Douglas Carlisle.

The first number was a violin solo by Miss Laura Logan, Peterborough's premier violinist, which was exceptionally well rendered. Miss Logan was accompanied on the piano by her mother, Mrs. W. A. Logan.

Jessie Alexander Roberts' first recitation was "In Flander's Fields," by the late Lieut.-Col. John McRae, a poem which this noted reader believes may become the greatest national poem ever written by a Canadian. Mrs. Roberts as a response to the challenge, expressed in the poem recited "A Reply to In Flander's Fields," written by . W. Lidyard, an American. The concluding recitation in this first section of the program was "Mandy on Mother's Day," which reading was one of the best of the evening. The reader responded to insistant applause with a humorous encore which took well with the audience.

During the first intermission, Mrs. Maurice Park sang a solo in fine voice and was heartily encored. Miss Rannie accompanied in a capable and sympathetic manner.

The next reading was "A visit to the Country," from the pen of Mr. J. R. Bell, the author of "Wee MacGregor." This selection proved as popular with the audience as "Wee MacGregor" to the literary world. As an encore, Miss Alexander replied with "There's Something in the British After All," at the time when the great test came.

A dramatic sketch, another production of Mr. J. R. Bell, was the gem of the evening. It was entitled "In Belgium," and was based on real occurrences during the war. It showed how a brave Belian girl, urged and aided by her fiance, successfully outwitteh a German officer anh blew up an important brirge wnich the Germans were using.,The elocutionist replied to the encore with a humorous story of an Irishman's explanation of the ending of the Japan-Russia war. This was an explanation that did not explain.

A vocal solo by Mr. Douglas Carlisle was rendered in an able manner and merrited the encore it received. Miss Rannie again acted as accompanist.

The concluding number was composed of two selections. The first was the "Land of Beginning Again." and expressed a wish which all of us have uttered at some time or other, to be able to begin things over anew. In her second selection Mrs. Roberts recalled a number of humorous incidents noted during the registration in Toronto last June, and which kept the audience in a steady ripple of laughter.

Mrs. Roberts' selections showed how versatile is her art and added to deservedly high reputation as an elocutionist. The large audience dispersed, feeling that the evening had been enjoyable and profitably spent.

"IT HAS NO EQUAL" SAYS ED. HOPPER

NO MEDICINE DID HIM ANY GOOD TILL HE TOOK TANLAC.

"Tanlac has convinced me that it has no equal for people in the condition I was in, for it has made me feel like a different person," said Edward Hooper, of 2062 St. Clair ave., Toronto, Ont.

"For four years," he continued, "I suffered from an awful case of stomach trouble. My appetite failed, and the little I forced down hurt me. I felt like there was a lump right in the pit of my stomach, and was constantly belching up sour, undigested food. I would get so dizzy that I would almost fall. I had dull headaches, and felt unfit for work. I felt I was getting worse, and don't believe I could have kept up much longer.

"I have taken four bottles of Tanlac now, and am feeling fine. My appetite is great, and I haven't been troubled with indigestion or gas since I started taking Tanlac. All that bloated feeling is gone, the dizziness has left me, and I actually feel like a different person."

Tanlac is sold in Peterboro by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield, by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by C. Pringle & Son.

BIG ADDITION TO CRESSMAN STORE

FIRM WILL MAKE FOUR STORY EXTENSION TO PRESENT PREMISES.

There is an excellent proof of faith in the development of Peterborough shown in the decision of the Cressman Company to extend their business in the city.

The excavation work has commenced for an extension of the present building which will be four stories in height—not including the basement—and will be situated at the rear of the gents' clothing and Redfern stores. This will make it possible to use the entire fourth floor of the present building and will necessitate the installation of an electric elevator.

The new extension will provide for the enlarging of several of the departments at present existing and will provide space for the addition to the business of several new departments.

When the wing is completed the total floor space of the Cressman Company's store will be approximately 37,000 square feet.

A cordial invitation is extended to men of all ages to come and hear Doctor Bates. There will be good music at all these services.

MONTREAL PAPERS DISCUSS VOTE ON TEMPERANCE ISSUE

Gazette Believes That Other Provinces Will Declare in Favor of Light Beer and Wine.

Montreal, April 12.—Discussing the result of the referendum in Quebec yesterday, by which it was decided to sell light wines, cider and beer and abolish "hard stuff" after May 1, The Gazette says:

"The vote yesterday was sweepingly in favor of free sale of light beer, cider and wines.

"People had become wearied of restrictions imposed on them in the name of war measures, which they did not think necessary, and which no country outside of America considered necessary. The feeling was created also that prohibition of beverages would be followed by prohibition of other things unless a check was put on the assertive minority which has influenced Governments and Legislatures to take up the dry's cause.

"Ontario is to hold a plebiscite on a wider series of questions than was presented to the Quebec voters, and other Provinces may take similar action. It may not be said that what Quebec has done will have influence elsewhere. The conditions that created Quebec opinion are even more marked elsewhere than they were here, and the presumption is they will have like effect.

Voted for Moderation

The Star says: "The so-called liquor interests' will be foolish in the extreme if they misunderstand or misinterpret the verdict of yesterday. Quebec has not voted in favor of hard stuff and the more clearly the anti-prohibition element realizes this the better for it. Quebec has voted for an experiment in moderation and the eyes of the whole of the North American continent, or of the whole world, for that matter will be turned Quebecwards to see how that experiment works out.

"The people of Quebec have voted as they did because the majority believe that in the beer and wine plan there may be found a reasonable compromise between the existing system and total prohibition. They have not so voted in order to give a selected few a profitable privilege of playing with the law. To put it very briefly, liquor in the modified form of beer and wine is getting what may very well be its last trial on this continent."

GIVEN WELCOME TO FUTURE HOME

Mr. and Mrs. John Allan have returned from Brantford where on Thursday evening they, with Rev. W. H. Langton, were tendered a reception by the congregation of the First Baptist church, which has secured the services of Mr. Allan as organist and choir leader. Mr. Allan will officiate for the last time at St. Paul's church tomorrow. Of the reception the Brantford Expositor says:

First Baptist church welcomed its new pastor, Rev. W. H. Langton, at an excellent supper and entertainment given last night in the auditorium. The reception also did honor to Mrs. Langton and to Mr. and Mrs. John Allan.

The ladies of the church served supper from 6.30 to 7.30, when about 400 members of the congregation partook of their hospitality.

Later in the auditorium Mr. Allan gave a very much enjoyed organ recital, giving evidence of his ability. The program of the evening was given in the basement, where Mr. Joel Dawson presided. The pastors of the Baptist churches gave short addresses in turn, Rev. Robert White of Park Baptist, Rev. Mr. Fromow of Calvary, Rev. Andrew Smith of Immanuel, Rev. J. H. Slimon of Shenstone, and Rev. Albert Carr of Riverdale. Mr. Joseph Foyle was present from Paris Baptist church, and Dr Stanley represented the Park Baptist congregation.

Musical numbers were interspersed with speeches, and included the following: Violin solo, Mrs. Fromow; solos, Miss Powell and Mr. John Halrod; Miss Edmondson, a patriotic reading.

Mr. Dawson introduced the pastor, Mr. Langton, and Mrs. Langton and both made very gracious responses.

Mr. and Mrs. Allan were presented by Mr. Arthur Chrysler, and both Mr. and Mrs. Allan made suitable replies.

Mr. G. S. Matthews spoke on the excellent work of the choir in the past, and remarked on what an important part of any worship the music given was.

The gathering sang the Doxology before dispersing.

FORMER PETERBORO WOMAN DID NOT MURDER HUSBAND

Mrs. Annie Auster Acquitted on Grounds of Insanity.

Mrs. Annie Auster, a former resident of Peterborough, was in the criminal court at Kenosha, Wisconsin, on Saturday, acquitted of the charge of murdering her husband, Harry Auster, after a lengthy trial at which two witnesses from this city testified in connection with matters relating to the life of the women while living in Peterborough.

In the year 1909 Harry Auster, who was then living with his wife and five children at the corner of Aylmer and McDonnel streets left the city mysteriously leaving a note upon which he announced his intention of committing suicide.

Time went on and the wife and family who were in poor circumstances continued to live here. Finally a warrant to seize the household property was issued at the request of one of the creditors and Constable Archie Moore was entrusted with the task of executing it.

Going to the Auster home one night he found the women and her five children in a room of the house with four gas jets turned on and the air full of the poison. They were in the first stages of asphixiation and but for the intervention of Constables Moore, Meagher and Meharry, the plan of the woman to end her troubles would have succeeded.

After this the Auster family left Peterborough. The woman feeling that her husbands intention to commit suicide had been but a transient desire or a hoax to escape from the burden of supporting his family, went to the old country where his parents resided and found that the husband was indeed alive and residing in London, Ontario.

After following him to that city a reconciliation took place and the family removed to Chicago where Auster opened up a businss which he conducted for some time.

Again becoming tired of the responsibilities devolving upon the head of a family of such proportions as had blessed his fireside he once more slipped away from his wife and left her to take up the chase again.

Next she found him living with another woman in Kenosha, Wis., a city boasting a population of 40,000 and situated not far distant from Chicago.

Mrs. Auster moved her family to Kenosha and lived in the same city as her faithless husband from that time forward. Time went on and Auster began interfering with his wife. One night he appeared at her house and demanded money from her. That was the end of a drama which had its beginning in Peterborough, as Mrs. Auster seized a revolver and shot her husband in the door way of her home.

Charged with the killing of her husband the woman appeared in court with Toney Baker, brother of Crown Attorney Baker of New York as her counsel.

For what was in all probability the first time in the history of the American criminal courts bail was given in her case and she was allowed her freedom upon furnishing bonds to the extent of $10,000.

Counsel for the defense claimed that his client was insane and consequently was not responsible for the crime of shooting her husband. To establish his contention County Constable Archie Moore and Mr. A. Low, of this city were summonsed to appear as witness and testify as to the suicidal tendencies displayed by the woman while a resident of Peterborough. They returned from Kenosha on Friday night and the next day were informed by wire that Mrs. Auster had been acquitted upon the grounds that she was insane at the time the shooting took place.

Saskatoon G.W.V.A. branch decided to ask the Government to abandon the scheme of land settlement and pay instead a settled amount to the returned men.

HUNS TO PAY FIFTY BILLIONS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, April 14.—As a result of the bye-election at Hull, Premier Lloyd George, according to the Echo de Paris, has persuaded the Council of Four to completely revamp the financial plan to be incorporated in the treaty of peace. Instead of the payment of five billion dollars on account and annual payments to be fixed by commission, it has been decided to fix at once the amount which Germany will have to pay within fifty years. It is indicated by the newspaper that the figure of fifty billion dollars has been agreed upon, which includes all war damages as well as the cost of pensions. The first instalment of five billion dollars must be paid within eighteen months, the newspaper declares.

Veterans Are Not Strike Breakers

RETURNED MEN ANNOUNCE POLICY WITH REGARD TO LABOR DISPUTES.

Toronto, April 14. — Developments in the strike of the employes of the Canadian Express Company, who have walked out in practically every city and town in the Dominion where the Canadian Express Company is operating are breaking hourly. The latest stage was reached at a late hour Saturday when an official statement announced that a deputation consisting of returned soldiers, who are out of work through the strike, will call upon the G.W.V.A. and ask that body to agree not to send or countenance the employment of returned soldiers as strike-breakers.

Immediately this information came to hand, Provincial Secretary Wm. Turley, of the G.W.V.A., made the following statement:

"The G.W.V.A. are neither strikemakers nor strike-breakers. We are not handling any question of employment. All requests we receive from men seeking employment or from employers seeking help we turn over to the Ontario government labor bureau for them to deal with. The only time we could offer any assistance would be in the case of great emergency where such assistance would be required in the interest of the city, province or Dominion. We would then be willing to help maintain order and keep down disturbances, but we would not act as strike-breakers."

Bolshevik Plan Big Spring Drive

NEW ARMIES ARE BEING ORGANIZED AND MOVED TO FRONT.

Washington, April 12—Extensive preparation by the Bolsheviki Government of Russia for a big military offensive this spring were described in official despatches here based upon a summary of information reaching the Scandinavian countries.

The Bolsheviki were said to be getting ready for an offensive on the Murman front, as soon as weather permitted and to be strengtnening the forces already facing the allies in the Archangel region.

Troops Movements

Suspension of railway transportation in Russia was declared to be dee not merely to economic causes, but also to permit large troop movements. Extraordinary measures also are being taken in the gun and ammunition factories to increase the output, men refusing to work being threatened with loss of food or even death.

In Western Russia whole new armies are being organized, it was said, many former war prisoners being mobilized along with new detachments. Bolsheviki forces were said to be suffering heavy losses in dead and wounded in evacuating northern Lithunia despite their numerical superiority. Mutinies were reported to be frequent.

JAMES CROUTER KILLED IN TORONTO BRICK YARD

Was Brother of Fireman George Crouter and Former Resident of This City.

James Crouter, 522 Dundas street east, a brother of Fireman George Crouter, of Peterborough, was instantly killed at the Sun Brick Works, Don Valley, Saturday afternoon, when a large mass of clay broke away from the cliff above him and alighted on his head, fracturing his skull. Other workmen, who saw the accident, went to his assistance, but found him dead. The body was removed to the Morgue, where an inquest will be held.

A sad feature of the tragedy lies in the fact that Mr. Crouter's son is expected home this week from overseas. The man had been in the employ of the company but a few hours when the accident happened. Crouter was 48 years of age. The funeral will take place to Norway cemetery on Tuesday and will be held under the auspices of the Salvation Army.

NEW ZEALAND FOR PROHIBITION

ONLY ONE CITY HAS GIVEN MAJORITY AGAINST THE ENACTMENT

Vancouver, B. C., April 14. — A special cable from Sydney, Australia, to the Vancouver World says:

Wellington is the only big city in New Zealand where the continuance of the present saloon system received endorsation at the hands of the electors on Thursday, all other cities going strongly in favor of prohibition.

With the home vote all counted, the vote stands: For prohibition, 238,749; against, 226,133.

There are still about 50,000 votes to be collected.

Ottawa, April 14.—At a largely attended and representative meeting, held in the Council chamber at the city hall, of the women of Ottawa, it was unanimously decided to forward a resolution to the Dominion Government asking that the sale and manufacture of oleomargarine, be permitted to continue in Canada. Mrs. Adam Shortt related the circumstances under which oleomargarine was first permitted to be sold and manufactured and the great difficulties the people had in having the measure adopted.

TERMS IMPOSED UPON GERMANY

TO PAY FIVE BILLIONS CASH AND ISSUE BONDS FOR BALANCE

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Paris, April 14.—Germany, under the peace treaty, must pay five billion dollars in cash or the equivalent in commodities before May 1, 1921. She must also issue immediately to the allied and associated governments twenty billion dollars of interest-bearing bonds. The interest on the bonds until 1926 will be either two or three per cent. and after that date five per cent., according to the present plan. The bonds will be payable in instalments during a period of fifteen years. They will probably be kept in the control of the central commission of the allied and associated governments so that they shall not be marketable in quantities sufficient to break the price.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Cairo, April 14.—In an official statement issued today Gen. Allenby says that quiet has prevailed throughout Egypt since Friday. The attempt on Thursday to tamper with a railway resulted in five arrests, while attempts to interfere with telegraphic communication resulted in the surrounding of the village of Beni Semit, three days being allowed for the production of the guilty persons. On Friday two rioters were killed and one wounded. Four officers and fifteen men have been killed through attacks on [illegible].

FURTHER ISSUES SOON SETTLED

WASHINGTON RECEIVES ADVICES AS TO SITUATION AT PARIS CONFERENCE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Washington, April 14.—Continued progress at the Peace Conference was reported today in despatches to the White House from Paris. The intimation was conveyed that all important questions still at issue would soon be cleared up. White House advices add nothing to the information in the press despatches regarding the adoption of the amendment to the covenant of the League of Nations.

DOMINION'S MEN NOW TALK STRIKE

RUMOR SAYS THEY WILL ASK FOR EIGHT HOUR DAY

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Montreal, April 14.—The Canadian Express Company, whose employes went on strike last week, reported this morning that nearly all trains are fully manned. Advices at the head offices warranted the statement that the service will be normal in a few days. It is now stated that the Dominion Express employes may strike to bring about an eight-hour day.

GREAT POWERS ASSUME TASK OF PRESERVING THE PEACE

LONDON PAPERS NOT PLEASED

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Arpil 14.—The summary of the amended covenant of the League of Nations evokes no enthusiasm in the London morning papers, and it is declared by some commentators to be less satisfactory than the first draft. The Chronicle fixed certain points which it thinks have made the new draft distinctly and perhaps decisively inferior to the old.

The Daily News, which is a warm champion of the principle of the League, sees danger in some of the provisions. The Daily Herald says the summary does not indicate much improvement on the original draft. It declares that, from a democratic viewpoint, "The League is still an alliance of states and not a union of the peoples."

MIXED BEER AND LEMON EXTRACT

DRINKING THIS COMPOUND LANDED YOUNG MAN IN POLICE COURT.

Charged with having been taken into custody in an intoxicated condition on Simcoe street on Saturday night, a young man of this city pleaded guilty to the accusation in police court this morning and was fined $10 and $4.10 costs. ....

According to his story the prisoner had become drunk as a result of drinking two per cent. beer mixed with extract of lemon, having purchased two bottles of the latter in grocery stores on Charlotte street.

He stated that having bought a bottle of two per cent. beer in a local hotel, he purchased a ten-cent bottle of lemon extract in a grocery store and mixed it with the beer. After drinking this concoction himself, he bought another thirty-cent bottle of the lemon extract and drank it pure. According to the young man's story, it produced all the effects to be expected from imbibing too freely of real old-fashioned whiskey.

Magistrate Dumble gave the young man a lecture upon the foolishness of making such experiments. He expressed surprise that he had not been afraid of poisoning himself by drinking such a vile mixture.

It appears from the statement of Sergt. Reid, who conducted the examination of the prisoner, that a man, in order to buy lemon or any other flavoring extract in which one of the chief ingredients is alcohol, must sign for it in the same manner as the purchaser of poison is required to sign in a drug store.

TROTZKY ADMITS DEFEAT IN EAST

WIRELESS MESSAGE FROM MOSCOW PICKED UP AT LONDON

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, April 14.—Leon Trotsky admits defeat on the eastern front, in a wireless message from Moscow, picked up here. The message reads: "All our efforts must be directed to the eastern front, which is the only front upon which we have suffered defeat. We must send old and experienced troops to that quarter. It is absolutely necessary for us to capture Ekatterinburg, Perms and Ufa quarters."

The Legislature expects to prorogue on Thursday.

JAPAN'S REQUEST IS TURNED DOWN

LEAGUE OF NATIONS' COMMISSION REFUSED TO INDORSE RACIAL EQUALITY

Paris, April 14.—The League of Nations commission has rejected the Japanese amendment on racial equality, according to an authoritative statement issued last night. The Japanese delegation proposed an amendment to the preamble of the covenant as follows: To insert after the words "prescription of open, just and honorable relations between nations," an additional clause to read: "By the endorsement of the principle of equality of nations and just treatment of their nationals."

The commission was impressed by the justice of the Japanese claim and by the spirit in which it was presented. Various members of the commission, however, felt that they could not vote for its specific inclusion in the covenant. Therefore, the commission was unable to give to the amendment that unanimous approval which was necessary for its adoption.

ANTI-TITLE BILL HAS CALL TODAY

MEMBERS ARE LEAVING FOR HOME AND VOTE AT PRESENT UNLIKELY

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, April 14.—In anticipation of the early signing of the peace treaty, the Government is taking steps to continue in force as long as is considered necessary certain orders in council passed under the War Measures Act. Hon. Arthur Meighen has given notice of an Act to extend the operation of such orders and regulations. It is private members' day in the House today with W. F. Nickle's resolution calling for the abolition of titles first on the order paper. Owing to the absence of members, it is not likely that Mr. Nickle's motion will be pressed to a vote today.

HUNS TO DISCUSS TERMS OF PEACE

BUT DEBATE ON SUBJECT IS LIMITED TO TWO WEEKS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, April 14.—The indications are that the Germans will be given an opportunity to discuss peace terms before the conference, but that no extended discussion will be permitted, two weeks being suggested as the outside limit for the sessions to be held at Versailles. The chief question as regards the peace terms remaining to be settled, now that the Sarr Valley and reparations problems have been disposed of in virtually all of their details, is that of the Rhine frontiers. The Council of Four is likely mainly to occupy itself with this question during the present week.

Covenant of the League of Nations is Given to the Public.

Paris, April 14.—An official summary of the revised covenant of the League of Nations issued last night makes specific mention of the Monroe doctrine with respect to its bearing on the future activities of the League. It says:

"The covenant does not affect the validity of international engagements, such as treaties of arbitration or regional understandings like the Monroe doctrine, for securing the maintenance of peace."

The League, says the statement, will include all belligerent and neutral States named in a document annexed to the covenant, and "in the future any self-governing country whose admission is approved by two-thirds of the States already members of the League."

Providing it has kept its obligations, a State may withdraw from the League on giving two years' notice, and States which signify their dissent from amendments approved by all the States on the Council and a majority of those in the assembly are not bound by them, but, in such case, cease to be members of the League.

Mandatories for the German colonies and the territories of the Ottoman Empire are provided. These colonies and territories are to be administered by States willing to be mandatories of the League, which will exercise general supervision.

Summary of Covenant.

The following official summary of the covenant of the League of Nations was issued this afternoon:

"(1) The League of Nations is founded in order to promote international co-operation and to secure peace. The League will include: (a) The belligerent States named in a document annexed to the covenant; (b) all the neutral States so named, and (c) in the future any self-government country whose admission is approved by two-thirds of the States already members of the League. A State may withdraw fro mthe League, providing it has kept its obligations to date, on giving two years' notice.

Assembly and Council.

"(2) The League will act through an Assembly comprising not more than three representatives of each of the member States, each State having only one vote, and a Council compraing, for the present, one representative of each of the five great powers and each of four other powers as selected from time to time by the Assembly.

"The number of powers of each class represented on the Council may be increased by the unanimous consent of the Council, and a majority of the assembly. Other powers have the right to sit as members of the Council during the decision of matters in which they are especially interested.

States Have Only One Vote.

"In the Council, as in the Assembly, each State will have only one vote. Both these bodies are to meet at stated intervals (the Council at least once a year), and at other times if required; both can deal with any matter that is of international interest or that threatens the peace of the world; the decision of both must be unanimous, except in certain specified cases, matters of procedure, for instance, being decided by a majority vote.

"The League will have a permanent Secretariat, under a Secretary-General. The Secretariat and all other bodies under the League may include women, equally with men. A permanent court of international justice and various permanent commissions and bureaus are also to be established.

Undertakings of Members.

THE CONSCIENTIOUS OBJECTOR.

GOVERNMENTS, like individuals, learn by experience. The Canadian Government by this time has realized that it was a mistake to admit into Canada foreigners who were guaranteed exemption from military service in the event of war, no matter how desirable such foreigners might have been as citizens in other respects. It is hardly fair to force the native-born Canadian to fight for the defence of his nation while the alien is left at home in security to eat and drink, marry and give in marriage, as though nothing unusual was in progress.

But if a mistake has been made it can easily be remedied. No foreigner should in the future be admitted to Canada on any such terms. Those already here could be required to waive the exemption granted them or leave the country. The sense of Canadian justice, which is a human and praiseworthy characteristic, must not be outraged.

The despatches say that the veterans of the West propose to picket the American border in order to prevent the entry of foreigners who have religious scruples against military service. No man can make a desirable citizen for Canada unless he is willing to assume all the duties and responsibilities of citizenship. The alien must consent to abandon all his native national characteristics if the people of Canada are ever to be blended into a harmonious whole with one flag and one purpose.

It is not likely that the drastic action proposed by the veterans of the West will ever be necessary. Prompt action on the part of the Government will in all likelihood not be lacking, nor will the lessons on immigration taught by the experiences of the past four years be lost upon the statesmen of the future.

LITTLE CANADIANISM.

IT IS LITTLE CANADIANISM on the part of any newspaper to belittle the nation in order to glorify a political party or to minimize the part this country played in the war, for no other object than to decry for political purposes the government that handled the helm of state while that conflict was in progress. It is little Canadianism for any newspaper to represent Canadian representatives at Paris as so many camp followers, so many outcasts holding seats on the doorstep or watching the proceedings of the peace Conference through the windows of the council hall.

Canada has duly accredited representatives at that Conference. They are there in the interests of the Canadian people, not as mere pleasure seekers or interlopers. They are consulted at every stage of the procedure, and no decisive action is taken until they have been given an opportunity to express their views. Premier Borden has been entrusted with delicate and important tasks in connection with the making of peace. When the treaty of peace is finally signed the signatures of four Canadian ministers will be attached to it. And yet some copperhead journals, which cannot see beyond the aggrandizement of a party, gravely assert that the Canadian ministers have no business in Europe today, that their presence is neither desired nor required, that they are merely so many hangers-on looking for cheap notoriety by thrusting themselves into the limelight.

Politics can sink to no lower level than this. The President of the United States has broken through all precedents by making two trips to Europe to take part in the Conference. What the United States did in the war is less by all proportion than the sacrifices made by Canada. The very fact that his country is, unlike its neighbor to the south, a part of the British Empire, with its future woven into that of Europe, is alone sufficient justification for the active interest Canadian ministers are taking in the arrangements now in progress to prevent a repetition of the tragedy of the past four years.

THE STUDY OF LANGUAGE.

OVER IN THE UNITED STATES the leading educationists are insisting that in that country only one language [illegible] language that everyone who speaks it believes will eventually become universal. Right here it is not hard to forecast the frustration of one of Mr. Henri Bourassa's cherished ambitions. If there is to be only one language on the North American continent, what becomes of his spasmodic agitation for annexation to the United States?

In all conscience, the use of one language is sufficient, seeing that acquisition of a working knowledge of the one we write and speak is a matter of years and that the further the study of it is pursued the more ramifications does it unfold. The public schools and Collegiate Institutes devote considerable of their time to the teaching of English, and the same work is carried on in the institutions of higher learning, and yet there is a chance for improvement. Of course, there are men who boast that the English language holds for them no hidden mysteries, but there are men, [illegible] understand quite thoroughly equine and feminine nature. If they really believe anything of the kind they are simply deceiving themselves and are not raising their standing in the eyes of those who have devoted time to the study of any of these subjects.

The English language is full of traps and pitfalls that the grammar makers have constructed. There has been a sad lack of uniformity in the teaching of this branch ever since the school system of Ontario was first devised. No sooner was one style of grammatical procedure established than some other theorist sprung up with an entirely new set of rules, and those students who were ambitious to be up to date found it necessary to master another system entirely, being placed in the same position as the geography or history expert after a long war.

The fact that things change does not imply that they always improve. English grammars today are no safer or clearer guides than they were a generation ago. The same vexations permeate the subject. There are more agonies than ever over the sequences of tenses, more disputes over what constitutes a subjective mood, or when a collective noun requires a verb in the singular or plural. The integrity of the infinitive word is guarded more jealously than ever. Sometimes an unfortunate writer splits one of these inventions in his haste, or it may be because he knows not otherwise, and among the literary aristocracy the cry goes up that he has committed a capital offence against the mother tongue.

At least three times within the memory of the living there have been official changes in the spelling of such words as "honor" and "neighbor." Sometimes the "u" is orthodox, at other times it is left out. All depends upon the individual views of the person who may be at the helm at the time guiding the educational bark. In some circles of imperial supersensitiveness the omission of the "u" is regarded as nothing short of rank treason.

How many boys and girls who leave the public and even the high schools are able to speak or write passable English? Any deficiency in this regard is due to the complexity of the system and not to any lack of information in the teachers themselves. But there is a rift in the education cloud, a gleam of hope in the future. Minister of Education Cody is to revolutionize the teaching of language. There is to be less grammar and more hard-headed common sense used in the schools of Ontario. There will be less sentimental frills, so that eventually even the person of ordinary attainments will be able to write an ordinary letter without the dread of giving grammatical offence.

But recent years have brought rational changes in the use of English language. It is used now more for the expression of ideas than as a chariot upon which the pedantic can ride to glory. The semaphore orator, the man who rent the atmosphere with a brave array of many-storeyed words, is considerable of a rarity. Sometimes, however, he is tolerated as an anachronism, interesting chiefly as an archaeological specimen. What the people of the present day want of an orator on platform, political or otherwise, or in the pulpit, is a man who can clearly state a fact so that his discourse is followed without the risk of a headache or nervous prostration. Happy is the public speaker who, having something to say, says it without a windstorm of words, and, having said it, desists.

The same clarity of expression is demanded of the present day writer. The man who has a case does not need to camouflage his ideas under an imposing superstructure of words. It is only the writer whose case is weak or who is suffering from a paucity of information who relies on mere verbal show. The belle pictured by Goldsmith borrows nothing from art until her personal charms begin to fail.

Why should it be regarded in some circles as a mortal offence to suggest a rational simplification of the spelling of some words in common use? Or why so regard the occasional invention of a word or to hail with derision the arrival of a verbal stranger not listed in the standard lexicon? The man who invents a machine to save labor is hailed as a genius. The individual who enriches the language is surely entitled to some such consideration.

SCHOOL AFFAIRS IN ONTARIO

Winter is over and the end of the long school session is within sight.

The teacher in the average school has enjoyed his work, but has noticed several things about the school and equipment that could easily be improved upon.

Maps that would show Europe as it was divided before the war are perhaps, torn and at any rate out of date. It is desirable that the pupils should have in their minds a firmly fixed vision of the Europe of the 19th century and the first [illegible] of the twentieth. They need this when they come to read advanced history, also, to speak intelligently on world politics. After the map of Europe is re-made they must know present conditions.

The old stove that has done service for ten long winters is cracked and dangerous. It may fall to pieces any day and burn the school house down. Besides there is the danger to the teacher and the pupils.

Between snowballs and baseballs a few window panes have been broken and have been stuffed with rags or pasted over temporarily.

The hinges on some of the old fashioned desks have been broken and the ink wells are gone from the improved, second hand desks that were put in two years ago when some fresh pupils arrived and a new type of desk was advised.

The trustees have not called as often as they should to see how things were going; only one made any comment on the conditions in the school that required the attention of the property committee. All seemed well pleased with the conduct of the school and the progress of the children.

Parents have visited the school more frequently than usual and the most common comment heard — in fact it was unanimous — was that the old desks made the children round shouldered and the new ones were such an improvement that they thought the 40-year-old desks and seats should be sent to the wood shed for next year's kindling.

If the parents will only talk such things over at the Institute meetings which are held by both men and women in many parts of the country something will be done during the summer holidays. Now is the time to investigate conditions in the schools so that building operations, repairs or new equipment may be ordered in good time and completed or installed in proper condition before Sept. 1. which will soon be here.

Consolidated Schools

The question of consolidated schools is one of great interest and importance is most rural sections of the Dominion. The educational departments of all the provinces are studying the subject and welcome any movement or suggestion that tends to relieve the difficult situation existing in many communities, owing to scattered home or small juvenile population.

Wherever the experiment has been tried experience has bumped against theory, sometimes with disastrous [illegible]

Transportation seems to present the greatest obstacle and teachers with the all-round training and executive ability necessary to exercise control are not always available. At least the authorities cannot always tell which of a dozen excellent masters would best fit into this particular job. When one fails to measure up it hurts the system.

If there is one thing more than another that has prejudiced the case of the consolidated school it is the plan adopted in certain districts of starting a big van on a round of eight or ten miles to pick up the children within a large area, starting at 7 o'clock. An hour and a half riding in a covered van twice a day in cold or rain or dust or under a hot sun is no pleasure trip even for juveniles. A twenty minute ride night and morning is not too bad. It would cover the ground that it would take a child an hour to walk, which is rather far for most of them.

Ontario Legislation

Ontario is taking the subject up with a new purpose. Hon. Dr. Cody being of the opinion that there are good points about consolidated schools that should be taken advantage of. The Legislature consequently has before it a bill to permit the consolidation of schools in Ontario under certain conditions. If this Bill becomes law it will not be coercive in any respect. Local autonomy will be granted to consolidated school sections, although all consolidations are subject to approval by the Minister of Education, who will thus be able to hear complaints that may arise before giving approval.

When the supplementary estimates were passed Hon. Mr. Ferguson explained that $100,000 was being voted for grants to consolidated schools. Part of the $100,000, the Minister said, would be used to pay for conveyances, and part of it would be used to increase the grants to the schools, as well as paying for agricultural teachers.

TO-DAY'S STORY

"I heard that Mrs. Gibbs is going to leave home," was the spicy bit of gossip with which Mrs. Parlin met her husband after he had parked his little automobile in the back yard.

"No!" gasped Parlin, dramatically.

"Yes!" came back his wife. "Until Gibbs get the house decorated—which will be about a year from now, at the speed he is travelling on the job. And I don't blame Mrs. Gibbs. If you attempted to do what Gibbs is doing, I'd leave for mother's for an indefinite period.

"The Gibbs family always called in expert decorators to do their work until this year. Now Gibbs is suffering from an attack of economy, and he figures he could do the work himself and put the saving into victory bonds, or spare parts for his liverette.

"He bought a book called 'How to Do Your Own Housecleaning' for 10 cents and began to memorize the thing. The book was so full of statistics and specifications that he soon became addle brained trying to figure it out.

"One chapter was devoted to painting. It explained minutely how one could figure out the surface of the walls and by multiplying the dimensions [illegible] exactly how much paint would be needed for the job.

"Gibbs figured out that it would take fifty-five gallons of various colors to do the work. He ordered up a wagon load of paint and began.

"When Gibbs got through painting he found that he had thirty-seven gallons still untouched. But as he had opened all the cans as soon as he got them, he could not return them to the paint man in exchange for anything else.

"Gibbs lost a tidy sum on the paint job, and even more on his wall papering. He ordered enough paper to cover the side of a warehouse, and when he got through papering his living and dining rooms he had them matched all wrong and the eighty-eight rolls left over were in tatters. He mixed twentythree gallons of paste, basing his figure on the book, and had nineteen buckets unused when he fell off the ladder and broke his shoulder blade."

"So Mrs. Gibbs is going to leave poor Gibbs alone with his broken shoulder?"

"She will—unless he changes his mind about finishing the work. If he persists she is likely to do anything, for she is in a desperate frame of mind."

Parlin reached into an inner pocket and drew forth a little book called 'How to do Your Own Housecleaning.' He tore the book into small scraps and threw them at the cat. He didn't look at his wife, for he knew she would understand.

MAKE OWN IMPLEMENTS

Returned Soldiers May Take Up New Industry

Regina, April 14.—Returned soldiers will be asked to consider a scheme to construct a plant for the manufacture of agricultural implements to be backed by a capital of $3,000,000 the stock to be held by the farmers and the returned soldiers to the extent of one and two-thirds respectively.

It is planned to raise one million dollars among the farmers and to ask the Dominion Government to advance $2,000,000 to the soldiers on a plan similar to the land settlement scheme.

GOOD WILL IN QUEBEC

Montreal, April 14.—Hon. Robert Rogers met a number of political friends at the Ritz-Carlton. He, in fact, gave all present to understand that the time is now ripe for active work and that anything that he could do in aiding Quebec Province to get in line will be accomplished willingly. The representatives from the near country districts gave Mr. Rogers to understand that there was good will everywhere manifest in the rural parts of the Province.

WIT AND WISDOM

Heredity.

"Old Man Slaughter's pretty daughter certainly lives up to the family name."

"How so?"

"Her manners are perfectly killing."

Mrs. Hewitt — Reticence sometimes pays.

Hewitt — Right you are. If the whale had kept his mouth shut it wouldn't have had that trouble with Jonah.

Glass Fashions.

Miss Prior, a charity worker, was visiting a certain woman in a small country town. Four little children in the family all wore glasses.

"What a pity!" exclaimed Miss Prior to the mother. "It seems that all your children have trouble with their eyes."

"There ain't nothing the matter with their eyes, ma'am," said the mother.

"Then why do you disfigure them with those glasses?" asked the visitor, wonderingly.

The woman stared at her caller coldly and angrily. "Why, I thinks they look lovely," she said. "I like glasses on little children. I think they're real dressy."

Fictitious Rating.

Benny—Father, I often read about poor but honest people. Why don't they sometimes say rich but honest?

Father—It would be useless, my son. Nobody would believe it.

On the Safe Side.

Daughter — But, ma, I don't like him.

Mother—He's an only son and his father is very rich.

Daughter—Well, as to that, his father is a widower and may marry again.

Mother—True! I didn't think of that. Perhaps you'd better marry the father.

Not in the Manual.

Farmer (to one of his laborers, recently demobilized) — Well, Pat, which do you prefer, being a farmer or a soldier?

Pat—In one way, sir, I'd rather be a soldier.

Farmer—And how's that?

Pat—Well, you see, you'd be a long time workin' for a farmer before he'd tell you to stand at ease.

Before and After.

"Tom and his wife are not on speaking terms, I hear."

"Dear me! And I remember when he thought it was worth $1 to say a few words to her over the long-distance telephone."

Doubtful.

"Russia proposes an understanding."

Good; but does she possess one?

Absent Treatment.

Mrs. Newrich took her young niece abroad with her. Everything went well until about two months after their arrival, when the girl became ill and a physician was sent for.

"The child is suffering from nervousness and nostalgia," said the physician. "Take her home and she will be all right."

"If she has nostalgia," said Mrs. Newrich, "give me the name of some European specialist and we will have her cured. I have no faith in our home doctors."

HOW WEAK WOMEN ARE MADE STRONG

Mrs. Westmoreland Tells in the Following Letter.

Harrison, N. Y.—"When my first child was born I did not know about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and had a very hard time. I read in the newspaper about the Vegetable Compound and when my second child came I took it and was well during the whole time, and childbirth was a hundred times easier. Ever since then I have used it for any weakness and would not be without it for the world. I do all my work and am strong and healthy. I am nursing my baby, and I still take the Vegetable Compound as it keeps a woman in good health. You may publish my testimonial for the good of other women, if you choose to do so."—Mrs. C. WESTMORELAND, Harrison, N.Y.

Women who suffer from displacements, irregularities, inflammation, ulceration, backache, headaches and nervousness should lose no time in giving this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a trial, and for special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

First Millionaire.

Stephen Girard of Philadelphia, who lived from 1750 to 1831, was one of the first, if not the first, millionaire in this country. He began as a sailor, became a merchant, shipowner and banker, and at his death left $6,000,000 to found the Girard college, as well as other large benefactions. John Jacob Astor, who established the Astor fortunes by fur trading and land speculation, lived from 1762 to 1848, during which time he amassed about $30,000,000.

Poorly dyed goods are apt to come out of the wash with flying colors.

NO FUR, FRINGE, BRAID ON SUITS

Ornamentation Is Not to Be Returned to Spring Fashions, Say Style Prophets.

LINING DOMINATES THE COAT

Coloration Vivid, Occasionally Displaying Animated Designs of Tapestry of the Middle Ages—Various Types of Jackets.

New York.—Twice a year the little gyration of public opinion takes place around tailored suits, writes a leading fashion correspondent. There is a rapid swirl around a new center, and it sweeps over two continents. Twice a year women regard the tailored suit as the most important problem to be solved. A new one for autumn and a new one for spring is the necessity of the rich and the extravagance of the merely well-to-do. The glamor of one-piece frocks, heaped with fur or covered with smart topcoats, dies out. In autumn and spring we approach days when wraps are burdensome and the one-piece frock, unprotected, is chilly. We need the American costume that was invented to serve our necessity.

In January we begin to face the winter, and yet, with our usual capriciousness, we face the fact of choosing a new tailored suit. Even if we do not buy it, we talk about it. We like to speculate upon its possibilities. We show exceeding interest in the new fabrics that are advanced for it and the colors that the season will proclaim. Shirtwaists and various types of blouses engage our attention. The length of coats, the narrowness of skirts, the warmth of velours, the serviceability of taffeta, the probabilities of satin remaining in fashion, are phrases and reflections that flit through the mind.

The dressmakers do good propaganda work along this line at this time. The Palm Beach season is thrown at us like a brilliant flag against a gray, sleet-filled sky. It delights our souls. It makes us think of palm trees and coconut groves, of red clay roads in Georgia and Carolina, of pines that reach into the blue and croon queer songs throughout the night. In other words, the tailored suit, offered to us today, makes us all dream; and dreams of pleasant things make life bearable.

Moderate Skirts in Street Suits.

Now, here are the essentials to produce the dreams: Skirts are moderate in length and width in the new things that are exploited. They do not sweep the ankles; they do not curve in at the back of the knees; they have little resemblance to the lower part of a mermaid's body; they are straight, their seams hold them steady; they barely escape the ankles, and they allow freedom of movement.

There is no return to a flare at the hem of the skirt. Nothing ripples. But if the skirt is not permitted to curve out, neither is it permitted to curve in. Remember that, for it is an essential step toward grace.

There is an entire absence of fur on the suits. This is appropriate for the season, but it is significant of the fashions of the present hour, for many women buy suits in January that are intended to serve them through the cold weather yet to come. They must be guided in their choice of reduced suits today by what will be worn tomorrow.

The best tailor is content to let a skirt go free of ornamentation. Braid is overdone, fringe has become commonplace, and neither will be returned to the spring fashions, as far as the prophets can see.

Angora embroidery vanished with the war. Bias bands are good, and one of the best suits worn by one who prides herself on leading the way, has three bias folds, doubled and stitched at the upper edge. These ornament the hem.

Any woman would care to know the details of this suit because of its prestige at the moment. It is of rough cheviot in a mixed, golden brown that reminds one of the heather mixtures, only the touch of green is absent. There is the straight skirt with its double bias folds at the hem, and the coat that ripples a bit from shoulders to hips. There are bias folds flaring away from the surface of the coat, at the hem and the wrists. The sleeves are cut straight, neither yielding to the inclination to be Spanish with a bell-shaped opening at the wrist, or skintight, after the medieval manner. There is a wide rolling collar that ends at the bust, and the fastening is unique: It consists of four long, wide tabs of the cloth, stitched at the edges, pointed at one end, with a long, stitched buttonhole. These buttonholes go over large buttons covered with the material. The stitched tabs run well across the figure, but the fronts of the coat swing open just a bit as the wearer moves, to show a mandarin yellow crepe de chine blouse.

Coat Linings Attract Attention.

The dominant factor in tailored suits is the lining. It dominates the coat. It is intended to create more attention than the outer surface. Its coloration is vivid, and now and then it displays the animated designs of the tapestries of the middle ages. Animals rove over its surface. Human figures are engaged in human activities. Hunting scenes, pastoral scenes, gay little bits of street life, are put on the surface of your coat lining, and if you are clever, you see to it that the public is instantly made aware of the novelty.

The pity of it is that one does not take off the coat in public. That fashion went out of existence long before the war dominated the world. It has not been reversed. Women keep on their jackets until they take off their skirts. And yet, with this fashion an accomplished fact, the designers by the usage of pictorial linings, are stimulating women to put their coats over the backs of chairs whenever possible. Why pay a large price for a piece of satin tapestry if you cannot show it?

The average woman, however, does not accept these animated designs, although she is quite willing to accept the verdict for vivid coloration.

RICH FAWN GABERDINE GOWN

LASSO [illegible]

Early Persians Roped In Their Wild Mounts.

The lasso is of great antiquity. It is said to be depicted in the ruins of Nineveh, according to the Edinburgh Magazine. An early Persian manuscript, preserved in the Escorial, shows a sportsman (whom I suppose royal by his Olympian expression and careless seat) in the act of catching a wild ass with a nicely plaited lasso. The monarch bestrides a rather "stocky" looking, dark colored horse, with four white feet, and a white face. A bow, quivers and a saber are hung from his saddle, and a sort of housing half covers the horse. How the wild ass is to be restrained, even by the hand of a monarch, is not at first sight evident, for the lasso is neither fixed to the saddle after the fashion of the gauchos, nor is a half turn taken round the pommel, in the style adopted by the vaqueros in Mexico and Texas. Apart from this detail, all is as realistically set forth as it would be to-day in a photograph. The horse bears away from the beast lassoed and the king sits a little to one side exactly as a western cowboy or an Argentina gaucho sits under similar circumstances. Irises and parcissi spring up under the horse's feet, and an applauding group of angels peep out of a cloud, while in the middle distance another Persian gaucho shoots an antelope with an arrow while galloping at full speed.

The Laplanders are said to lasso their reindeer and the Tartans and modern Australians use a rudimentary lasso fixed to a long pole in order to catch wild or refractory horses. The Poles, Croatians and Wallachians, with the Hungarians, seem to have used the lasso till about the beginning of the present century. A picture by the German artist Richter shows Polish remounts for the German cavalry being lassoed in the Zwinger at Dresden. The horses look as wild as a Texan "broncho" or an Argentina "bagual," and the attitude of men and animals and the way the ropes are coiled and thrown are identical with those adopted in Spanish America to-day. The lasso appears to run through a ring in the pommel of the saddle. It is, however, in Spanish America where the art has been most developed. This is on account of the open country and the vast numbers of wild and semi-wild horses which up to the middle of the present century overspread its plains.

"Hard-headed Gibb."

So the consulting general manager of the N. E. Railway, Sir George Gibb, is popularly known in England. Beginning life as a shipping clerk, he graduated, by way of a solicitor's office, to railway work, and by hard work and shrewdness quickly won his way to high posts.

Outside his office Sir George is geniality itself, and he rather likes the story of the train which, stopping suddenly, owing to the communication cord being pulled, was run into by an express.

"It will take five hours to clear the line for us to go ahead," said the guard, to an inquiring passenger.

"Five hours!" was the reply. "Great Scot! I was to be married to-day."

Guard (a married man, sternly)—"Look here, are you the chap who stopped the train?"

In China the old women, and not the young, are the ones to receive homage and adulation.

Maize Grown in China.

Indian corn, or maize, is grown extensively throughout the entire section of China. It is generally planted after the wheat is harvested and in fields with beans, the beans ripening after the corn is harvested. The lack of scientific seed selection prevents the production of as large a yield as would otherwise be obtained.

Then and Now.

Said the facetious feller: "In the olden days when the automobile was designated as 'one lunger' I suppose the chap who owned one had a good deal of trouble with his lung, but now his chief complaint is either gas-tritis or that tired feeling."

New Idea in Handling Coal.

New York inventors have patented machinery to cut coal in a mine, pulverize it and mix it with water and pump it to any desired destination where it would be dried, the idea being to save costs of handling and transportation.

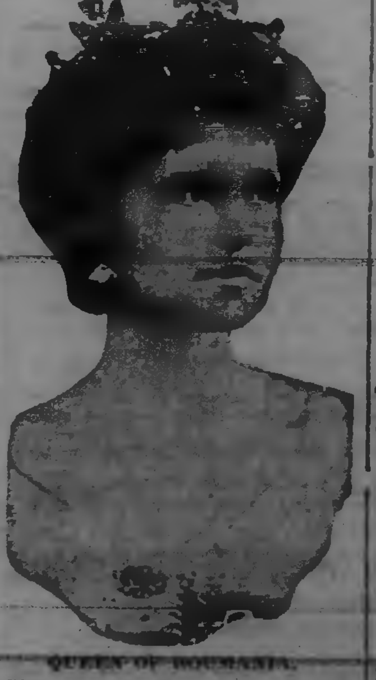
Heroic Roumanian Queen Who Won the Admiration Even of Bitter Enemies

TWO wearers of crowns emerge from the war with the admiration of the world. King Albert of Belgium and Queen Marie of Roumania have displayed a fortitude and bravery that have compelled the respect even of their enemies. Albert, returning in triumph to his capital, has seen his people on the way to recovery from the sufferings of war. That goal is not yet in sight for the faithful Marie, who has arrived in Paris as a supplicant to the Allied diplomats in behalf of her hungry people. On her breast she wears the French War Cross with a palm, bestowed not in idle compliment to the queen of an allied state, but, as the citation pointed out, because she was "a good soldier."

All that she has proved herself to be. The daughter of a son of Queen Victoria and a German princess, she has opposed everything German. Her husband, King Ferdinand, with whom she ascended the throne after the outbreak of the European war, is a Hohenzollern with a brother in the German army. How much Marie did to turn him against his natural affiliation may never be known outside the royal palace, but soon after their ascension to the throne Roumania entered the war.



QUEEN OF ROUMANIA.

All the world knows what followed. Deserted by Russia and [illegible] Roumania was overrun by an overwhelming force of Germans and Bulgarians. As soon as her armies took the field Queen Marie donned the garb of a Sister of Charity and gave all her time to the sick and wounded. Until forced to flee before the invaders she gave the greater part of her palace in Bucharest over for use as a war hospital. Oppressed by the double grief of her country's misfortunes and the death of her youngest child, Queen Marie still devoted herself to her hospital work. For days, fleeing before the advancing Germans, she and her family had no home. Writing of this period when she buried her private sorrow in that of her subjects, she said:

"As a queen it was my duty to place myself at the service of my suffering people, to place myself there where I could hear every cry of agony and every echo of suffering and distress."

She earned the title of "the Joan of Arc of Roumania," and when, overcome by hunger and superior forces, Roumania was forced to sign a humiliating treaty of peace, Marie declared she would never accept the result. At the final review, before the demobilization ordered by the Germans, she exclaimed:

"What a tragedy that this magnificent army must lay down its arms! But, please God, it shall not be for long! I repeat it, it shall not be for long. Germany by her might and brutishness may subdue but she can never crush the spirit of my soldiers. With God's help we shall fight again, and I pray that the day is not far off."

Now, with the fighting ended, she is appealing for food. "We are used to being shabby, and we can go without shoes and clothes," she told Premier Clemenceau, "but we must have food."

Maybe You Knew Him.

Said Senator Squash of Squeegee: "The senator who never knows the motion before the house is the kind of feller who always has to ask 'What's trumps?'"

ALIENS HOLD TWENTY MILLIONS STOCK IN CANADIAN PACIFIC

Company Willing For Government to Take This Over but Ask Protection From Litigation.

Montreal, April 14.—Argument took place in the practice court before Mr. Justice Duclos on the application of the Dominion Government to have common stock in the Canadian Pacific Company to the value of $20,000,000, held by alien enemies turned over to the Finance Minister.

W. B. Tilley, K.C., general counsel for the Canadian Pacific Railway, explained that the company was quite heartily in favor of the proposal, but it behooved the corporation to see that no litigation ensued in case the order should be given by a court without jurisdiction. The company claimed that the property of the shares was located in New York and transferable there only. If ordered to transfer these shares at the head office in Canada and do something else in the U. S., the situation would be detrimental to the company and might give rise to serious damage actions.

Bring Facts to Light

The company was represented in court for three reasons. First, in order to see that all the facts might be brought before the court, and to make sure that the court had jurisdiction to see that the action was valid and afforded it protection; secondly, to bring to the notice of the court that though the persons who by their names and addresses might be aliens, their stock might not be beneficially owned by the people named, but really by friends, and thirdly, whether proper proof that these shares belong to the enemies was being brought forward.

Owes Railway

Mr. Tilley said that the National Bank de Friesthad owed the C.P.R. $2,500,000 at the outbreak of the war, and this company were the holders of 80,000 shares in the C.P.R. The Austrian Government was liable to the company for $215,593 being the value of railway cars seized and taken over by them as well as the fact that $3,000,000 deposited with the Austrian Government for a certain purpose before the war and been seized, and that the company should be allowed to pay itself from the dividends accumulated on the shares held by the National Bank De Frieshstad.

Eugene Lafleur, K. C., representing the Dominion Government, apposed the contention that the C.P.R. should pay itself from withheld dividends, and stated that these amounts might figure in the peace treaty.

F. E. Meredith, also representing the C.P.R., said such payment was allowed by the Dominion Railway Act.

Germans Would Get It

At this point Mr. Justice Duclos said: "If the action rested neither before the American courts nor before ours, the Germans would get away with the money."

Lafleur said it was not the Canadian Government's idea to confiscate the shares, but to put them where they would be safe. When it could be proved that the shares were owned by nationals of a friendly country they would be returned. The property of the shares was in Canada, and the Canadian Government could cancel them if it wanted to.

Judge Duclos reserved judgment.

NEW FEATURES OF REFERENDUM

PREMIER HEARST'S BILL PROVIDING FOR PLEBISCITE INTRODUCED IN HOUSE.

Toronto, April 14. — Premier Hearst's bill for a referendum on the Ontario Temperance Act, which was introduced in the legislature this afternoon bears out in practically every detail the announcements made by the premier on the subject on Monday last, but there are some features of the bill, upon which Sir William did not enlarge on that occasion.

The vote on the referendum will also be taken as a "local option" verdict in each municipality. That is to say if the clause permitting the sale of light beer in standard hotels is carried by the province, it will become effective in all municipalities where it was favored by a majority of the voters, but the sale will not be allowed in municipalities where a majority voted against it.

Further provision is made, that no matter which way a municipality votes, it has power to vote again on the question any time, after the end of 1921, and to become "wet" or "dry" as the vote then goes.

If Act Repealed

Revival of the Liquor License Act in the event of the Ontario Temperance Act being repealed, will be made by order-in-council, as will also all local option bylaws which were in force before the passing of the O. T. A.

The bill does not fix the date for the taking of the referendum. This remains to be set at a later date by order-in-council.

JUSTICE LENNOX MISSED TRAIN

SUPREME COURT SESSION TO OPEN AT 6.30 THIS EVENING.

The sittings of the Supreme Court did not commence at 1 o'clock this afternoon, as was intended. Mr. Justice Lennox missed his train in Toronto and will not arrive until the 5:30 Grand Trunk train this afternoon. He wired the clerk of the court to the effect that the court would be opened at 6:30 this evening.

TWO-YEAR LIMIT IS SET

New Regulation Wipes Out Indefinite Sentence

Legislation which will limit the power of magistrates concerning indefinite sentences in industrial refuges is now before the Provincial House. Heretofore it was permitted magistrates to sentence females between the ages of 15 and 35 years to industrial refuges for an indefinite period not exceeding five years. Parents or guardians are also permitted to have children placed in these institutions without judicial inquiry. In future magistrates will only be permitted to sentence females to those institutions for an indeterminate period not exceeding two years.

The records for 1918, owing to the ravages of the "Flu," will show the above record repeated many times, and all such acted in time.

BERLIN GAY IN HOLIDAY GARB

SIX-DAY BICYCLE RACE IN PROGRESS IN PRUSSIAN CAPITOL.

Berlin, April 14.—Barbed wire barricades, camouflaged armored cars with white death's-head and cross-bones emblems, cannon and machine-guns have vanished from Berlin's streets.

Life is again so superficially normal that nothing reminds you of democracy's death grapple with Bolshevism in the German arena.

The sporting world of last week was absorbed in Berlin's six-day bicycle race, drawing crowds despite the nightly increasing price of seats, soaring prices being a typical Berlin phenomenon—a new discovery for parting natives from their money.

At two of Berlin's largest cafes continuous billiard tournaments are going on. Mechanical gambling on the rolling ivories made a hit with devotees of sport.

In a Berlin paper is an "ad", in which the advertiser seeks a partner with 100,000 marks for opening a bar of a new type to Berlin. New gambling clubs for ladies and gentlemen continue to sprout, proffering sumptuous free banquets of illicit foods and free liquor as bait to catch members, with vaudeville and operatic stars as an added attraction.

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

If Mixed With Sulphur It Darkens So Naturally Nobody Can Tell

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called 'Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound.' It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive.

Staterooms.

There was an old fellow named Shreve who ran steamboats before Jackson fought the redcoats at New Orleans. In Shreve's time the cabins were curtained off just like them new-fangled sleeping-car berths. The old man built wooden rooms, and he named them after the different states, Kentucky, and Illinois and Pennsylvania. So that when a fellow came aboard he'd say: "What state am I in, Cap?" And from this remark the name stateroom has spread all over the world.

Explaining History of Dress.

If one could only know the origin of all the many words we use in our daily talk, one would know much of the history of dress. Many of our most recently adopted clothes words come from France, but five hundred years ago dress terms more usually came from Italy, then the mecca of fashion. Hence, velvet came from "velluto," the Italian word to indicate shaggy. And "camisole," which has recently been revived from an earlier English usage, came from the Italian diminutive of chemise.

Interesting Impressions

Of the Strong Personality Of Ex-Premier Kerensky

IN Land and Water, Mr. J. Coudurier de Chassaigne gave recently an interesting impression of M. Kerensky, who to-day is, as he says, something of a king in exile. "The first time I met Kerensky I was struck by the simplicity of his manners," says Mr. de Chassaigne. "He might have been one of those innumerable Russian students I used to see, in my youthful days, at the Sorbonne. But in spite of his loosely-fitting clothes, there was something in the way he entered the room which showed that the man had confidence in himself, and had been in possession of great power—that he was, in fact, somebody. His clean-shaven face, a little round, but not fat, with its close-cropped hair, as is the fashion in the Russian army, had a very juvenile air. But the instant he looked at you he reminded you, somehow, of one of those veteran actors who, at a distance, seem to be boys, and when you get near them are old men. His nose — large, but not aquiline, broad at the top, and still broader at the base—falls over the mouth, as the nose in some of the portraits of Mirabeau. If Kerensky had adopted the French fashion of long hair a la Gambetta, one might call his nose leonine and admirably matched with an abundant mane. His scrutinizing eyes, frequently screwed up as if they were very short-sighted, close and open so suddenly that I have not yet been able to discover what their color is. But when he speaks with animation they throw out sombre flashes. His lips are rather thin, well curved, and the whole mouth is firmly set. On the forehead, a few deep lines. Above the eyes, slight protuberances. It is evident that the man has spent his life in hard and concentrated thinking, and the last two years have left their traces on the whole expression of that enigmatic face. Kerensky is of medium stature, well set up, though not in the least athletic. The hands are strong, but delicately shaped. His voice is deep, and even when speaking to friends round a dinner-table he cannot suppress the volume of sound which pours forth without any apparent effort from his powerful throat. At our different meetings we always spoke in French, but I found him very fluent and able to express every shade of his thought with the greatest facility. He is a clear thinker, and, as he knows what he wants, the words never fail him to construct his logical and well-balanced sentences. As is often the case with real orators, his gestures are few. The force of his oratory lies neither in magnetic power nor in physical fascination, but in his constant effort to grip your mind and to convert you to his point of view, through the mere strength of logic and common sense."

EX-PREMIER KERENSKY.

Howlers!

A school principal lately told us some of the answers found in pupils' examination papers. Here are three of them: "What is a volcano?" "A volcano is a mountain that sometimes blows the equator off." "What is the difference between a mountain and a hill?" "A hill is like a mountain, only a mountain is a little more hillier." "What became of the locusts of Pharaoh's time?" "John the Baptist ate them."

Coffee and Prohibition.

Porto Rico is consuming 50 per cent. more coffee to-day than she did before the island went "dry," according to a San Juan coffee dealer. This fact, together with an island coffee crop of only half of what it was last year and a heavy demand from Spain and Cuba, has sent up prices throughout the island. Retailers found the price almost doubled overnight and the restaurants raised their prices to 10 cents a cup.

The Bean.

The common bean is a native of South America, and was introduced into Europe during the sixteenth century. Now it is represented by over 150 varieties. The big broad bean is probably a native of southwestern Asia and northeastern Europe. The broad, but not thick, lima bean, called by some "butter bean," is a pole variety that comes from South America.

ADVERTISE IN THE REVIEW.

The Troubles of Lemberg

Did Not Come to an End When Allies Won the War

ALREADY bearing the scars of the world-war, added to the marks of sieges and captures through the first five centuries of its municipal existence, even the armistice has not brought peace to Lemberg, which Ukrainians are reported to have attacked.

Residents of the city must walk with a grim smile through the battle-torn promenades built on the space left free by the demolition of the fortifications of the inner city of Lemberg in 1811, at a time when the citizens of the Galician capital looked confidently for an era of peace.

Lemberg, known as Lwow in Polish and Leopolis in Latin, was founded in the thirteenth century by a Rutherian prince. Casimir the Great added it to his domain in 1340 and bestowed upon the city the charter and privileges known as the Magdeburg Rights.

When Constantinople fell its trade with the East flourished, but it was all but engulfed in the revolutions and maraudings which swept over the Ukraine and parts of Poland during the last half of the seventeenth century—an earlier manifestation of Bolshevism directed by the Cossack hetman, Chmielnicka.

Charles XII of Sweden, took Lemberg, along with other Polish cities when the ill-advised Augustus II was drawn into the Great Northern war. Upon the first partition of Poland, in 1772, Lemberg was allotted to Austria.

In connection with the division of Polish lands, the Empress Maria Theresa wrote, prophetically in view of recent events, "I have yielded, not wishing to make war, but quite contrary to my convictions. I hope that the monarchy may not feel the effects of this after my death."

Frederick the Great of Prussia, who had engineered the partition, did not take the Austrian monarch's qualms seriously. "She is always weeping and always taking," was his comment.

In the same year Austria came forward with additional claims on the ground that Prussia and Russia were availing themselves of the opportunity to acquire certain districts for which they had long contended. Therefore, despite her pangs of conscience, the provident empress gained possession of about 1,500 square miles of territory, to which she gave the title of the kingdom of Galicia and Lodomeria, and made Lemberg the capital.

Twelve years later Joseph II, whose futile ambitions caused his reign to be compared to a man who constantly desired to sneeze and could not, established the University of Lemberg. This university became one of the best-known Polish institutions of learning.

One of Lemberg's parks bears the name of the Polish patriot, Jan Kilinski, a shoemaker, who fought bravely in 1796. He was captured and taken to St. Petersburg. Following his release he returned to his shoemaker's bench and when custom was light he wrote his recollections, which form a valuable record of this period.

Lemberg, nearly as large as Winnipeg, before the war began, was the fourth city of Austria. It is 60 miles east of Przemysl, and more than 450 miles northeast of Vienna. It lies on the banks of the Peltew river, which flows into the Bug. Eighty-seven miles to the east is Tarnopol, near the Russian border, among the first points of attack when the Muscovites crossed the Galician frontier.

Scene of a popular uprising in 1848, Lemberg became the seat of the Galician Diet upon the establishment of that body in 1861. Before 1914 it manufactured iron ware, machinery, matches, candles, liquors chocolate, leather, bricks and tiles. Its commerce was largely in linen, wool, oil, flax and hemp.

Theatres in Ocean Liners.

A favorable project of the late Charles Frohman, which he did not live to see fulfilled, the establishment of theatres in ocean liners, is being revived as an outcome of entertainments given to soldiers in troopships. The New York officials of the Cunard Line have resuscitated the scheme. They are reported to be considering plans for the construction of stages in the saloons of their Atlantic vessels, with complete sets of scenery. In addition, every ship is to carry a stock company and a director to produce plays selected from the latest London and New York successes. Passengers leaving New York will be shown London plays, and those sailing for the United States New York plays.

Deadly Warfare.

In spite of the long casualty lists of the present war, fought with all the fiendish contrivances of modern science, the destruction of life was not so great in proportion as in earlier wars when soldiers fought hand to hand. The most deadly of all weapons was the Roman short sword. Caesar reported that at the battle he fought near Namur his soldiers slew 60,000 of the Nevii. There were no wounded when the weapon was the short sword.

Dangerous Natural Gas.

One of the disadvantages of natural gas localities is that the filtered gas has practically no odor and leakages are, therefore, undetected. Gas has been discovered to be nearly always present in buildings fronting on asphalted streets.

Bud by Electricity.

Strong stationary currents from a railroad are supposed to cause the trees on one side of a Brussels street to bud again and sometimes blossom after they once have shed their leaves every fall.

Eighth Line Boys Still Champions

At the Water Street Alleys on Saturday night the 8th line five-pin rollers again showed their superiority over the 12th line team by winning out by a margin of 120 pins. The 12th line boys fought hard and gave the victors a merry chase. The pinnage was 8th line 2081; 12th line 1961.

J. Porter and J. Fitzgerald were high for the 8th line with 464 and 462 for 3 game totals; while for the 12th line Shaughnessy had a 474 pin total. The high single for the night was Shaughnessy with 198. The scores were as follows:

LABOR AND THE BRIDGE

Editor Review—We are asked why the prospect of having to pay such a wage as is proposed to establish in this city for laboring men, that of a minimum of 50 cents per hour, has affected the amounts of the tenders sent in for construction of the Hunter street bridge.

Leaving to one side claims that such a wage as indicated is necessary to meet the cost of living, which it may, some idea of the thought in the mind of the contractor can be realiz [illegible] vailing rate of wages paid for laboring work in other places.

From the issue of the Canadian Labor Press, the labor paper published in Montreal, for April, is given, following a compilation of wage amounts current in several cities of about the population of Peterborough. London has 30 cents per hour and a nine hour day. St. Catharines 33 cents to 40 cents, and nine hours. Guelph 25 cents. Stratford 32 to 37 cents. Galt, 25 cents to 26 cents. Hamilton 35 cents to 40 cents Brantford 45 cents an hour for civic day laborers and an 8 hour day.

This it is seen that if the bridge were to be built at Galt instead of at Peterborough that the labor cost would be only about one-half of what is to be asked for Peterborough. Is it possible that the cost of living in Galt is one half of the cost in this city, if claims for advances be based on the prices of foods and supplies Or is it possible that in Peterborough the attempt is to be made to enhance the services to such an extent that all work will be practically at a standstill. For assuredly, whether realized or not, that is the effect the proposed action is taking. Work is locked up because those who would have it done will not pay the price that is in prospect. And serious unemployment continues and will continue for months as yet.

How would the wage scale as paid at Galt affect the cost of the bridge? Practically one-half of the cost at Peterborough. Take Guelph, as an average, and make a trial of the results. Suppose as many as eighty laboring men were employed, and it takes 1½ years to complete the bridge if built of concrete. Allow that there may be three months out of the period in which work cannot be carried on, as may be the case, the 80 men would put in 280,000 hours, working a nine hour day, the labor cost would foot up to 98,000.00. If the same time were paid for at 50 cents per hour, the cost would be $140,000,000. That is a condition that faces the contractor and it may be reflected in his proposal to build. The above sums represent only one part of the service, and we have to add the large amount of the erection of the supporting false work, the supply of materials, erection of plant, bringing it to the works, the cost of supervision, engineering skill and many other needful and contingent expenses. Can we then be surprised that the proposed bridge should represent up in the neighborhood of a third of a million dollars.

This does not discuss the question of policy, that is the idea of supplying much needed occupation, even at the public expense. That matter is to be settled by those having care of the proposition. No doubt they will decide wisely, bearing in mind the situation of our working people. There is no doubt, however, in the public mind, and the public will pay for the bridge, that if there were in view a reasonable idea among working men as to finding work and doing so in a spirit of helpfulness that employment as soon as soon as possible a spirit of helpfulness thta employment as soon as possible, even at wages not the figure as proposed to be set, that citizens would encourage the Council to go on and have the work started as soon as possible. Putting forward any propaganda, that because it is a municipal project it should pay the very highest wage, even if the cost of living would seem to encourage such a stand only indures people to remonstrate personally and as individuals to the council as many have done and are doing that excessive expense should not be incurred, while there is any way that the aggregate of cost could be lessened. While looking for some way to overcome this, the Council is trying, and this trying spells delay, and delay means longer unemployment. Cannot some [illegible] be shown, despite the facts as we find them and despite the slippery fact that butter soars to the vicinity of eighty cents per pound.

Presetation To Mr. and Mrs. Fitch

A gathering of the friends of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Fitch took place at their home in Otonabee on Tuesday night last when the following address was read and a presentation made of a handsome pair of chairs.

Mr. and Mrs. Fitch have resided on the farm they are leaving for the past twenty-two years, and will be greatly missed.

They will reside in Ashburnham, on their return from a visit with friends in Collingwood.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Fitch:

We, your friends and neighbors have gathered together on the eve of your departure from our community to wish you health, happiness and prosperity in your new home.

We feel that our relations with you, which have always been of the kindliest, have builded a friendship which will last through the coming years.

We ask you to accept these chairs as a slight token of our appreciation of your kindly disposition, and fondly hope that while using them in the future they may remind you of your former pleasant association with us.

The address was read by Mr. W. D. Johnston, and the gifts were presented by Mr. Thos. Chamberlain and Mr. Michael Rorke, on behalf of the people of the neighborhood.

Mr. Fitch made a suitable reply, thanking the people of their neighborhood for their kind remembrances, after which refreshments were served and a pleasant social evening was spent.

SAYS BASEBALL IS A MONOPOLY

BALTIMORE FEDERAL LEAGUE CLUB SECURES A VERDICT FOR $80,000

Washington, April 14.—Judgment for $80,000 in favor of the Baltimore Federal League Baseball Club in its suit for $900,000 damages against the American and National Leagues, and certain officers of the defunct Federal League, was returned late today by a jury in the D. C. Supreme Court. As the suit was brought under the Sherman anti-trust law, the damages will be trebled, making the amount $240,000, if a final judgment is entered.

The jury deliberated about six hours. Immediately after the verdict was returned, counsel for organized baseball announced that an appeal would be taken to the District of Columbia Court of Appeals, and, if necessary, to the United States Supreme Court.

Trial of the suit here began March 25. The defendants named included the National and American Leagues and their constituent clubs. It was charged that Gilmore, Weeghman and Sinclair had entered into a conspiracy with organized baseball, having for its purpose the disolution of the Federal League.

[illegible] with maintaining a monopoly of the baseball business in restraint of trade between the different states. The Baltimore club alleged that it had been damaged to the extent of $300,000 on account of the failure of time Federal League, and under the provisions of the Sherman anti-trust law it was entitled to three times this amount.

DRAIN COUNTRY OF BILLIONS

ALIENS LEAVING THE UNITED STATES WITH SAVINGS FOR YEARS

New York, April 14.—Bolshevik propaganda will be responsible for the exodus from this country of 6,000,000 aliens, who will carry with them approximately $4,000,000,000 unless prompt measures are taken to counteract the propaganda according to the savings bank section of the American Bankers' Association. A letter sent [illegible] today, describing the conditions, read as follows, in part:

"Due to Bolshevik propaganda, an alarming proposition of the 14,000,000 foreign-born aliens are drawing their money from the banks, selling their Liberty Bonds and homes and returning to Europe. The New York Custom House authorities announce that those now sailing from this port carry with them from $2,500 to $25,000 each in United States currency.

"It is estimated that more than 1,300,000 cannot be stopped from going and that they will carry with them nearly $4,000,000,000, or an amount four-fifths that of the total currency in circulation in the United States before the war.

"It is estimated that unless vigorous action is taken, over 6,000,000 of these aliens may be lured abroad by this vicious propaganda, taking with them an amount of cash equal to the total present currency resources of the United States. This is very serious."

Frankie Robinson Left Half Billion

Louisville, Ky., April 14.—Frankie Robinson, the jockey, who was killed at Bowie, Md., race tarck over a week ago, left an estate understood to approximate 500,000. The heirs include his widow, formerly Miss Lucy Simcoe, who left the Louisville High school sevn weeks ago to become his bride.

Robinson, regarded as one of the leading riders in America, was under contract to ride for Harry Payne Whitney. His interment, which was made in this city, was attended by many persons connected with the turf, the pallbearers being jockeys from Churchill Downs.

LIBERTY LOAN IN UNITED STATES

FOUR AND A HALF BILLIONS — OVER SUBSCRIPTIONS REJECTED.

Washington, April 14.—Terms of the Victory Liberty Loan were announced by Secretary of the Treasury Glass. They are.

Amount, $4,500,000; oversubscriptions to be rejected.

Interest, 4¾ per cent, for partially tax exempt notes convertible into 3¾ per cent. notes, wholly tax exempt. Maturity, four years, with the Treasury reserving the privilege of redeeming the notes in three years.

The size of the loan was much smaller than had been anticipated by most financial observers, who looked for an issue of about $6,000,000 particularly in view of Secretary Glass' past statements that the loan would be five or six billions.

This will be the last Liberty Loan, Secretary Glass explained, although there will be other issues of Government securities to finance belated war expenses. These will not be floated by popular campaigns.

NEW SCHOOL BILL BEFORE HOUSE

SOME MUST ATTEND PART TIME UP TO EIGHTEEN YEARS OF AGE.

The bill to which the Minister of Education, Hon. Dr. Cody, so frequently referred when his bill for Compulsory School Attendance was going through committee on Thursday, was introduced in the Legislature by Sir William Hearst in the absence of the Minister. The Bill takes cares of the children between the ages of fourteen and eighteen by providing that they shall attend school part-time.

Adolescents, according to the definition of the Bill, are divided into two classes: those between fourteen and eighteen and those between sixteen and eighteen. The former are obliged to attend school 400 hours during the year and the latter, 320 hours during the school year. Such boys and girls will be unable, under the bill, to obtain employment unless they can produce school dismissal certificates or employment permits signed by the School Attendance Officer.

The bill makes provisions for some exceptions as in the case of illness or physical condition. In the case of a boy or girl who has passed matriculation at the age of sixteen or an examination equal to it, the Act will not apply; and a boy or girl over sixteen is also exempt from the Act if he or she has had full-[illegible] matriculation.

Every urban municipality over 5,000 of a population must provide courses for part-time study, and smaller municipalities may do so. If courses are optional and not provided, the boy or girl cannot, of course, be made to continue part-time instruction.

The date of the enforcement of the Act is left to a proclamation of the Lieutenant-Governor because some time will be required to arrange the part-time courses.

The Gods of Mars

By EDGAR RICE BURROUGHS

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

It was the sight of a score of figures moving slowly about the meadow near the bank of a mighty river.

Odd, grotesque shapes they were, unlike anything that I had ever seen upon Mars, and yet at a distance most manlike in appearance. The larger specimens appeared to be about ten or twelve feet in height when they stood erect and to be proportioned as to torso and lower extremities precisely as is earthly man.

Their arms, however, were very short and from where I stood seemed as though fashioned much after the manner of an elephant's trunk in that they moved in sinuous and snakelike undulations, as though entirely without bony structure, or if there were bones they must be vertebral in nature.

As I watched them from behind the trunk of a huge tree one of the creatures moved slowly in my direction engaged in the occupation that seemed to be the principal business of each of them and which consisted in running their oddly shaped hands over the surface of the sward, for what purpose I could not determine.

As he approached quite close to me I obtained an excellent view of him, and, though I was later to become better acquainted with his kind, I may say that that single cursory examination of this awful travesty of nature would have proved quite sufficient to my desires had I been a free agent.

Its hairless body was of a strange and ghoulish blue except for a broad band of white which encircled its protruding, single eye, an eye that was all dead white—pupil, iris and ball.

Its nose was a ragged, inflamed, circular hole in the center of its blank face, a hole that resembled more closely nothing that I could think of other than a fresh bullet wound which has not yet commenced to bleed.

Below this repulsive orifice the face was quite blank to the chin, for the thing had no mouth that I could discover.

The head, with the exception of the face, was covered by a tangled mass of jet black hair some eight or ten inches in length. Each hair was about the bigness of a large angleworm, and as the thing moved the muscles of its scalp this awful head covering seemed to writhe and wriggle and crawl about the fearsome face as though indeed each separate hair was endowed with independent life.

Its Hairless Body Was of a Strange and Ghoulish Blue.

The body and the legs were as symmetrically human as nature could have fashioned them, and the feet, too, were human in shape, but of monstrous proportions. From heel to toe they were fully three feet long and very flat and very broad.

As it came quite close to me I discovered that its strange movements, running its odd hands over the surface of the turf, were the result of its peculiar method of feeding, which consists in cropping off the tender vegetation with its razor-like talons and sucking it up from its two mouths, which lie one in the palm of each hand, through its armlike throats.

In addition to the features which I have already described, the beast was equipped with a massive tail about six feet in length, quite round where it joined the body, but tapering to a flat, thin blade toward the end, which trailed at right angles to the ground.

CHAPTER II.

A Strange Meeting.

As I had been scrutinizing this weird monstrosity the balance of the herd had fed quite close to me.

Fearsome looking as they were, I did not know whether to fear them or not, for they did not seem to be particularly well equipped for fighting.

I was, in fact, on the point of stepping from my hiding place and revealing myself to them to note the effect upon them of the sight of a man when [illegible] was, fortunately for me, nipped in the bud by a strange shrieking wail which seemed to come from the direction of the bluffs at my right.

Naked and unarmed as I was, my end would have been both speedy and horrible at the hands of these cruel creatures, but at the moment of the shriek each member of the herd turned in the direction of the sound, and at the same instant every particular snakelike hair upon their heads rose stiffly perpendicular as if each had been a sentient organism looking or listening for the source or meaning of the wail.

And indeed the latter proved to be the truth, for this strange growth upon the craniums of the plant men of Barsoom represents the thousand ears of these hideous creatures, the last remnant of the strange race which sprung from the original tree of life.

Instantly every eye turned toward one member of the herd, a large fellow who evidently was the leader. A strange purring sound issued from the mouth in the palm of one of his hands, and at the same time he started rapidly toward the bluff, followed by the entire herd.

Their speed and method of locomotion were both remarkable, springing, as they did, in great leaps of twenty or thirty feet, much after the manner of a kangaroo.

They were rapidly disappearing when it occurred to me to follow them, and so, hurling caution to the winds, I sprang across the meadow in their wake with leaps and bounds even more prodigious than their own, for the muscles of an athletic earth man produce remarkable results when pitted against the lesser gravity and air pressure of Mars.

Their way led directly toward the apparent source of the river at the base of the cliffs, and as I neared this point I found the meadow dotted with huge bowlders dislodged from the towering crags above.

For this reason I came quite close to the cause of the disturbance before the scene broke upon my horrified gaze.

As I topped a great bowlder I saw the herd of plant men surrounding a little group of perhaps five or six green men and women of Barsoom.

That I was indeed upon Mars I now had no doubt, for here were members of the wild hordes that people the dead sea bottoms and deserted cities of that dying planet.

Here were the great males towering in all the majesty of their imposing height; here were the gleaming white tusks protruding from their massive lower jaws to a point near the center of their foreheads; the laterally placed, protruding eyes, with which they could look forward or backward or to either side without turning their heads; here the strange antennaelike ears rising from the tops of their foreheads and the additional pair of arms extending from midway between the shoulders and the hips.

Even without the glossy green hide and the metal ornaments which denoted the tribes to which they belonged I would have known them on the instant for what they were, for where else in all the universe is their like duplicated?

There were two men and four females in the party, and their ornaments denoted them as members of different hordes.

The facts puzzled me, since the various hordes of green men of Barsoom are eternally at war with one another, and never had I seen green Martians of different hordes associated in other than mortal combat, save on that historic instance when the great Tars Tarkas of Thark gathered 150,000 green warriors from several hordes to march upon the doomed city of Zodanga and rescue Dejah Thoris, princess of Helium, from the clutches of Than Kosis.

But now they stood back to back, facing in wide eyed amazement the very evidently hostile demonstrations of a common enemy.

Both men and women were armed with long swords and daggers, but no firearms were in evidence, else it had been short shift for the grewsome plant men of Barsoom.

Presently the leader of the plant men charged the little party, and his method of attack was as remarkable as it was effective and by its very strangeness was the more potent, since in the science of the green warriors there was no defense for this singular manner of attack.

The plant man charged to within a dozen feet of the party and then, with a bound, rose as though to pass directly above their heads. His powerful tail was raised high to one side, and as he passed close above them he brought it down in one terrific sweep that crushed a green warrior's skull as though it had been an eggshell.

The balance of the frightful herd was now circling rapidly and with bewildering speed about the little knot of victims. Their prodigious bounds and the shrill screeching pur of their uncanny mouths were well calculated to confuse and terrorize their prey, so that as two of them leaped simultaneously from either side the mighty sweep of those awful tails met with no resistance, and two more green Martians went down to an ignoble death.

There were now but the warrior and two females left, and it seemed that it could be but a matter of seconds ere these also lay dead upon the sward.

But, as two or more of the plant men charged, the warrior, who was now prepared by the experiences of the past few minutes, swung his mighty long sword aloft and met the hurtling bulk with a clean cut that clove one of the plant men from chin to groin.

The other, however, dealt a single blow with his cruel tail that laid both of the females crushed corpses upon the ground.

As the green warrior saw the last of his companions go down and at the same time perceived that the entire herd was charging him in a body he rushed boldly to meet them, swinging his long sword in the terrific manner that I had so often seen the men of his kind wield it in their ferocious and almost continual warfare among their own race.

Cutting and hewing to right and [illegible] he laid an open path straight through the advancing plant men and then commenced a mad race for the forest, in the shelter of which he evidently hoped he might find a haven of refuge.

He had turned for that portion of the forest which abutted on the cliffs, and thus the flight was taking the entire party farther and farther from the bowlder where I lay concealed.

As I had watched the flight which the great warrior had made against such odds my heart had swelled for him, and acting as I am wont to do, more upon impulse than after mature deliberation, I sprang from my sheltering rock and bounded quickly toward the bodies of the dead green Martians, a well defined plan of action already formed.

Half a dozen great leaps brought me to the spot, and another instant saw me again in my stride in rapid pursuit of the hideous monsters that were rapidly gaining on the fleeing warrior.

But this time I grasped a mighty long sword in my hand, and in my heart was the old blood lust of the fighting man.

A red mist swam before my eyes, and I felt my lips respond to my heart in the old smile that has marked me in the midst of the joy of battle.

Though swift, I was none too soon, for the green warrior had been overtaken before he had made half the distance to the forest, and now he stood with his back to the bowlder, while the herd, temporarily balked, hissed and screeched about him.

With their single eyes in the center of their heads and every eye turned upon their prey, they did not note my soundless approach, so that I was upon them with my great long sword, and four of them lay dead before they knew that I was among them.

For an instant they recoiled before my terrific onslaught, and in that instant the green warrior rose to the occasion and, springing to my side, lay to the right and left of him as I had never seen but one other warrior do. With circling strokes that formed a figure 8 about him he did not stop until none stood living to oppose him, his keen blade passing through flesh and bone as though each had been, alike, thin air.

As we bent to the slaughter far above us rose that shrill, weird cry which I had heard once before and which had called the herd to the attack upon their victims. Again and again it rose, but we were too much engaged with the fierce, powerful creatures about us to attempt to search out even with our eyes the author of the horrid notes.

Great tails lashed in frenzied anger about us, razor-like talons cut our limbs and bodies, and a green and sticky sirup, such as oozes from a crushed caterpillar, smeared us from head to foot, for every cut and thrust of our long swords brought spurts of this stuff upon us from the severed arteries of the plant men, through which it courses in its sluggish viscidity in lieu of blood.

Once I felt the great weight of one of the monsters upon my back, and as keen talons sank into my flesh I experienced the frightful sensation of moist lips sucking the blood from the wounds to which the claws still clung.

I was very much engaged with a ferocious fellow who was endeavoring to reach my throat from in front while two more, one on either side, were lashing viciously at me with their tails.

The green warrior was much put to it to hold his own, and I felt that the unequal struggle could last but a moment longer when the huge fellow discovered my plight, and, tearing himself from those that surrounded him, he raked the assailant from my back with a sweep of his blade, and, thus relieved, I had little difficulty with the others.

"The Safety Curtain"

REVEALS NORMA TALMAOGE IN A FASCINATING ROLE.

The scenes of Norma Talmadge's latest Select Picture, "The Safety Curtain," which will be shown at the Grand Theatre today, Tuesday and Wednesday, are laid in two distinctly opposite atmospheres, behind the curtain of a cheap London music hall, and its antipodes, social life in an army post in India.

When the safety curtain shuts PUCK, Norma Talmadge, away from her former life and throws her into the protection of Captain Merryon, and later after she goes to India as his wife, she feels that she had been completely hidden away from her stage associates and seeks to draw the safety curtain of silence over the secret of her past.

Puck is the wife of Vulcan, a strong man, who is on the bill with her at the music-hall. He is jealous of his beautiful young wife and although she gives him no cause, beats her soundly for fancied wrongs. Tired of this treatment, she goes on for her act in misery when her beauty and grace attract the attention of Captain Merryon, who is in a box with a party of friends. During her act a fire breaks out and Puck tries in vain to quell the panic until she finds herself pinned in between the safety curtain and an explosion beneath the orchestra. Merryon leaps to her aid and she is rescued through an unused passage way, unseen by her friends, who believe her dead.

At his rooms, Merryon asks her to go with him to India as his wife and she consents, without disclosing the fact of her marriage to Vulcan, for a newspaper has reported him as dead Since, however, she herself is listed among the killed, she realizes that there is a chance that Vulcan, too, has escaped, and she lives in terror of exposure. Without giving a reason she asks that Merryon does not claim her immediately as his wife, hoping that soon she will hear in some way that she is actually free from Vulcan and rightfully Merryon's own.

But time goes on and the safety curtain seems more and more concealing. Puck in increasing joy decides to give herself to Merryon and forget the past when it is rudely torn aside by the hand of Sylvester, a loiterer about the theatre, who appears as secretary to a member of the embassy. He threatens to expose Puck to her new husband, unless she yields to him, and panic stricken, Puck flees to the post to confess.

But Vulcan, to whom Sylvester wires according to his threat, appears at the post before she can get the courage to tell Merryon of his existence, and Puck, hysterical at the thought of losing the happiness which she has found, clings to him piteously.

With threats of beatings and exposure which will mean Merryon's ruin in the army, he leaves, telling Puck that he will wait for her at Dak Bungalow. Cholera is raging and Vulcan is seized. The natives are beginning to remove their sick from the hospitals to the fakirs' huts, and Merryon hurries off to order their return. While he is gone, Puck realizes that she loves him better than herself and rather than see him ruined, decides to go to Dak Bungalow and give herself back to her rightful husband. She arrives just as Merryon, who has reached home and finding her gone, follows her to the door. Vulcan rises to beat her, for as he says, although he is dying, he will not go without punishing her for her desertion. The exertion is too much and he falls dead at their feet.

Now wholly Merryon's, Puck may leave the unhappy past behind, at last on the right side of the Safety Curtain, which, long ago, in London, shut her own of her old lif eand threw her into the new.

CONNIE MACK GETTING UP ANOTHER WINNING TEAM

Baseball Sharps Give the Word to Look Out for Athletics—Is Jack Barry on the Down-Grade?

In the opinion of baseball sharps who have been watching the Athletics in practice stunts at Shibe park Connie Mack is building up another winning ball club. Ever since the veteran manager disrupted his champions in 1915 by selling Eddie Collins Jack Barry, Frank Baker and other stars he has vainly tried to produce another first-class combination. But this year Mack has more and better material with which to work, and already his team begins to look formidable in every department.

Vean Gregg, the veteran southpaw has been passed up because of his refusal to accept terms, and Lawton Witt, the blonde-haired shortstop has been similarly treated. But Mack has fourteen pitchers in training and points to their work in practice with evident pride. The star ho man of the Athletics is Scott Perry, the big right-hander who won twenty-one games last year in spite of the fact that the Mackmen were tailenders. Another capable harler is Jing Johnson, who was developing rapidly in 1917 when he was called to the colors. Seibold, the midget also has returned after seeing service in France, and is doing finely.

Still another firstclass hurler is Roland Naylor, just discharged from the army, who pitched great ball year before last. Mack still retains Watson, Geary and Anderson, who showed quality in 1918, while the other pitchers are Holmes, Pierson Leagacre, Three-Fingered Keefe, Gowell, Kinney, a former Red Sox recruit of much promise; Baker, a southpaw, and Gullman. Three catchers, Perkins, McAvoy and Berger are handling the staff, and Perkins begins to look like one of the best receivers in the American league.

Mack is well satisfied with the players who will fill the positions outside of the batteries. When all of these men have reported Mr. McGillicuddy will probably have George Burns on first base, Grover or Shannon on second, Ray Bates on third and Dugan at shortstop. Fred Thomas, who was a member of the Red Sox in the last world's series, is the leading utility infielder.

In the Athletics' outfield Mac will have Kopp, Walger and Roth, all heavy batsmen. In fact, the team will be stronger in stick work than at any time since the days of Collins, Baker, Barry, McInnis, Strunk Schang and others. Burns, Walker, other and Bates should bat in the .300 class beyond a question of doubt with the other regulars rendering valuable aid in slamming the enemy pitchers. It is well, therefore, to keep your eyes on the Mack men!

Jack Coombs Up Against It.

Jack Coombs, who has succeeded Pat Moran as manager of the Phillies, is up against a hard proposition. He has lost Bradley Hogg who pitched good ball for Moran last year, the big hurler having decided to practice law in future. Coombs, therefore, must depend on four experienced boxmen, Jacobs Packard, Oeschger and Mule Watson, when the pennant race begins. Prendergast, a fairly capable pitcher, is recovering from an attack of influenza, and is thirty-five pounds under weight. The Phillies' young hurlers have displayed inferior quality and will have to be released. Perhaps Coombs, when warm weather arrives, may do some pitching himself. The Phillies will have Luderus, Morgan, Bancroft and Baird in the infield, with Whitted, Williams and the ancient Cravath in the outfield; also Adams and Cady behind the bat. Coombs will have to perform a miracle to keep his team out of the National League's cellar.

Barry May Give Way To Shean.

After serving more than a year in the navy, Jack Barry has returned to the Boston Red Sox in poor shape, it is said. Never a powerful batsman, Barry played a wonderful second base for the Beaneaters in 1917 During his absence last year Dave Shean covered the middle bag in splendid style and hung up a batting average of .264 in 115 games. Barry's lack of condition and his former speed have resulted in the reappearance of Shean at the Keystone sack in the Florida practice games, and the latter is expected to remain on the Boston team until Barry recovers his grip.

Barry has been playing in the American league since 1908, when he broke in with the Athletics. He has participated in six world's series and will celebrate his thirty-second birthday on April 26. Shean covered second base for the Cincinnati Reds in 1917, but was waived out of the National league as a result of weak batting. But he became a new man as soon as he joined the Red Sox a year ago, possibly for the reason that he is a native Bostonian.

LEAFS TO OPEN SEASON APRIL 30

NEW READING CLUB MAY BE MANAGED BY HARRY LAJOIE.

Reading has been admitted to the International League, and the circuit is now complete. Mayor Edward H. Filbert and a syndicate of business men are backing the new club, and it is reported that Larry Lajoie will manage the Pennsylvania club, assisted by Steve Yerkes, the former Boston infielder, who is a resident of Reading. Local fans are, however inclined to sceptical in regard to the Lajoie story. The noted slugger recently announced that he was through with baseball for all time and that he would not play again for love of money. Then again, both the Toronto and Indianapolis clubs have claims to his services. Pres. McCaffery's appeal against the decision of the National Commission awarding Lajoie to the Indians has never been adjusted.

The Newark franchise has been awarded to Pat Donovan, former manager of the Syracuse, Buffalo and Hamilton teams. It is stated authoritatively that Donovan has obtained strong financial support from both Newark and non-resident capitalists. No names were mentioned, but Donovan will manage the team himself, and the officials of the club will be announced after a meeting to be held next week.

The Newark club has leased the old Federal League grounds at Harrison, and will play the opening game of the season there against the Toronto team on Wednesday, April 30. On the same day the other six clubs will begin the season as follows.

Buffalo at Jersey City; Rochester at Baltimore and Binghamton at Reading.

The season's playing schedule, after some necessary changes, have been made to suit the Reading Club and will be published on April 21.

The Beavers.

The Michigan-Ontario League team of Kitchener will be nicknamed the Beavers, according to an announcement made by the management yesterday. Manager Jack Beatty will report for duty on Tuesday to make preparations for the opening of the training season on April 28. To date there are about twenty players trying to make a place on the team. The athletic grounds will be improved, so as to make the diamond conform with the regulations.

GIVE DEMPSEY THE ONCE OVER

TORONTO SPORTING FRATERNITY WITNESS WORK OF NOTED RING ARTIST.

Toronto, April 14.—Through the Sportsmen's Patriotic Association's boxing and wrestling show at Massey Hall on Saturday night Toronto's fans were given an opportunity to look over Jack Dempsey, challenger for the heavyweight boxing championship of the world and the opponent of Willard in the title bout to be fought on July 4. Undoubtedly he created a favorable impression, although his few minutes in the ring did not make him extend himself or for that matter really warm up, but he showed enough to warrant the prediction that there is no man in the game today weighing close to two hundred pounds that would be able to stand up to him for more than ten rounds.

Dempsey sparred through four rounds, which were more to show the audience how clever he really is than anything else, taking on the huge negro, John Lester Johnson, for two rounds, and then concluding with two more rounds with Dan Daley, a giant but veteran mitt slinger, who has a nine-round draw to his credit with Willard. Johnson contented himself with taking half-hearted swings at Dempsey's body and by bracing his body on the ropes where he could stop his opponent's swings with his massive shoulders. Meanwhile Dempsey danced about the ring and ducked and jabbed in lightweight fashion, his style closely resembling that of Jack Britton. Daley, however, jabbed Dempsey a couple of times on the chin in the opening minute of the first round, and then probably regretted it the rest of the evening, for Dempsey crossed a left and right to Daley's jaw which brought visions of dreamland to the veteran, but he managed to hang on long enough to last out the round, and in the last round kept distinctly away from Mr. Dempsey. They used eight-ounce gloves.

Of two evils some men choose the lesser—unless there is more money in the other one.

JACK DEMPSEY SAYS HE WILL BE THE NEXT FISTIC CHAMPION

Famous Challenger Tells Toronto Interviewer That He is Satisfied That He Can Dispose of Jess Willard.

Toronto, April 14.—"I have all the confidence in the world that I can whip Jess Willard when we come together. A comparison of Willard's record and mine shows that I am a much harder hitter than the present champion, and I am sure that he will feel my punches when I plant my rights and lefts in his stomach. I am anxiously waiting for the day to come for me to get in the ring with the Kansan for I know that when I leave the ring after the bout I will be the heavyweight champion of the world."

Thus spoke Jack Dempsey, the rugged Salt Lake City heavyweight boxer, who is to meet Jess Willard for the world's championship title on July 4th next upon his arrival here Saturday. At night the fans got a chance to size up this hustling, bustling youngster when he made his appearance at the S.P.A. show at Massey Hall in an exhibition bout with John L. Johnston, the giant negro boxer. Dempsey and his managers, Barney Gerard and Ed Shafer put up at the King Edward Hotel.

When asked his weight Dempsey said that he tipped the scales at 195 pounds, which is about the figure that he has been weighing in for bouts in the last year

"I certainly feel fine when I weigh around 195 pounds, and that is just about what I will weigh when I face Willard," said Dempsey.

As he took off his shirt and collar the big muscles in his arms bulged out and it could be seen that he was trained to the minute, and that he would not need much very hard work to get him ready for his title scrap.

Dempsey is not a boaster and he will not volunteer any information about himself unless he is questioned. But if he is asked anything he will give a good, clear and concise answer. He is a very gentlemanly young man of 23 years, and he was a busy man finding chairs and places for his guests to sit down when he was visited by the scribes.

"Do you think that you are big enough to box Willard,"? Dempsey was asked by one of the newspapermen.

"I most certainly do," replied Dempsey almost as soon as the question was finished. "I have more things in my favor than a good many people imagine. I am young, strong and can hit and when Willard feels the sting of some of my wallops in his stomach he will back away from me. I do not intend to allow Jess one second's rest when I face him, and I believe that he will go down from my body blows just like so many of my opponents have in the past two years. I am just as big as many of the champions of the past and if you will look up the records I am a bigger man than Jim Corbett, Bob Fitzsimmons and some of the other great stars of former years."

Dempsey said that Willie Meehan the Pacific Coast boxer, was a fair boxer, but that Willie was not very anxious to engage in a ten round bout with him. Jack inferred that Willie knew that he would be rocked to sleep inside of ten rounds if they ever met over that route.

In talking of Dempsey one thing stood out more than anything else and that was the confidence which the big fellow has in himself for his coming scrap with Jess Willard.

Sporting Gossip

Bill Pickens remarked to us the other day that Tex Rickard had informed him that the Willard-Dempsey contest would be held "any place in the United States but Reno." That ought to boost the Reno stock considerably.

After reading over the boxing bill reported to have been indorsed by leading reformers in New York State, one is impelled to wonder why they didn't put in a provision prohibiting the contestants from hitting each other.

However, in some of the ten round, no decision contests Americans have seen in the last few years, the principals never could be convicted of a violation of the anti-striking clause.

Somehow or other, we can't sympathize a whole lot with the poor unfortunates who are struggling with their income tax schedules. We sympathize a whole lot more with those who don't have to file any.

"It is one of the most slimy, loathsome deals I have ever encountered compared with which porch climbing and burglary are gentlemanly occupations," casually remarked a Toronto judge in discussing a case before him. What would the temperance judge say if some wrestling deals were called to his attention?

GOLF EXPERT MAY PLAY IN CANADA

"CHICK" EVANS IS PLANNING SERIES OF GAMES IN THIS COUNTRY.

Information comes from authentic sources that Charles ("Chick") Evans, jr., of Chicago, national open and amateur golf champion who made such an enviable reputation in golf circles last year, is making plans for a series of games in Canada this year, the receipts of which will be in aid of the Red Cross Society. The series will extend over a month and will include his appearance at St. Andrew's in the East and any other clubs who desire his presence while working his way towards Vancouver. The idea of the tour was suggested to Col. Noel Marshall, President of the Red Cross Society, who passed it on to the Royal Canadian Golf Club for their approval. The Canadian Pacific Railway officials have condescended to place the road at the disposal of Mr. Evans during the trip. Several other suggestions have been made including the pairing of Francis Ouimet, of Boston, with Evans for the trip. Another has been that George S. Lyon, amateur champion of Canada be asked to play against Evans in the West.

The Difference Between

A nice looking garment and a shoddy garment is Quality.

A well fitting suit and a poor fitting suit is Finish.

And between particular dressers and indifferent dressers is Discretion.

One may invest a lot of money in clothes and then be disappointed in their appearance.

These differences make up series — poor or good.

We endeavor to cater to particular women, and our lines of Spring Suits, Coats, Dresses, Blouses and Skirts were selected with the object of giving superior service to our patrons.

OBITUARY

MRS. JAMES M'EWAN.

(Davidson Leader.)

Within the past week the hand of death has removed an ancient landmark and Davidson has been deprived of its oldest resident. In the passing of Mrs. McEwan a "mother in Israel" has been called from the church militant to the church triumphant. After a brief illness and without much suffering, in the peace and quiet of Sunday morning last, her spirit stole away.

Mrs. McEwan, relict of the late James McEwan, whom she survived twenty-six years, was born in Cavan, Peterborough County, Ontario, May 25th, 1834. She had, therefore, attained the great age of 85 years, 10 months and 12 days. With her husband, who came from Dunblane, Scotland, she migrated to the West in 1888, settling in the Elgin district, Manitoba, then forty miles distant from a railway. The town of Elgin was subsequently built on their farm. Though Mr. and Mrs. McEwan remained lifelong staunch Presbyterians, their house in those pioneer days was always a home for the preacher, irrespective of his denomination. Mrs. McEwan is survived by a sister, Mrs. Brisbane, aged 89 years, who resides in Cobourg, Ont. Only two out of Mrs. McEwan's family of ten are now living, namely, a son, who resides in Elgin, and her daughter, Mrs. W. J. Robinson, of Davidson, at whose home she died. Since coming to Davidson in 1903, Mrs. McEwan endeared herself to the people of this community by her deeds of thoughtful kindness and her disposition of genial good nature.

Rev. H. Joyce conducted a funeral service in Mr. Popplewell's undertaking parlors on Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock, in which Rev. Mr. Henderson of the Methodist church also took part. The body was taken to the station for shipment to Elgin, where interment will be made. Mrs. W. J. Robinson and her son, Fletcher, accompanied the remains.

Among the floral contributions were noted: Sprays from Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Curtis, Mrs. Jno. Donald, Miss M. A. Munroe, Mr. and Mrs. T. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. D. S. Hutcheon.

MRS. A. G. WALMSLEY.

Evalyn Overholt, wife of Dr. A. G. Walmsley, passed away last night at 10:45 o'clock after a lingering illness, aged 37 years.

Deceased was born at Newmarket, Ont., and came to Peterborough with her husband ten years ago last December. She was a graduate of Hiram College, Ohio. She leaves her husband and a number of relatives in St. Catharines and Buffalo.

At the home of G. S. McKee, 559 Water street, this evening at 8:30 service will be held, and tomorrow morning the remains will be taken to Buffalo via the 5:12 C.P.R. train and interment will be made in Forest Lawn Mausoleum.

DIVIDING INDEMNITIES IS CERTAIN TO MAKE TROUBLE

Belgium and Other Smaller Allies not Likely to be Satisfied with 15 per cent of Total That Conference Proposes to Give Them

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, April 15.—The problem of preparation settlements still has troublesome times before it in connection with the question of the distribution of the indemnities to be paid by Germany. The smaller powers which suffered under the German invasion and devastation are still to be heard relative to their shares of the reparation fund, particularly Belgium the claims of which are entitled to first consideration under vaarious pre-conference pledges.

The tentative scheme of distribution which Great Britain and France have advanced apportions between 80 and 90 per cent., probably 85 per cent., of time the total sum realised to three big powers, leaving perhaps 15 per cent. to satisfy demands of Belgium Italy, Serbia, Rumania, Russia and others. This is a smaller proportion than the secondary powers expected and they are almost sure to be dissatisfied with it. It has been suggested among the experts of the Reparations Commission that Rumania Serbia and other nations have received reparations through the acquisition of territory, but this reasoning will scarcely appeal to Belgium.

FARMERS AND CITIZENS HEAR AN EXPERT'S VIEWS ON GOOD ROADS

Deputy Minister McLean Addresses Meeting of Farmers' Club in S. O. E. Hall—E M. Elliott's Contentions Dealt With by Speaker

No more illuminating address upon the good roads question was in all probability ever given in Peterboro than that of W. A. McLean, Deputy Minister of Highways, delivered before a large audience composed of members of the local branch of the U.F.O. in the Sons of England Hall, last night.

Mr. McLean at the outset remarked that instead of asking him to explain the advantages of the Provincial Highway Improvement system it would be more in order for some of the representative men of the county of Peterborough to explain to him why they had not long since taken advantage of the Government assistance offered.

He stated that he had watched the counties of the province coming into the fold one by one and knew that some one of them would be the last but at that time never dreamed that the large and important County of Peterborough would hold the place at the foot of the procession.

At the conclusion of his address the Deputy Minister of Highways reminded his auditors in a charmingly candid manner that the Provincial Government system for granting aid to the counties for highway improvement was giving satisfaction to every other county in the province and was at the disposal of Peterborough if she chose to accept it. He felt the issue here had been beclouded by the introduction of questions of minor importance, discussions which did anything but clear up the question and reminded them that like Johnny, Peterborough was the only county in the Province in step. He assured his hearers that when the time came that the revenue to be devoted to road improvement permitted, the percentage payable towards maintenance would certainly be increased but not until then. He felt that it was far from likely that the Government would change a system which was affording the greatest satisfaction throughout the province just because the County of Peterborough—the one province in Ontario— demanded that the Act be changed before she would consent to become identified with the movement.

The Growth of the System

Mr. McLean described the growth of the county road improvement movement since its inception in 1901. He told of the advantage to a rural community of good roads all of which have been discussed numberless times at meetings in this county and with everyone is more or less familiar.

The county road system was bound to be of advantage to every farmer residing in that county even though he might not live in close proximity to the improved highway yet some time or other he used it especially as the road chosen for improvement was invariably one of the main arteries of the county and generally led to the market town.

He explained the organization necessary for carrying out the county highway improvement work. A road superintendent was chosen by the county and his appointment endorsed by the Department of Highways. He was the man who was in immediate charge of the carrying on of the work.

Drainage Essential

Speaking of construction Mr. McLean stated that this would be carried out to an extent determined by demands and power to spend. Roads were constructed of earth, gravel, stone and bituminous metals. He dwelt upon the importance of drainage, stating that in the opinion of the Department it was absolutely important that a road be well drained before any attempt was made to improve it. Top dressing laid upon a road not properly drained was thrown away.

Under the Highway Improvement Act the Government allowed forty per cent of construction and twenty per cent of maintenance. He pointed out an important distinction here. The Government paid forty per cent of the total amount expended not forty per cent of the sixty per cent. In other words if $1,000 was to be spent on construction the Government would pay $600.

Difference in Highways.

Mr. McLean explained the difference between the ordinary county road and the Provincial County road. The latter were 14 feet wide instead of from 8 to 10 feet. The amounts of assistance granted by the government towards the building of a Provincial County road was 60 per cent of construction and a similar amount for maintenance. The reason for the increased assistance was that these roads stood up better under heavy traffic owing to the increased width of their top and while more expensive to construct were more permanent.

The Deputy Minister of Highways gave some information of a most interesting nature regarding the amount being expended by the different counties under the Road System per mile of construction. This of course varied according to the local conditions existing. Where the material was easily obtained a road could be built much cheaper than in a county where the stone or other material had to be drawn many miles. In Peterborough County he understood material for road construction was close at hand.

How Peterborough Missed It

Mr. McLean figured that in the past ten years the county of Peterborough has spent upon her roads in actual cash the sum of $350,000 through township expenditure, county grants and statute labor. All this money was spent and Peterborough might just as well have been receiving Government assistance all that time. He drew attention to the handsome sum which would have been paid back for construction and Creditable Record of the G.W.V.A.

What is the Great War Veterans' Association?

The Great War Veteran's Association has been responsible for obtaining more than $2,000,000 in settlement of claims advanced on account of widows, orphans, soldiers' dependents and veterans of the great war.

It led in the agitation which resulted in the M. S. A., and was largely responsible for the increase in pensions, separation allowances, post discharge pay end war bonus, the extension of vocational training facilities and improvement in treatment given to comrades returned to Canada.

No organisation had more to do with the Ontario and Dominion Governments setting aside twenty-seven million dollars for town planning and housing during the period of reconstruction.

The problems of the returned soldiers and the dependents of those who will never return can be adjusted by the G. W. V. A. with greater satisfaction than is possible through any other organization in the Dominion of Canada.

The G. W. V. A. extends a hearty welcome to all returned men to call at their club rooms with any grievance they may have, such as:

Difficulties with pay;

Assistance in finding employment;

Arranging for vocational training;

Adjustment of pensions;

To help and advise the widows and orphans of those who have paid the supreme sacrifice.

The service of the G. W. V. A. is entirely at the service of all returned men in matters of this description.

The G. W. V. A. is glad to welcome every returned soldier and give them advice and help at any time.

It is the desire of the G. W. V. A. that every returned soldier should get a square deal, and even more to help each returned soldier back to civil life and civil activity.

S. WHATLE,
Secretary.

Why Price Of Butter Is Abnormal

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, April 15.—Reduced stocks of butter in storage on April 1 are shown in the report of the cost of living branch to the Minister of Labor. The total amount of creamery butter in storage was 1,778,290 pounds, 69 per cent. less than last month and 17½ per cent. less than last year. Dairy butter also shows a shortage of approximately 75 per cent. The increase in prices is partially due to an increased international price rising to higher levels than the present Canadian price and to shortage of the supply in Canada.

LIMERICK UNDER MILITARY RULE

NO ONE ALLOWED TO ENTER CITY WITHOUT MARTIAL ORDER

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Limerick, April 16.—Factories and stores in Limerick were closed today except the provision and bread shops. During the night military enforcing martial law in this region erected barriers across all roads entering the city and no persons except those with military permits were allowed to pass Strike notices given by railroad men expire at mid-night tonight. Officers efforts are being made to bring out the employees on all the Irish railroads. The length of the Limerick strike, it is believe, depends on success of the movement. No disorders have been reported.

HOLD OUT HOPE TO THE POSTMEN

MR. ROWELL SAYS TROUBLE LIKELY SETTLED BY MAY 1st.

Ottawa, April 15. — Hon. N. W Rowell made a statement in the House of Commons with regard to the result of the conferences between the Government and representatives of the letter carriers and postal clerks in Canada. He said that the conferences were attended by representatives of the Amalgamated Postal Workers, the Dominion of Postal Clerks' Association, and representatives of the letter carriers The conferences were most amicable.

The request of the representatives of the various organisations present was for certain changes in salaries bonuses, etc. The Government had informed the delegates that a re-classification of the service was now under way and that no action could be taken until this was completed. The situation, as it now stood, was that the re-classification would wipe out all existing wage schedules and also nullify the differential between East and West. Men would be paid on the basis of work done no matter what section of the country they resided in. The new schedule would be dated back to April 1. It was hoped, said Mr. Rowell, to introduce the re-classification of the service on or about the first day of May.

CANADIANS EARN NEW HONORS ON RUSSIANFRONT

SIX HUNDRED IN THAT FIELD PRAISED BY GENERAL IRONSIDE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, April 15.—Six hundred Canadian troops, mostly artillery, are serving with the Allied forces in Northern Russia, on the Archangel and Murmansk fronts, it has been learned here. The sixteenth brigade Canadian field artillery, is the principle unit, but there are drafts from infantry and various services, including many men from the Klondike, accustomed to Arctic conditions. Canadians have at all times borne the full share of fighting and General Ironside has frequently emphasied their efficiency.

This first engagement of the Canadian artillery was at Seletakauna on October 6, 1918, when the enemy attacked in force but were driven off Later the Canadian artillery was outranged and compelled to withdraw. On October 11, however, when the Bolshevik were advancing on the front and flanks, Canadian artillery stood their ground and did great execution at point blank range.

PECULIAR WILL MADE BY A FARMER NEAR LONDON, ONT.

London, Ont., April 15.—Because he uses tobacco, which, says the testator, "I despise," Frank Atwood, son of Squire Adolphus Atwood, who died recently at his home in the township of Lobo, is disinherited. Squire Atwood's original will, which has been entered here for probate, gave the son named an equal division with other sons and daughters. A codicil, however, calls attention to the objectionable use of the weed, and supplants the son by a grandson, Charlton Robb, as beneficiary.

Advice to Legatees.

The squire, in addition to dividing his estate of $17,250, gives to the legatees the following advice:

"I desire to leave my legatees four words which I have proved myself to be the key to success: Wisdom, Perseverance, Justice and Economy, and in addition I give this advice: Never buy what you do not want, and never buy on credit unless you have reasonable grounds for knowing you will be able to honor the obligation when due."

Two Transports On the Atlantic

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, April 15.—The Militia Department announces that the steamer Adriatic is expected at Halifax on April 20th and the Grampian at St John about the same date. Nearly two thousand are on the Adriatic, including cyclists for the Toronto district. The Grampian carries twelve hundred, including eight hundred dependents.

PEACE TREATY LIKELY TO BE SIGNED BY MIDDLE OF MAY

Germans to be Given Eight Days in Which to Study the Views Before Being Requested to Place Signatures on Dotted Lines

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, April 15.—Premier Orlando and President Wilson conferred for four and a half hours yesterday on the Adriatic question, but did not complete their work, which will be resumed on Wednesday morning. Hope was expressed that the question might be ready for the consideration of the Council of Four on Wednesday afternoon.

The Peace Conference secretary is busy completing arrangements for the meeting of the Peace Congress at Versailles. It is anticipated that the proceedings at Versailles will be of comparatively short duration. On the suggestion that the Germans will be given eight days in which to study the terms and communicate them to the German government, the middle of May has been suggested as not improbable as the date of the final exchange of signatures.

CAPT. BURNHAM RENEWS WAR ON TITLES OF HONOR

Warns Parliament That People Are Opposed to Such Decorations—Question Finally Goes to Special Committee.

Capt. J. H. Burnham in Parliament yesterday renewed his opposition to titles of honor for any Canadians. He said:

"We don't want titular honors at all," he said; "they should be voted out of existence; there should be no exceptions." Mr. Burnham added that the people of Canada do not want any compromise on this subject. "If we do not learn this," he said, "we will at the next election become aware that titles are not wanted." Mr. Burnham said in closing that the principle of social distinctions must be done away with.

The debate started when Mr. Wikle moved that an address be presented to the King praying that no further titles be conferred on British subjects domiciled or living in Canada, it being understood that the prayer had no reference "to professional or vocational appellations conferred in respect to commissions issued by your Majesty to persons in the military or naval services of Canada, or to persons engaged in the administration of justice of the Dominion."

Mr. Nickle argued that in a democratic country class distinctions as far as possible should be done away with and equality of citizenship established. A war for democracy had recently been fought. "Let us," Mr. Nickle declared, "in our first legislation do away with this class of distinctions, not of intellectual attainment, but with the class distinction that pretends to give one man simply by the virtue of an influence."

Mr. Nickle traced the institution of Knighthoods through the various orders from the creation of the Order of the Garter. He pointed out a privilege, but it conferred an obligation, for the Knight was obliged to give military service, so much so

Weather Prevents Atlantic Flight

St. John's, Nfld, April 15.—Weather conditions continue unfavorable for flying and it is unlikely that a start will be made today by any of the airman for the trans-Atlantic flight from Newfoundland, and rain fell throughout the night.

SUPREME COURT NOW IN SESSION

MR. JUSTICE LENNOX PRESIDING CASES SO FAR DISPOSED OF.

When the sittings of the Supreme Court commenced in Peterborough last night at 6:30 before Mr. Justice Lennox a motion to have his client, Mrs. Elizabeth H. Howe, appointed as committee of her husband's estate during the time he is confined to an insane asylum, was submitted by Mr. C. R. Widdifield. O. A. Langley appeared in the interests of the Inspector of Prisons and Public Charities. The claim was dismissed by the court.

Dredging Case.

A suit brought by Frederick D. Brown and John. A. Aylmer against William Dennon and Richard R. Rogers engaged the attention of the court during the remainder of last night's session, continued this morning, and was still in progress at 3.30 this afternoon.

In this action the plaintiffs claim $2858.21, made up as follows: Rental for dredge for 213 days at $18 a day (less $4421.79 paid by defendants on account), leaving a balance of $1212.21, and in addition damages for 147 days at the rate of $18 a day, making a total of $1646, which gives the amount the plaintiffs demand.

Claiming that the outfit was rented upon condition that they pay only for the days it was in use, the defendants present a counter claim of $1918.22, made up as the result of 43 days over-payment, loss of use of scow and other equipment.

Moore & Wearing appear for the plaintiffs in this action, while Porter, Butler and Payne of Belleville have charge of the defendants' interests, Mr. R. Gus Porter, M.P., presenting their case to the court.

The next case upon the docket is the action being brought by G. W. Hatton to quash the bylaw to build a sewer along McDonnel street to serve Mount St. Joseph.

Italians Object To the Jugo-Slavs

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, April 15.—The Credentials Committee of the Peace Conference has found a tangled problem in determining the status of the Jugo Slav delegates. They represent Serbia, Croatia, Slavonia, but Jugo-Slavia has not been recognized by the most of the Allies. In conference credentials from the new government are somewhat uncertain and the Italians are unwilling to approve them.

Ministers Killed By Communists

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, April 15.—A Copenhagen despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company says that the Acht Urh Blatt and the Abendblatt of Berlin print reports received from travellers to the effect that the Communists at Budapest have executed Archduke Joseph Dr. Alexander Wekerle, former Premier, and Baron Joseph Szeterenyi, Minister of Commerce. The report, the despatch says, has not been confirmed.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

TUESDAY, APRIL 15, 1919

PUBLIC BUILDING IN PETERBOROUGH.

IT HAS BEEN GENERALLY understood that a new Federal building was to be erected in Peterborough this year, money for which was voted before the war, the work being postponed, in common with nearly all public improvements in the country. It is not hard to recall, however, that Hon. F. B. Carvell, Minister of Public Works, on his visit to this city last winter, gave no definite assurance that this would be done. Even if ground is not broken for the work this year, it is not only possible but highly probable that works of much more real value to the city will be carried out.

The war leaves Canada saddled with the incalculable debt of two billion dollars, a burden which it will require years of close figuring to wipe out. The war-wasted countries of Europe, the allies that stood so bravely by the Empire for four dark and dangerous years, must be assisted. The latest announcement is that Italy is to be extended a credit of twenty-five million dollars and Belgium a like amount. This means that Canadian goods to that value are to be sent to the countries in question, and that the Canadian Government will pay for their manufacture, accepting the bonds of Italy and Belgium for final payment. The two cases cited are only a drop in the bucket, and other allied countries are to be assisted in the same way.

The manufacture of goods for foreign countries would mean a vastly greater benefit for Peterborough than the erection of a public building, which can well be dispensed with for another year or two. The former expenditure, as a financial proposition, has everything to recommend it. If the object is to create work for the masses, then the revival of legitimate manufacture is the solution.

There is scarcely an industry, there is hardly a wage-earner, in the city who will not be benefited by the announced national program of bidding for the foreign market. It will make work for the army of employes of the Quaker Oats Company, the majority of whom are now idle. The C. G. E., the makers of agricultural machinery, in short, almost every business in the city will be revived, and men and women will be employed in well-paid lines with which they are familiar by experience. The erection of a Federal building would mean work for a limited number of laborers and skilled mechanics. Besides all this, establishing trade relations with Europe now will mean a permanent foothold for Canada in the overseas markets for all time to come and will bring about such national prosperity as Canada has never seen.

The country is faced with new and tremendous financial burdens. Canada has been raked fore and aft to raise money for carrying on the war. Peterborough is already assured of a $50,000 grant for the bridge, and another outlay to complete the Trent Canal. With the promised Government assistance to local industries should not the citizens, for the time being at least, possess themselves in patience? There is a better day coming. Once the ocean traffic can be brought back to the normal, an industrial revival on an unprecedented scale is a moral certainty. The sun always shines behind the cloud.

WHY JUMP ON LABOR?

IN HIS COMMUNICATION in The Review yesterday Mr. [illegible] H. Dobbin states a number of cold facts which cannot be controverted. The price of labor is high in Peterborough, and this has an important bearing upon the cost of the proposed Hunter street bridge.

But why single out labor either for comment or comparison? If labor is high as to price, the same can be said of everything else in the community. Why all these intimations that the wages of the workingmen should be reduced without a corresponding decrease in the price of commodities? Why not suggest, for example, that the producer reduce the price of foodstuffs the manufacturer that of clothing and shoes, and that the steel and cement men cut the ruling price of their wares to the end that Peterborough may build a bridge at a reasonable figure? If there is to be a reduction in one item of the expenditure, then the decrease must be general. Any one-sided policy is certain to engender trouble which it is so desirable to avoid in these days of general unrest and uncertainty.

RACIAL EQUALITY.

THERE WILL NEVER BE anything approaching racial equality on earth until the human race has advanced by evolution or otherwise many centuries ahead of any universal standard which it has yet attained. All the people in the world are not created free and equal. There may in some quarters exist a pleasant sentimental fiction that they are so born, but the cold facts are against the theory, and it is the fittest that survive. The race is still to the swift and the battle to the strong.

Every nation on earth with few exceptions has its race problem, and none of these are so serious as the complications that arise between the powers over the same question. It was social strife for the mastery that [illegible] with such chronicles. It was racial jealousy that kept the nations of Europe so far apart all these years, and finally plunged the world into the bloodiest war on record.

It is bad enough to have the people of a nation wrangling over lingual and religious differences. Such contentions are possible of settlement. There is nothing repulsive in the suggestion that all differences may be finally effaced by intermarriage. But the problem is a graver issue when, for physical and mental reasons, such a blending of the different racial elements is an impossibility. The race problem can never be disposed of in the United States, as some theorists have suggested, by the intermarriage of the blacks and whites until all traces of African origin have disappeared. The Chinese and the Japanese cannot be amalgamated by the Caucasians by any similar process.

The League of Nations has decided to deny the request of the Japanese that they be placed on an equality with the white races of Europe and America. To grant this would be to tear down the immigration walls that keep in check the influx of the Japanese to this continent, and which would soon result in the domination of the western world by the "little brown men" of Japan. The Pacific states of the southern republic have for years been fighting against just such a menace, and the opposition to the settlement of the Japanese in America has kept the republic under a constant cloud of war.

The world is still facing perplexing problems. By force of numbers in the Conference the Japanese may have lost on this issue, but it has yet to be demonstrated that they will remain as members of the League of Nations so long as this concession is denied them.

ANONYMOUS LETTERS.

THE LINDSAY POST, which these days is publishing some unusually excellent editorial matter, has the following admirable article on anonymous letters in a recent issue:

> Next to the problem of trying to save his soul, the chief worry, perhaps, with which the average editor has to contend, is the anonymous correspondent. In dealing with his contributions, the newspaper man often occupies a position between the devil and the deep sea. If he blue pencils or deletes the communication or refuses to give it space in the columns of his paper, he offends the writer, while on the other hand, if the communication is published it calls down the maledictions of indignant citizens because of certain reflections and charges which it may contain.
>
> The anonymous correspondent, like the poor, has been always with us, and a great many of them are in the habit of making the newspapers the scapegoat or the medium through which they can hurl veiled insinuations and veiled attacks on those in public life or against institutions or organizations. In spite of a rigid censorship, certain contributions are so worded that whatever sting they may contain is not always detected by the newspaper man. The result is that the newspaper sanctum is often invaded by indignant citizens who express their contempt for the anonymous writer in no uncertain terms, and wind up by lecturing the editor, who is himself the victim and dupe of the writer.
>
> In criticising the activities of corporations or institutions, as well as the record of any public official through the columns of a newspaper, a writer should not hesitate to allow his name to be published, if his criticism is honest and sincere, and if he is prompted by the proper motive. This should be the attitude of all correspondents, and in order to encourage this departure from the old stereotyped and decidedly unfair practice of appending a nome de plume to press communications, the Post intends in future to refuse all communications sent in for publication unless the writers are prepared to have their names attached thereto. We will also reserve the right to refuse any communication which we feel should not be published.

The Post is right. The newspaper is responsible for everything that appears in its columns. And no reputable journal should allow itself to be used as a vehicle to carry abuse from one party to another. The traducer of the reputation of a public or private citizen should not be sheltered. Let him speak out in meeting or keep quiet.

But the most reprehensible variety of anonymous letter is that which a paper prints as a reflection on a contemporary. That is gutter journalism sunk to the lowest level. But almost any sort of anonymous letter carries a hidden sting or innuendo that may escape the notice of any but the members of a certain circle and which the editor may innocently enough overlook. Not all signed communications should be published. The waste paper basket is the place for those letters which have no higher purpose than to stir up ill feeling in the community.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

THE INFLUENCE of those dark lantern sessions of the Peace Conference has affected even Ald. Phelan and his bridge committee.

● ● ● ● ●

THE NATION that annexes territory belonging to a conquered rival is simply laying up for itself the cause of another war in the future.

● ● ● ● ●

PROHIBITION has at least encouraged invention by producing an army of experts in the compounding of strange beverages warranted to contain a punch.

● ● ● ● ●

PROBABLY it will be easier to understand current events of note if it is recalled to what extent the great game of bluff forms the national pastime of some people.

● ● ● ● ●

ANYWAY, if the parlor bolshevist is a product of the war, he must be some kin to the lily-fingered officer whose military serenity was never disturbed by the sound of guns.

● ● ● ● ●

IF THE PRESENT tendency is kept up even the burglars will be striking against night work, but will insist upon carrying on during the more comfortable hours of daylight.

● ● ● ● ●

THE FRAMERS of the League of Nations have been unable to please all parties, but the Peterborough aldermen dealing with the bridge question have confronted the same difficulty.

● ● ● ● ●

THE RECORDS SHOW that there were 51,000 Smiths in the United States overseas forces. Probably it is this huge family that is responsible for the claim that the Americans won the war.

● ● ● ● ●

IF UNCLE SAM decides to give the Philippines self-government, it is a cinch that the islanders cannot do much worse than some other races that have been entrusted with the same priceless gift.

● ● ● ● ●

WHY BE SO SEVERE in judgment of our American neighbors? If they claim the credit for winning the war, they are disposed to admit that the Canadian forces held the line till Uncle Sam's soldiers got ready to lend a hand.

OPEN NEW TENDERS FOR HUNTER STREET BRIDGE MONDAY NIGHT

Ald. McIntyre Urges the Speeding Up on Plans For Bridge Piers at London Street.

The City Fathers, in special session last evening, agreed on a resolution by Ald. Phelan and Taylor, to return Mr. P. Sheehy's cheque deposited with his tender on the Hunter street bridge, he having declined to tender on the amended plans.

These amended plans and specifications, tenders for which are invited to be in hand by Monday, April 21st call for the following alterations:

1.—Elimination of the granite concrete facing below the floor of the bridge and the substitution of concrete of the same class as in the adjoining sections of the bridge, with rubbed finish.

2.—Elimination of the granite masonry and the substitution of concrete of the same class as the rest of the work adjoining.

3.—Elimination of the panel work under the river span of the bridge.

4.—Elimination of the sidewalks and curbs over the earth fill in the approaches.

5.—Shortening of the earth fill approach on the west side of the river to make a grade in this approach of four per cent., the length to be determined by Mr. Barber to accomplish this, and there to be no filling west of the point where the grade begins.

7.—The reduction of the width of the bridge by nine feet.

The original motion in this connection provided that any tenderer on the first plans for the new bridge be given back his cheque on application to the city clerk, but debate resulted in its change to serve Mr Sheehy alone.

Ald. McIntyre was inclined to the opinion that the cheques of all tenderers on the original plans should be held until the contract on the amended plans is awarded, in case of a reversion of the original specifications However, as Mr. Sheehy has declined to submit a new tender, he withdrew his opposition.

Ald. Morrison contended that all cheques should be held until Monday night, when the new tenders are opened.

Ald. Gainey concurred in this view "There may not be any tenders at all on the new plans," he said, "and besides Council might decide to adopt the original ones, in which case the tenderers could be held to their bids by means of their deposit cheques Should there be no tenders to hand Monday night and all cheques deposited with the last tenders have been returned, the whole work, so far proceeded with, will be upset."

After the Engineer.

Ald. McIntyre wanted to know what work had been done in regard to plans for piers for the London street bridge "Two months ago," he said, "the engineer was instructed to prepare those plans, but I have heard nothing of them yet."

Ald. Phelan replied that the engineer was waiting to get the soundings first.

Ald. McIntyre asked the delay in taking the soundings. He would like to see this work pushed and the piers ready, if possible for the old Hunter street bridge when removed for building the new structure.

His Worship here explained that at first the ice had been too thick to secure soundings through, then it was too rotten and now the water is so high he would not ask the engineer to risk his life at the work.

TO-DAY'S STORY

"What was your most thrilling experience?" a naval officer was asked.

The officer had spent perilous days on what is called a "hush" ship. Danger was his daily portion He has experienced all the emotions of the Battle of Jutland scraps with minor craft, with Zeppelins and other creatures of the air.

To his ship, for more than two years was alloted the dangerous task of strewing death, in the form of mines, in Heligoland Bight, and close in to the German coast.

At first the officer refused to answer, but finally he laughed, "I will" he said, "because it is a joke. It was very real at the time.

"We were going out to Hunland (he said) on our usual stunt. We were full up with primed mines, forty tons of high explosive on board. You know what that means? A stray shot from a U-boat, even striking a submerged object, and—(here he gave his shoulders a little fatalistic shrug. It is a curious fact that nearly all men who carry their lives in their hands are fatalists)—well, we wouldn't know anything about it!

"We were bowling along at a good 30 knots against time. I was on the bridge in charge. It was just the grey of dawn, and the sea was lumpy a bit.

Mine Right Ahead

"Suddenly, straight ahead, I observed a round object just dipping above the surface of the water. It was not more than a hundred yards ahead, and I saw some horns sticking out of it. It was a floating mine, and straight in our path. There was no escape.

"We were on it, at the rate we were travelling, before any order could be given to alter the course. There surged into my mind the fact that we were loaded with 'eggs' and that it was certain death.

"It is impossible to describe the sensation which passed through the whole of my body—pain and horror, but a blood-curdling fear predominated. I felt myself break out in a sweat, and I gripped the rail of the bridge shut my eyes and waited for the bump.

"Nothing happened. I opened my eyes and heard a brother officer say 'Hullo! Feeling ill?'

" 'It's alright,' I said.

" 'I saw you turn green,' he replied 'and grip the rail. Thought you were going over the side."

" 'Look behind the boat in the water and tell me what you see,' To tell you the truth I hadn't the pluck to look myself.

"I can only see a big bunch of weeds," he said.

"I looked round and there, sure enough, was a tangle of weeds rising and falling with the swell. To me that weed was a mine. I fancy the horns which I saw were stumps of the weed.

"There, you have my most "thrilling adventure,' but I don't want anymore of than kind, thanks. Have a cigarette!"

WIT AND WISDOM

A Swindle.

"Newspapers nowadays are a swindle," said the man who likes a lot for his money. "Everything in them is condensed, cut down almost to nothing. They are not worth buying."

"I differ," said another member of the company. "A modern newspaper to my mind, is a marvel of production. Why! for a mere coin you get something for all classes of the community. The politician, the sportsman, the financier, the theatre-goer the literary man, all are catered to There's something in it for everybody and everything in it interests somebody."

"Then whom does this interest?" asked the first speaker, pointing to the stop press column, which happened to be blank.

"Oh! That," replied the other "proves my argument; it's for those who can't read."

maintenance had this $350,000 been spent under the Good Roads System. History would repeat itself in this conection and unless Peterborough identified herself with the movement in the near future she would continue to lose the Government assistance.'

The usual rate levied by County Roads for carrying on their work under the Highway Improvement Act was from 1½ to 3 mills, though many counties had gone far above that on levying as high as 7 mills. That was up to the County and the Government left the matter of how much they would spend entirely in their own hands. Whether that would raise the amount to be expended on good roads by debentures or annual levy or by a combination of both was another matter which was left strictly with the County.

Mr. McLean dealt with many of the arguments which had been used against the County Roads System by its detractors in this county and showed the falacy of them. For one thing he stated that it was quite possible for a county to get out of the System should they so desire before the three years time prescribed in the Highways Improvement Act. A technicality afforded the desired opening but no county so far which had ever gone into the system ever wanted out again.

Mr. McLean explained how the cities were forced to contribute towards the construction and maintenance of good roads throughout the county. They were reached by the Suburban Area Act which provided for the addition of 1½ mills to the assessment of the city to be devoted to constructing and maintaining the roads leading into the corporation upon which the traffic was heavy as a result of the concentrated traffic.

E. M. Elliott's Contention

The license revenues derived from auto owners in the city was also devoted to building county highways and right here Mr. McLean dealt with the argument of Mr. Elliott's which has appeared in the press of the city upon many occasions in regard to auto tax being returned to the county in which it was raised. Mr. McLean reminded the County Clerk last night that this was a source of Government revenue and as such could be handled by the Government as they saw fit. They were not obliged to return it to any county and the counties would have as much much right to demand the return of revenue raised within their confines from any other source as they had in conection with that derived from the auto license fees. He further stated in answer to an objection of Mr. Elliott's that the people of the city were not taxed enough (half a mill) under the Surburban Area Act for county roads that many of the people of the city who paid that tax never got an opportunity of travelling over a county road and of deriving any benefit from their outlay in that direction whereas every farmer in the county derived direct benefit from the good roads even though they might not live directly adjacent to one.

Peterborough's city rate for municipal purposes was 13½ mills. One mill levied in Peterborough would construct two miles of road therefore under the Suburban Area Act this city could construct 27 miles of road adjacent to the city.

Looking Ahead

Mr. McLean in concluding reminded his auditors that roads were not built by magic. It took money and the County might as well face the issue. It they looked at the expenditure from the annual standpoint which was the only reasonable way they would see that it would be quite reasonable; look at it as it totals after the lapse of years and it will appear appalling. Few men would get married, said Mr. McLean if they looked ahead and figured what it was going to cost them in ten years. Annual outlay not that of a century is what is to be considered.

He reminded his auditors that the Government assistance was available if Peterborough wanted it. There would be no advantage obtained by himself or the Provincial Government should Peterborough decide to follow the example of the remaining counties of the Province and adopt the system. It was up to themselves.

Reeve Anderson Speaks

Reeve W. A. Anderson stated that what he wanted in Otonabee was an expression of opinion as to whether the people wanted the Good Roads system or not. At present everything looked as if they were favorable to the project and the law had been recently amended so as to make it possible for two townships to go into the system without others. This was a hint that Otonabee and North Monaghan would in all probability adopt the system. The township had to do something as the roads were in bad shape.

Hope for North Monaghan

Warden McIntosh stated that at one time it looked as if eight of the townships of Peterborough would adopt the system but they had drawn away from it. He expressed hopes for Otonabee and Monaghan.

Mr. Elliott Re-Asserts Position

County Clerk Elliott complimented Mr. McLean highly upon his address stating that he was without doubt the foremost authority upon road construction in the Province of Ontario. Mr. Elliott claimed not to be a knocker of good roads. In fact he was an advocate of them but objected to the system of Government assistance. He felt that the half mill raised by the cities was not proportionately sufficient and wanted the auto tax returned. Mr. McLean's answer to these criticisms appears above.

Not Auto Owners Alone

Mr. Reg. Turner objected to the statement made by Mr. Elliott that years ago the people of the city were not interested in good or bad roads in the country; it was only since the advent of the motor car that they had became so solicitous of the welfare of the farmer as regarded the roads over which he had to travel. Mr. Turner stated that if a farmer had to draw his produce to the station of this city over streets which were in as bad a condition as the country roads, there would be no end of kicking.

Mr. R. B. Rogers, the president in closing the meeting asked for an expression of thanks to the speaker of the evening and stated that it was a strange thing to him that Peterborough had failed so long to adopt some progressive road improvement policy. He thought it must seem strange to outsiders to see an otherwise progressive county holding back on this important point.

EDITOR'S MAIL

PRESIDENT MOORE OBJECTS.

Editor Review: I have had sent to me a cutting from your paper relative to the seating of delegate to the Trades Council, wherein you state:

> "The Review this morning sent the following despatch to Tom Moore, Ottawa, President of the Dominion Trades Congress, with which the Trades Council is affiliated and from which it holds its charter: 'Can members of Independent Labor Party sit as delegates in Trades Council? Some dispute here over question, which a word from you can settle.'
>
> President Moore sent back the following wire: 'Independent Labor Party not entitled to delegates in Trades Council. No delegates but from affiliated trades unions should be seated.'"

This is not an honest statement to make. The inquiry sent to me was signed by Alex. McGregor, the address given being The Review office. I knew we had prominent trade unionists working in The Review printing office, and I accepted this telegram as though from a member of the trade union desiring information. The usual way for newspapers to make inquiries is to sign themselves editor, or just the name of the paper. Had I known that this was an official inquiry from the newspaper you would have received no reply, as the question at issue was one between our affiliated membership and this Congress executive, and I object strongly to the subterfuge adopted to obtain public expression on this subject.

Kindly publish this letter so that the workers of Peterborough may be truly acquainted of my attitude.

Yours very truly,
TOM MOORE,
President.

In sending a telegram to President Moore for an official ruling on a matter of public interest, The Review was simply following an ordinary business procedure. For example, not so long ago this paper in the same way obtained from the Department of Labor an interpretation of the anti-strike order which was causing so much difference of opinion in the Trades Council and other labor organizations. More recently a despatch from this paper to the proper source of information was sent asking whether every farmer in Canada was expected to fill out an income tax blank.

Before The Review sent the telegram to Mr Moore he had already made his official ruling in this matter, and his decision was in the hands of local labor leaders, who refused to disclose it. The matter is one that affects not only the Trades Council and the local branch of the Independent Labor Party, but every such organization and branch in Canada. There should be no "subterfuge necessary in getting information of so much general interest, and it appears to us that Mr. Moore is illadvised in the use of that term. He was asked a plain question and returned a prompt and explicit answer.

ALD. GAINEY ASKS $1,000 BANDS' APPROPRIATION

He Stands Alone and Council Declares For $600 to be Divided Between Three Bands

The City Fathers concluded last night that $600 is all the appropriation for band purposes the city can afford this year.

Entertaining the hope that Council might possibly increase this appropriation representatives of the G.W.V.A. and the Salvation Army bands urged their claims for generous consideration and hinted at a granted of more than the $200 each band previously tentatively agreed on.

Adjutant Buntin of the Salvation Army band pointed out that a substantial grant would assist his organization in acquiring better instruments and in giving the public improved service. "The S. A. band," he said, "stands on a platform of 'whosoever' and plays for all citizens alike." Whatever the ultimate grant might be, he suggested that it be divided 50-50 between the three bands.

Bandsman Gandy in this connection explained that the men of the Salvation army band practically buy their own uniforms, at $30 each, and some new ones are needed for Easter. They play without any remuneration whatsoever. This band had been depleted by about 35 pr cent., and yet had never failed to turn out at least 19 strong. Bandsmen are now returning from overseas and are badly in need of new uniforms.

Captain Morrison, for the G.W.V.A band, asked that this organization be treated in common as the other two. He appreciated Council's past generosity toward the G.W.V.A. band, but in the matter of grants for playing in the park during the summer months, he opined that the G.W.V.A band entitled to equal consideration with other city bands. This band now numbers 34 members and is being rapidly augmented by returned bandsmen from the front. It is in a condition to start its concerts at once.

His Worship was afraid that $600 was about as much as the city could afford for band concerts this year However, the question is, he said, before the committee of the whole council, who would arrive at a definite conclusion tonight.

Asks $1,000 Appropriation.

A committee of the whole session was sandwiched in between the council meeting, and Ald. Edgar and Garside moved that the band appropriation be $600, $200 for each band that will play 13 concerts in the parks during the summer months; these grants to be paid on certificate from the chairman of the Parks Committee.

Ald. Gainey here objected that $600 was not enough. These band concerts he said, were practically the only summer pleasure available to city's workers, who cannot afford cars in which to trip out into the country and around the suburbs, like other citizens more fortunate than they. A grant of $200 is quite insufficient for those bands, the members of which unlike those of the Salvation Army cannot play gratuitously. He would like to see, he added, the S. A. band play sacred concerts in one of the parks Sunday afternoons.

Ald. Gainey here moved in amendment that the appropriation be $1,000 divided equally between the three bands. This amendment was passed up for want of a seconder.

No Kick Coming.

The Mayor here thought a $1,000 beyond the city's means this year "We are," he said, "arranging to provide swimming pools for workingmen and their families, and that will call for $1,200 or $1,500." He had heard of no kick coming against the proposed division of $600 between the three bands."

Ald. Gainey: "I don't think you'll see the third band turning out for that money."

Ald. Gainey evidently was referring to the 57th Regiment band, which was not represented at the meeting.

The resolution calling for an appropriation of $600 only here carried.

The Matter Clinched.

On convening in Council session again, the bylaw providing for a band appropriation of $600 and that the bands play where and when directed passed its several readings.

While the outlook is for a good corp the U.S. must feed Europe, and housewives are again called upon to practise rigid economy this year in the use of wheat.

FRENCH SUFFERED EVER SINCE A BOY

AFTER TAKING TANLAC HE ENJOYS BETTER HEALTH NOW THAN IN 15 YEARS.

"Positively I am in better condition now than I have been in fifteen years," said Chas. J. French, of 1738 Dundas street, West, Toronto, Ont.

"Ever since I was a boy," he continued, "I had stomach trouble. My food did not digest well, and I got into a general run-down condition that worried me for years. My back hurt me terribly and many a time I would have to quit work, and I lost so much life and energy that my work became a drudgery to me. Although I was taking medicines all the time, I kept getting worse, till I could hardly keep going at all.

"My wife got me a bottle of Tanlac and I soon felt it was straightening me out. I kept it up and now I can eat anything I like and it never hurts me at all. The pain in my back is entirely gone and I am so much better and stronger in every way that my work is a pleasure and I get through the day without feeling all tired and worn out."

Tanlac is sold in Peterboro by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield. by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by C. Pringle & Son.

LAD DROWNED IN OLD CISTREN

Campbellford, April 15.—A sad accident occurred here on Saturday morning when a little lad about three years of age named Douglas Jarvis was drowned in an old cistern. The little fellow had dropped a book from an upstairs window, and had gone down to get it. He stepped on some soft ground and was simply swallowed up. Years ago the cistern had been boarded up, but the boards had rotted away, leaving only a few inches of earth. Great sympathy is felt for the parents, the father being a soldier and expected home shortly.

The Man Who Outwitted German Secret Agents

With the commencement of hostilities, Councillor Wright became a deadly menace to German interests, and word went out to her secret agents that he must be done away with.

Though in hourly danger of losing his life, Councillor Peter Wright never failed in his duty; neither did the fear of death deter him in his missions. Twice his life was attempted, but on both occasions he cleverly outwitted his enemies. To-day he is in Canada to tell the people of this Dominion what he saw and knows of German atrocities, Bolshevism, and the work of our gallant seamen.

Councillor Peter Wright

Chairman and Trustee of the Seamen's and Firemen's Union of Great Britain, is head of the bravest union in the world. He represents the seamen of the Empire, and he is ready to tell the world the reasons why British seamen are determined to boycott the Germans on every sea.

HEAR HIM SPEAK in the

PETERBORO COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE

ON

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 16th, 1919

AT 8 P.M.

As a special investigator for the British Government he visited the reclaimed lands of the Western Battle Front and saw for himself the terrible deeds of German brutality; he was sent to the neutral capitals of Europe, and there talked with German Labor Leaders, who are heads of the Teutonic republic to-day. He visited Russia and interviewed the leaders of the Bolsheviki party. He knew Trotzky and Kerensky personally, and saw the chaos of the Russian Socialistic Revolution.

He will tell you about these men and their motives. Now is your chance to learn facts that have made history. Don't miss your opportunity. Hear Councillor Wright speak. His lecture is inspiring, educational and free from fiction.

The meeting will be held under the auspices of the Peterborough Branch of the Navy League, and Judge E. C. Huycke will take the chair.

In obtaining the services of Councillor Wright the members of the local branch consider themselves fortunate indeed, and it is to be hoped that the public will turn out in large numbers to hear Councillor Wright.

HONEST BUSINESS METHODS WIN OUT

Six years ago, Mr. P. Black, general dry goods merchant, corner of George and King streets, acquired his present business. Today it affords him pleasure to state that his trade has grown from its very small beginning to an established, good-paying business.

Mr. Black is an admirer of straight forward business dealings. When asked about the methods which helped him to his present success, he replied: "I have done my business in the honest and best way." His trade had gradually kept pace with the growth of the city. He started business with only a small sum of money occupying just one small section of his present store. Gradually he added more space and more goods as he found his business growing. His plans had to be carefully made and well considered, but he was shrewd and careful in buying. Being more anxious to establish a business than to make money, he sold his goods on a very small margin of profit. He paid very little for clerks' salaries as Mrs. Black and himself have done nearly all the clerking during the past six years. His "overhead expenses" figured very lightly, which was one of the reasons why he claims he could afford to sell on a small cost basis. As his business kept growing he started to advertise in a small way; and, as he advertised he found his business growing steadily. Then he advertised more extensively and the store grew bigger the stocks larger, and his sales in proportion, until today the whole store premises is filled with a large and well assorted stock of men's and women's wear, millinery and general drygoods.

Mr. Black's Sixth Anniversary Sale is continuing all this week. A host of bargains are tabled. Consult the handbills already issued, and above all call at the store, corner George and King streets, where prices will be found to suit all economy buyers.

IS RETURNED SOLDIER REFUSED OLD JOB IN FIRE DEPARTMENT?

Is Report Submitted to City Council Last Night—Told There Was no Room for Him—Council Resolves That All Such Men Must be Reinstated if Physically Fit

The City Fathers resolved last night that all returned soldiers shall be given their positions held by them in the city's employ at the time of their enlistment, providing they are physically fit for the same, and that for any position the city has to offer a returned soldiers is to have the preference. This was the motion of Ald McIntyre and Garside.

Ald. McItnyre, in raising this question, said that he understands a returned man had applied to Chief Grange for his old job, and had been informed that there was no room for him. The returned man had produced a copy of Council's resolution that men going to the war should be re-engaged by the city on their return, but the chief had thrown the paper to one side with the remark that it was no good. Ald. McIntyre took exception to such treatment of men who went overseas to fight for us, And notice should be taken by Council on any occasion when its resolutions in such regard are ignored. He noticed that in Toronto returned men are installed in their old positions on the fire brigade, and the same cause should be pursued in Peterborough.

Ald. Morrison here pointed out that a definite policy should be adopted as to just whom in the fire hall a returned fireman soldier should replace—one of the new men added by reason of adopting the two-platoon system or otherwise—and who should decide in this matter? There are two if not three, returned firemen, he added, but so far as he new, but one had applied for reinstatement.

Undermanned

Ald. Turner thought that as the underwriters had reported the fire department undermanned the returned men might be taken on without replacing any of the present staff. He would, he said, be glad to stint his department to aid financially in this matter. The one man who has applied for his old job should at least be added to the brigade.

Simply Surprised.

Ald. Phelan corroborated Ald. McIntyre's assertion re the reception of the fireman from overseas. "The man showed me a copy of the Council's resolution giving him 'leave of absence,'" the alderman said, "and I was simply surprised to be told that the chief had thrown it to one side with the declaration that it was no good." He hoped the city was not going to be the first to fall down in pledges of this nature.

Ald. Edgar: "This man should be re-engaged, and the man who took his place released.

This matter was left with the chairman of the department (Ald. Morrison) and Chief Grange to adjust in accordance with Council's pledges and in fairness to all concerned.

Distribute Work.

Ald. Edgar suggested that in relief of unemployed Ald. Phelan and the engineer consider a double shift system for the Board of Works Department by which a gang will work a week or fortnight about. Ald. Phelan fell in with the idea.

Ald. Phelan also agreed to comply with Ald. Edgar's suggestion that Monaghan road from Homewood avenue to Patterson street be gravelled at once.

In motion of Ald. McIntyre and Turner the city engineer will draw the two railway's attention to the wretched condition of their crossings and request that they be repaired.

East Ward Needs.

Ald. Gainey reported that two citizens on Carlisle avenue are willing to make seven connections, and he asked for water service which they have not accessible so far. The Utilities Commission will be asked to provide water connection and a hydrant at east end of Carlisle avenue.

Pavement Repairs.

Ald. Edgar want steps taken to assume repairing to street pavement during life of guarantee contract Both His Worship and Ald. Phelan replied that the needed repairing will be started in a few days.

A crossing on Caddy street, East City, will be laid down by request of Ald. Gainey.

The Old Story.

Ald. Edgar wanted to know if Ald Phelan is kept instructed in how much work his Board of Works is doing each month. Last year Council resolved that the engineer should report to the Board of Works chairman each Monday what work had been done the preceding week—an itemized statement in fact. "We have found," he said, "resolutions passed night after night altering work done, and that's all there is about it. It's up to the chairman of the Board of Works to know if such orders are carried out."

Ald. Phelan: "I thought I might shake hands with myself on the fact that the Board of Works is getting along first rate. I haven't had a complaint until Ald. Edgar comes along with the first tonight." Ald. Phelan was glad to know of the resolution re engineer's itemized report, and would see that it is carried out.

Ald. Edgar replied that he was not complaining, but merely drawing attention to Council's intention in an engineer's weekly report to keep the chairman acquainted with work done so that he could reply intelligently to any questions in such regard asked of him by Council.

More Paving.

Ald. Turner suggested that when the pavement is under repair Council might consider paving Water street from Duffus garage to King and on King to George street.

Crossings.

Ald. Garside's motion for a crossing north side of Dalhousie street to west of Park went to the Board of Works, as also did Ald. Morrison's request for a crossing at Bolivar street, where the cars stop.

Members Present.

There were present Mayor Duncan Aldermen Gainey, Garside, J. J. Turner, Hamilton, Edgar, A. A. McIntyre Taylor, Phelan, Morrison.

LAWN BOWLERS GETTING READY

LOCAL CLUB WILL HOLD TOURNAMENT FIRST MONDAY IN AUGUST

The spring is calling to the veteran bowlers of the city and the green is now the central point of interest with them. The season will soon be here. By way of preparation in enthusiastic and largely attended meetings of the members of the Lawn Bowlers Club was held last night in the Peterborough Music Co.'s store, with the President, Dr. Hammond in the chair.

The membership fee for 1919 will be $8 and the prospects are that the return of peace will ensure a larger membership than the club has ever yet known. It was unanimously decided last night to hold a tournament for Central Ontario, the first week in August, these affairs always having been successful in the past.

The season will be officially opened on a date to be set later and an invitation will be extended to every bowler in the city, whether a present, past or prospective member, to take part in the program.

The work of getting the green in order will begin at once as the grass is already showing signs of growth.

A SERVICE THAT CONSUMERS WILL APPRECIATE.

A great number of people are paying for goods and carrying them home because they are considerate and thoughtful. It is for those people that a new service has been installed by E. F. Mason, Grocer, 429 George street, where the south side of this grocery store has been set apart for a "Groceteria" section. All goods are parcelled and priced and those prices are not guessed at, but figured on the actual cost plus only the service you get. The expensive items such as delivery, bookkeeping, telephone, and collecting system are eliminated, and this is as it should be. If the service is not supplied, why should it be charged on the price of the goods, especially at this time when the cost of foodstuffs is a serious problem? 2

OBITUARY

CATHERINE MACDONALD.

Lakefield was bereft of one of its oldest residents on Sunday in the person of Catherine McIntosh, wife of Mr. John MacDonald. Mrs. MacDonald passed away on Sunday at 5 o'clock, aged 94 years and nine months. Deceased was of Highland Scotch descent, was born in Cavan township, and when quite young moved to North Monaghan, where she lived on the McIntosh homestead until her marriage in 1843 to the late John MacDonald, who predeceased her 27 years.

She was an active member of the Baptist church and a cheerful worker for the boys overseas, having knit about two hundred pairs of socks, one hundred pairs of which she knit during the first two years of the war.

Mrs. MacDonald leaves to mourn her loss one son and three daughters, Alex. MacDonald, Miss W. MacDonald, of Willsdale, Alberta; Miss Alice MacDonald, of Los Angeles, Calif., and Mrs. Munroe, of Lakefield.

The funeral will be held from her late home on Tuesday morning at 11:30 to Little Lake Cemetery, Peterborough.

JONATHAN PURSGLOVE

The death occurred at the family residence, 209 Rubidge street, of Mr. Jonathan Pursglove, after a lingering illness. The deceased was born in Dunchurch, England, 64 years ago and came to this country in 1910. There remains of his immediate family, two daughters, Mrs. C. J. Alcock, and Miss Alice Elizabeth, at home. Three sisters and two brothers also survive him, Mrs. Pue, Winnipeg; Miss Pursglove and Mrs. Surrington, both of England; John, South Africa, and George, of Eastbourne England.

He was a faithful member of All Saints' church, from where the funeral will take place on Thursday. Since coming to this country he has made many friends who will be sorry to learn of his demise.

Funeral announcements will be made later.

HELD BANQUET FOR OMEMME HEROES

(Special to The Review.)

Omemee, April 15.—The Sunday school room of the Methodist church presented a gay appearance on Wednesday night last, the occasion being a banquet to the returned men of Emily and Omemee and also the choir of the church. Festoons of red, white and blue crepe paper along with many flags decorated the banquet hall, while the tables were laden with the many good things which our men enjoy and a profusion of flowers. The Ladies' Aid Society, who so thoughtfully had planned the affair, were there, each lady wearing white with a little white cap, decorated with a band of red, white and blue. After all had partaken of the many good things, the Rev Mr. Lewis, as toast master, called on the following toasts:

Our King—Rev. J. G. Lewis—National Anthem.

Our Dominion—Reeve Wilson, Rev J. P. MacInnis—Oh, Canada.

Our Army—Rev. Mr. Herrington. Tipperary—Pte. Howard Veals.

Our Mary—Reeve Parsons, Corp Fred. Cornell—Three cheers for the Red, White and Blue.

Our Air Force—Miss Millard, Flight Lieut. E. Cornell—Come Josephine in my Flying Machine.

Our Nursing Sisters—Dr. G. N Earl, Nursing Sister Hayes—The Rose of No Man's Land, Miss Rita Johnson.

Our Returned Men—J. Bushnell, response, Pte. J. Palmer, Pte. Victor Callaghan, Trooper Lowery Brooks, Pte Hillier Cunningham—We'll Never Let the Old Flag Fall.

Silent toasts to our fallen heroes—Poem by Rev. Lewis.

Mothers and wives—Rev. Mr. Lewis—Poem, Mrs. Lewis, Mother Machree.

The ladies—Sergt. Harold Cunningham; President Mrs. Parsons, Mrs Bushnell—Keep the Home Fires Burning.

After the banquet, a jolly time was spent in games and music, and a delightful evening was the verdict of all present.

VETERANS' TAG DAY

For Relief Fund

Saturday, April 19

Peterborough citizens are reminded of the Annual Tag Day on Saturday next on behalf of the Relief Fund of this organization.

The money received in this way is kept in a separate fund, and is used solely to relieve cases of distress, among returned soldiers and in the families of men who are still serving.

The fund has been well administered in Peterborough and your contributions in the past have helped to spare much of the suffering in Peterborough, that has existed in other cities, where a similar fund has not been organized.

The thoughtfulness of Peterborough citizens, so much appreciated in the past, it is felt, will be again in evidence on Saturday next.

G. N. GORDON SUBMITS PLAN FOR THE PROPOSED RADIAL

Route Would Serve Country Rich in Minerals and Water Power—Council Committee Favors Plan.

Mr. G. N Gordon submitted a scheme to the Railway Committee at their meeting last night which they approved in connection with the choice of a route for the proposed radial railway which the Hydro are being urged to build through Peterborough.

His idea was to use the old Cobourg-Chemong ballast from Peterborough to Chemong, thence to Hall's Bridge then pass on through Harvey and Cavendish and then run north-westerly through Galloway, to the junction of the Irondale and Bancroft railway and the G. T. R between Haliburton and Lindsay.

As was pointed out this would make a direct line from this junction point to Peterborough and would carry the traffic from the Minden line of the G.T.R. and from the Bancroft line directly to this city as it would be much more convenient than following the G.T.R. around by Lindsay.

This country which would be served by such a line is rich in mineral wealth and abounds in splendid water falls capable when harnessed of generating a great deal of power. The largest of these is situated at Furnace Falls, Burnt River, and Hall's Bridge.

The C. G. E. at present have the old Cobourg-Chemong line leased from the G.T.R. When the lease was taken out the intention was to lay steel and use the road to test out electric locomotives upon.

The committee favored the project and decided to recommend it to the Hydro Commission.

WOULD RATHER SEE BOLSHEVISM IN RUSSIA THAN PLUNGE BRITAIN INTO BANKRUPTCY

Lloyd George Says it is not Duty of British Government to Restore Order in Country Now Rent by Internal Strife.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, April 16.—Allied representatives in Paris have arrived at a complete understanding on the great fundamentl qdestions that would effect peace with Germany, Premier Lloyd George declared in addressing the House of Commons today. The Alliesh ad formulated their demands and he hoped that by the end of next week they would be presented.

The Premier said he would rather see Russia Bolshevik until they see their way out of it, than see Great Britain landed in bankruptcy. He declared the United States and European powers had not been at variance and deprecated the attempts to show dissension among the delegates. Referring to the League of Nat ons deliberations, he said the Conference might have taken more time but for the fact that it was setting up machinery capable of readjusting and correcting possible mistakes. The conferene had to shorten its labors said the Premier because, while it was trying to build, in many lands, the foundation of society was tumbling to the dust. No men ever worked harder on in better harmony than the Peace Conference and he doubted whether any ever worked under greatest difficulties.

Replying to the criticisms of his activities at Peace Conference Lloyd George said situation was still full of perils for all countries. He pleaded that those who were trying to do their best be left alone.

Much as the British Government deplores conditions in Russia, the Premier continued, it is not its duty to commit England to a gigantic enterprise in order to improve conditions in Russia. There was no question, he said, of recognizing Russia. It had never been proposed and had never been discussed. The Premier denied trying to escape declarations made during the election campaipn The declaration regarding compelling Germany to pay was concurred in by all the party leaders. The conference decided not to publish the terms of peace. He said that would be a first-class blunder. Premature publication could only serve to encourage the resistance of the enemy. Lloyd George sharply criticized certain newspaper attacks made in connection with the Peace Conference which tended to cause dissension.

William Adams, leader of the Labor, Opposition, following Premier said in regard to the latter's address: "The speech was elopuent but not entirely satisfactory"

CLAIMS PAPERS SPOIL SERMONS

MINISTER SAYS THAT UNRELIGIOUS REPORTERS ARE AT BOTTOM OF TROUBLE.

Stratford April 16.—The annual meeting of the Western Association of Congregational Churches, with Rev. Dr. E. E. Braithwaite presiding, opened its session here yesterday.

In opening a discussion on an address on "The Church and the Press," by Rev. J. M. Newburry of Sherkston, the President gave it as his opinion that sermons were misconstrued and misrepresented in the papers. He said he thought that sending unreligious reporters to cover these sermons was the reason as the reporters missed the spirit of the discourse.

SESSION LASTED FOR TWO MINUTES

COUNCIL RETURNS CHEQUE TO BRIDGE CONTRACTOR TIRED OF DELAY.

There was a meeting of the City Council held last night which breaks all records for brevity. The august body was in session for two minutes long enough, however, to authorise the clerk to return the certified cheque of H. J. H. Tromanhauser, one of the tenderers for the contract of constructing the bridge who wrote and demanded to be allowed to withdraw his offer on account of the strange manner in which the Committee seemed to be dealing with the question of awarding the contract.

JOB FOR MR. PARDEE

Rummored That He Will Lead Ontario Appsition.

Ottawa, April 16.—There is an interesting story going the rounds in political circles that Mr. F. F. Pardee, West Lambton, in making his announcement yesterday as to his intention to stand by his old party, was paving the way to the selected Opposition leader in Ontario.

The rumor has it that he will resign his Federal seat to contest the Provincial bye election in West Lambton and is slated as the new leader.

It is said that he is acceptable to H. H. Dewart, who realizes that his own chances are slim, but on the other hand does not favor William Proudfoot.

OTTAWA BISHOP HERE WEDNESDAY

DISTINGUISHED RELATE WILL PREACH HERE ST. GEORGE'S DAY.

That arrangements are well in hand for the due celebration of St. George's Day in Peterborough which will fal lon Wednesday next, 23rd inst. Rev. James Price said this morning that the Bishop of Ottawa will be the preacher. The services will be held at St. John's Church as usual. The great position of the Bishop of Ottawa, both in State and Church, commands great respect and Peterborough ought to feel proud of being honored by the visit of such a prelate.

The musical part of the service is in the hands of Mr. R. J. Devey and no doubt as usual a great musical treat is in store. It would be fitting and proper for the City Council and other officials to show their respect to the Bishop, and English Churchmen in general, by being present officially at the service next Wednesday.

RETURNED MEN AT THE EMPIRE

THREE WOUNDED SOLDIERS APPEAR IN BIG SONG SUCCESS TONIGHT.

Three returned wounded veterans are at the Empire tonight with a big song success entitled "The Boys we Left Behind, Over There," written by themselves. The song is a beautiful memory song dedicated to oru fallen heroes.

Sapper Browning sings the song and although having five wounds in his back he has a powerful voice and his words are very distinct and quite different from most singers. He proves that he has one of the greatest of war songs.

NO PEACE FOR IRELAND

London, April 16.—It would be a mistake to think that Home Rule would be put in force in Ireland immediately upon the declaration of peace, Andrew Bonar Law, Government leader declared in the House of Commons.

G. W. HATTON'S CASE AGAINST CITY IS STILL IN PROGRESS

Plaintiff Objects to Construction of McDonnel Street Sewer Which Will Be Tapped by Community of Mount St. Joseph—City Officials on the Stand.

Last night before His Lordship Judge Lennox in the Supreme Court the action of G. W. Hatton to quash the bylaw authorising the construction of a sewer on McDonnel street was commenced.

S. R. Armstrong, city clerk, Peterborough, was the first witness. He was on the stand for over two hours, during which time he was examined by Mr. R. R. Hall, the lawyer for the plaintiff, and by Mr. Dan O'Connell, who, with the city solicitor, C. R. Widdifield, is defending the validity of the bylaw.

Mr. Armstrong in his testimony dealt with the successive steps which had been taken by the boards of works and health and by the Council in connection with the matter. He produced the correspondence between the interested parties and copies of the minutes of the meetings of the various bodies at which the proposal to undertake the work had been discussed. The bylaw, No. 205, passed on December 2, 1918, was also submitted for the consideration of the court.

Mr. Hall, in his examination of the witness, referred to the litigation pending between the city of Peterborough and the townships of Monaghan, north and south, Smith and Otonabee, as a result of the city's failure to provide a proper sewage disposal plant and their continued practice of dumping the sewage into the River Otonabee, thus polluting the water.

Mr. O'Connell objected to this testimony upon the grounds that it had no direct bearing on the case. His Lordship, however, decided to allow it in the evidence.

Mr. Armstrong's testimony showed that Father Phelan had first drawn attention to the desirability of allowing the Community of Mount St. Joseph connections with the city sewer system, and after some discussion it was understood the Mount would pay a frontage tax on Monaghan road equal to that which they would pay if their property was situated in the city on McDonnel street, and a general rate as well.

Ex-Alderman on the Stand

Ex-Ald. Worth, who had been chairman of the committee of the Council which had been entrusted in 1918 with the task of considering the request of Mount St. Joseph for sewer connection, was called after ten o'clock, at which time Mr Armstrong was allowed to leave the stand.

He stated that the Board of Works had been apprised by Father Phelan of the insanitary conditions prevailing at Mount St. Joseph, and considered favorably the request for connection with the sewer system of the city, even though situated in the township of Monaghan. Afterwards their decision was strengthened by the advice of the Board of Health to construct the necessary extension.

Asked as to his reasons for favoring the construction of the extension Ex-Ald. Worth stated that he felt it to be in the general interest as well as to that of the residents of the Mount.

In explanation of this statement he said that he had for some time noticed slime lying in the ditches along the Monaghan road, and concluded that it emanated from the cesspools at the Mount. He felt that this might affect the health of people residing in the city near the Monaghan road.

Questioned by Mr. Hall as to his reasons for believing that this slime came as a result of the cesspools at Mount St. Joseph, the witness replied that he was unable to state positively that it did, but presumed that such was the cause.

Mr. Worth declared that in supporting the passing of the bylaw authorising the construction of the sewer extension, he had in mind the interests of the health of the people of the whole city.

Judge Lennox—And not the health of the community of Mount St. Joseph?

E-Ald. Worth—Of both, your Lordship.

Judge Lennox—Yes; if such a condition would affect the inhabitants of the city it would surely be much more dangerous to the residents at Mount St. Joseph.

The witness stated that while the committee were conversant with the conditions obtaining at the Mount, having gone there to see them, they acted principally upon the report of the engineer. The soil was not suitable for the cesspools and they could not be expected to give satisfaction.

Ex-Ald. Worth stated that at the time the bylaw was passed providing for the extension of the sewer, the Bonner-Worth Company had been considering expanding their plant, and in that case would have connected with the extension.

Mr. Hall, in his examination of Mr. Worth, asked if the latter thought the owners of vacant lots on McDonnel street, of whom Mr. Hatton was one, would derive any benefit from the construction of the sewer past their property.

Witness—Perhaps not.

Judge Lennox—In fact, it would be a burden, would it not?

Mr. Hall—They would have the privilege of paying more taxes.

Mr. Hall—Was not your sole idea in supporting the construction of this extension to afford relief to the community of Mount St. Joseph?

Ex-Ald. Worth—No; I would not say that.

Mr. Hall—It was Father Phelan's representations to the committee which opened up the matter, was it not? That was what really caused the bylaw to be passed?

Ex-Ald. Worth—Yes.

Mr. O'Connell—Was that the sole reason?

Ex-Ald. Worth—No, not the sole reason.

Judge Lennox—But it was the primary reason, though the people of the city might benefit as well. You say you noticed slime in the ditches for a considerable time, and yet it did not occur to you as an alderman that in the interests of the people of the city you should bring up the matter of the extension of the sewer un-

EXAMPLE OF CHURCH UNION

On Good Friday morning, at eleven o'clock, a union service will be held of all the Presbyterian and Baptist churches in Peterborough in the Murray Street church. It has been arranged to have a composite choir of over fifty voices, under the direction of the leader of Murray Street choir. Mr. Asa Huycke will sing "The Palms," and while the service will cover only one hour, all the ministers of the churches represented will participate.

The members of these denominations are using their autocars to bring to the service those whose age or distance from the church would make attendance otherwise impossible.

Nothing could be more fitting than that this should be done and that the spirit of unity should be manifest to the world on the day made sacred by the death of Him who prayed "That they may be one."

The general public will receive a hearty welcome to what promises to be a service of supreme interest.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 16, 1919

THE VETERANS' TAG DAY.

THE REVIEW believes that any newspaper mistakes its functions when it undertakes to read the public constant homilies on their plain duty. The people as a rule realise what is expected of them in any line of endeavor, and their judgment is to be trusted. Excessive lecturing will make the callous only more so, and will weary the more open-minded into indifference, if not creating a real feeling of resentment against what is so often regarded as unwarranted interference.

It is only necessary to call the attention of the residents of Peterborough to the fact that the members of the G. W. V. A. will hold their annual tag day on Saturday, the anniversary of the second battle of Ypres, the engagement that constitutes a red letter chronicle in the history of Canada. The people of this city will rise to the occasion and do what is expected of them. They have never failed the Veterans yet when such appeals have been made. Let every man and woman remember the day and be ready with his or her contribution. The mere announcement of the event should be sufficient.

While this is true, a word of explanation is necessary. The Veterans are asking nothing for themselves; none of the money raised on Saturday will be used in fitting up their present club rooms or the new quarters for the Association now in process of preparation. Contributions are asked to help the needy, the innocent victims of the war, the widows and orphans, the sick and the helpless.

No more worthy object could be thought of. The call should appeal to the charitable, and beyond all question it will. The enviable war work record of the city will be maintained.

PETERBOROUGH COUNTY CATCHING STEP.

AT LEAST TWO of the townships of Peterborough County show signs of a disposition to desert the ranks of the malcontents who oppose the good roads system, and of catching step with the rest of the Province. North Monaghan and Otonabee will stand out no longer against the rest of the intelligent members of the jury that has been sitting in judgment on this problem for these many years.

At the meeting of the farmers and citizens held on Monday evening and which was addressed by Deputy Minister of Highways McLean, every contention of the local opponents of the system was dealt with and every argument answered. There is no question as to the outstanding feature of the case. Peterborough County requires good roads, and the way to secure these is simply a matter of ways and means.

The claim is made by the local antis that every dollar of the money raised in this county for auto licenses should be returned to the municipality to be used in road building. These auto licenses are issued with two purposes in view, to raise provincial revenue and to insure personal safety. Any autoist anywhere in Ontario who runs down a pedestrian or by reckless driving causes any other damage to life or property cannot hope to escape the consequences of his carelessness. The number on his auto is the same as the public display of his name. It would be impossible to maintain this general supervision if the granting of auto licenses was left to the various municipalities.

A provincial tax is the property of the Province. Peterborough County has no more right to claim this revenue than it has to demand that any other public revenue be turned over to it. One way to impoverish the provincial treasury would be to put such a system in operation.

Another point dealt with by Mr. McLean in his address had to do with the tax paid by the residents of cities under the suburban act, which the antis claim is too low as compared with that levied on the farmers. It was shown that over half the people in a city never use even the roads adjacent to the boundary lines, either in autos, horse vehicles or on foot. Every farm, on the other hand, situated near an improved highway goes up in value. Whether the owner goes to town in a car or a carriage, good roads are with him an essential. The country districts reap the larger share of the benefit, and it is only simple justice that they should bear a greater percentage of the cost.

Good roads constituted a problem long before autos were ever dreamed of, here or elsewhere in Ontario. The problem has been before the people since the days when the pioneers built corduroy highways through the swamps. Gradually the system of construction has been improved, but waste was inevitable. Finally a plan was devised by men who have made road construction a life study, and its all but universal adoption and the satisfaction with which it is regarded after years of trial, is its best recommendation. That Peterborough County has elected to adhere to the old and antiquated system may be a fault, but it is certainly a misfortune, an opportunity thrown away.

THE WAR ON TITLES.

TO CAPT. BURNHAM belongs the distinction of being the first member of Parliament to propose the abolition of all titles of honor in Canada. When he first brought the matter up his proposition was received in a spirit of levity, but session after session he persevered until now beyond all question the majority of the members of the House are of his way of thinking. Empty titles and gaudy decorations that so often mean nothing beyond a transfer of hard cash or some form of not too strenuous political service, have no place in a democracy. Titled aristocracy is crumbling into ruins in the European countries, where it has flourished for years. Why transplant or perpetuate it in a new world that is, for the sake of the human race, striving to avoid the mistakes of the old land?

If it is Mr. Nickle who fathers the anti-title crusade now, that fact does not affect the situation. In a test vote, the Government was able to muster a majority of only seven, and but for the tactics of Acting Premier White, a victim of the system himself, and a diversion from the main issue caused by the introduction of another amendment, Mr. Nickle's motion would have been carried and Canada would have seen the last of its knights and baronets.

Some members are for the abolition of all titles, [illegible] would do away with those which descend from one generation to another [illegible] plate or landed property. Still the opinion seems to be general that neither the country nor the beneficiaries of title granting derive any benefit from the system.

Fastening peacock feathers upon a common fowl is apt to encourage the latter to indulge in airs. The inward nature of a jackal is not improved even though he be tricked out in the skin of a lion. Some titles have been fairly and honestly won and many a worthy Canadian can carry such an honor just as the true gentleman can wear a dress suit or a silk hat without the display of offensive self-consciousness.

There is a new order of nobility in Canada as a result of the war. The honor mark is borne by hundreds of young men in the form of military medals, Victoria Crosses, and no less distinctive, the wound stripe, the badge of the veteran, or other evidences of strenuous military service. And vastly higher is each of these distinctions than is the title earned by service in the realm of politics, purchased by generous contributions to campaign funds, or conferred for work rendered the Empire, work which brought its own substantial reward in the shape of a huge fortune easily acquired while the young manhood of the country was sweating blood in Flanders.

ONE PRODIGAL'S RETURN.

MR. PARDEE, formerly chief Liberal whip, and now a Unionist member of Parliament, says that new Liberalism is required to save the country. The adjective is well chosen. A new party is certainly required, if anything is to be accomplished as the old went completely to pieces as it searched in vain for some easy way to save Canada when this nation, in common with the rest of the civilized world, was under the menace of Prussianism.

Always an outstanding figure in his own party until his conscience prevented him following it any longer, Mr. Pardee had new fame thrust upon him by his recent intimation in the House that his intention is to make an early return to his former idols. All the Liberal newspapers are featuring the affair. But they should not fall into the mistake of Mr. Pardee, who evidently takes himself rather too seriously. The sight of the former Liberal whip, marching in a solid phalanx of one, attracted by the candle dip in the window, to the old fold where Leader McKenzie waits to welcome back the wanderers, does not mean the disruption of the Union Government, even if the member in question asks for nothing more than a change of raiment and a job among the hired help.

Children And The Kindergarten

(By a Mother)

I am a mother of three children; Betty, aged 6; Bob, 4; and Jack, who is 2. Up to the time Betty was 4 years old she had always been a very nervous child and needed constant entertaining. I hesitated to send her to kindergarten, but after reasoning with myself I finally decided to send her. The concentration required in the two years she spent in kindergarten make a different child of her and she can amuse herself now for many hours at a time.

[illegible] entered kindergarten about three months ago. He is a quiet child and needs to be brought out of himself. He seems to be getting needed help in the kindergarten, for in the short while he has been there he has become more talkative and active. He now enjoys being with other children, whereas before he preferred to play alone.

There is nothing more necessary in bringing up children than to have them feel that we are interested in them. Try always to answer their questions. If you cannot satisfy their curiosity they will surely go elsewhere for their information. When the children come home from school I ask what they did, what song they sang, what pictures they looked at etc. They live the two or three hours spent in kindergarten over again by telling me what they have done. I had to leave the childrden for a week not long ago. When I returned they could not talk fast enough to tell me all that had happened. The habit thus formed of caring to share their experiences with you is a great safeguard as they grow older. A story at bedtime is always welcomed by the children, and I find that it is not only enjoyable and beneficial to them, but also to myself. They never tire of good fairy stories. Nature stories are always interesting, too. My children will choose the same stories over and over again until they almost know them by heart.

Several nights ago I was called away and could not read a story, so I promised one for after breakfast next morning. When breakfast was over and I thought of all I had to do, it seemed as if I were wasting time to sit and tell stories. However, as the children became absorbed in the story and their happy faces looked up into mine, I realized that time could not be better spent. The story was that of Hans and the Four Big Giants the keynote of which is helping others. I knew that the children had absorbed the point of the story when they helped me afterward to clear the breakfast table.

The kindergarten is a great help in making children independent. Each child is taught gradually and in a playful way, to help himself. In a class of forty, John does not like to be the only one who cannot put on his rubbers or button his coat. Perhaps you will say you can teach independence at home. Granted, you can. The trouble at home is that we too often do too many things for our children. At home, too, we lack the group work so beneficial in the kindergarten. It develops the social side of a child as well as his ability to be of service.

Orderliness is another aim of a kindergarten. It should also be the aim of every household. In kindergarten all the material is kept in order. It is given out and collected in an orderly way and each child taught to pack up his material after he has finished with it. There is always a place for everything in the kindergarten, and the child learns to put everything in its place.

EVEN WORSE THAN REPORTED

BARON ROSEN IN EXILE IN UNITED STATES SAYS RUSSIA IS A SLAUGHTER HOUSE.

New York, April 16.—Baron Rosen, formerly Russian ambassador to the United States and one of the peace plenipotentiaries who settled the war between Russia and Japan, in an address before the Brooklyn chamber of commerce, his first public utterance since arriving in America, an exile from his native land, declared that it was the "deadly poison of Bolshevism which brought on the defeat of Russia, and next of Germany," and that "its sudden rise and stupendous growth" should be a solemn warning to the ruling classes in all belligerent countries.

"Russia as a political entity has temporarily ceased to exist,' said Baron Rosen. "There is at present no political party or body of men which could be held to be entitled to enter upon international engagements in the name of Russia and the Russian nation—least of all that small group of demented fanatics with their following of murderous bandits who have usurped power by violence, who maintain their tyrannical power by a regime of terrorism such as the world has never seen, who have completely ruined and destroyed the social fabric of the state and who have turned what was once the empire of Russia into a wilderness of primitive barbarism, a prison, a lunatic asylum and a slaughter house.

Contrast of East and West.

"The germs of this deadly disease Bolshevism, although lying dormant, were present and are still present everywhere," said the speaker. "Bred and nurtured by the atmosphere of social unrest, an inevitable accompaniment of the wonderful achievements of modern civilization, which are doing so much to contrast between the luxury and ease of the few and the want and limitations of the many condemned to a life of incessant toil joyless monotony and anxious insecurity.

The former diplomat, who recently arrived here from Stockholm, where he had fled with his wife and daughter, said that "the appalling gravity of the Russian situation cannot possibly be exaggerated." and that the official reports of British Consul-General Lockhart, recently published, are "sufficient to make one' hair stand on end,' but fall far short of the reality of affairs under the Bolshevik regime.

Defeat of the Russian army did not cause the "disease," Baron Rosen explained, declaring that it was the prolongation of the war, with its attendant sufferings and misery, which created among the [illegible] to [illegible]000,000 Russian soldiers and sailors—true representatives of the peasantry which constituted the bulk of the population of Russia and which was the mainstay of her power and prosperity—the conditions leading up to the revolution of March, 1917, which, although inspired by the duma leaders from very opposite motives, was actually accomplished by the mutinous garrison and revolutionary workmen of Petrograd and was an expression of the revolt of the people against the war."

The Bolsheviki said the speaker, promised immediate peace and this gained the support of the people.

Bolshevism May Doom Race.

Discussing the problem of the immediate future of Russia, the former ambassador said it is "one of unexampled difficulty," Its solution is required in the interest of all mankind, he declared, adding that "If Bolshevism be not now extirpated root and branch and if it is suffered to spread any further it might ultimately come to mean the doom of our race and civilization.

"For the present the only glimmer of hope seems to lie in the evolution out of the prevailing chaos of a military dictatorship such as must always be the outcome of a prolonged state of anarchy, if the teachings of history are to be believed. Some indications of the possibility of a similar development are already discernible. Admirable Kolchak, the head of the Siberian government, having of late secured the submission to this authority of Gens. Denikines of the Kuban Cossacks and Krasuoff of the Cossacks of the Don, has, it seems, begun to use in his public utterances the firm languge of a dictator conscious of his power and determined to render his will supreme."

Not So Awful.

"Did you have any music over there " asked the wife of her soldier-husband just returned.

"Oh, yes. We heard the singing of the bullets," was the reply.

"Wasn't that awful, dear?"

Well, it wasn't really as awful as some of the singing I've heard over here."

"What's the play tonight?"

"'Brutus Caesar.'"

"What?"

"I mean 'Julius Brutus.'"

"What are you talking about?"

"Oh, you know the play I mean It's the one in which Cassius Atony says, 'Fellow citizens, I want to borrow your ears.'"

Recommendation Enough.

Cook (leaving)—I should like to ask you for a written character.

"Why, what am I to write, you idle, good for nothing girl! You surely don't expect me to say you gave satisfaction?"

Cook—You need do nothing of the kind. Just say that I stayed with you three months; that will be the best character you can give me.

The Reason.

He watched her daintily nibbling her cress sandwich.

"I know what it is!" he cried suddenly. "I know why you appeal to me more than any other girl I ever met. It's because you're the perfect combination of the spiritual and physical. Your fresh, plump beauty and your birdlike appetite—"

"I never did eat much, even as a child," she murmured idyllically. "A touch of toast in the morning, a sip of soup at noon, a sprig of celery or a pinch of parsley at supper and I'm satisfied. Mother always says, 'The man that pays your board bill for life will be in luck.'"

"My ideal!" he cried.

Late that night she repaired to the larder and consumed seven hard boiled eggs, four cold pork chops, half a pounds of potato salad, three tomatoes and three slices of pie.

"It's a fearful strain," she thought; "but I'll land him this week or die in the attempt!"

"Yes, sah," replied Rufus. "I did ovah-sleep myself, sah."

"Where's that clock I gave you?"

"In my room, sah."

"Don't you wind it up?"

"Oh, yes, sah, I winds it up, sah."

"And do you set the alarm?"

"Ev'ry night, sah, I set de alarm sah."

"But don't you hear the alarm in the morning, Rufus?"

"No, sah. Dere's de trouble, sah Yer see, de blame things goes off while I'm asleep, sah."

A MEMORIAL

Herman Hagedorn, whose "Boys' Life of Theodore Roosevelt" has been recommended generally, drafted a memorial to Col. Roosevelt, which was adopted by the national council of Boy Scouts of America at its annual meeting recently. Mr. Roosevelt was Chief Scout citizen of the B. S. A. and its honorary vice-president, and Mr. Hagedorn's words are stirring because they are so true. The memorial follows:

He was found faithful over a few things and he was made ruler over many; he cut his own trail clean and straight and millions followed him toward the light.

He was frail; he made himself a tower of strength. He was timid; he made himself a lion of courage. He was a dreamer; he became one of the the great doers of all time.

Men put their trust in him; woman found a champion in him; kings stood in awe of him, but children made him their playmate.

He broke a nation's slumber with his cry; and it rose up. He touched the eyes of blind men with a flame and gave them vision. Souls became swords through him; swords became servants of God.

He was loyal to this country, and he exalted loyalty; he loved many lands, but he loved his own land best.

He was terrible in battle, but tender to the weak; joyous and tireless, being free from self-pity; clean with a cleanness that cleansed the air like a gale.

His courtesy knew no wealth or class; his friendship, no creed or color or race. His courage stood every onslaught of savage beast and ruthless man, of loneliness, of victory, of defeat. His mind was eager, his heart was true, his body and spirit, defiant of obstacles, ready to meet what might come.

He fought injustice and tyranny; bore sorrow gallantly; loved all nature, bleak spaces and hardy companions, hazardous adventure and the zest of battle. Wherever he went he carried his own pack; and in the uttermost parts of the earth he kept his conscience for his guide.

A man can lay claim to greatness when his private affairs begin to interest the public.

IRELAND NEARER HOME RULE

THAT IS THE CLAIM BASED ON THE CHANGING ATTITUDE OF THE CARSONITES

Belfast, April 15.—At the height of the pre-war Home Rule agitation one of the lookers-on, who, as usual, saw most of the play, ventured the opinion that the day would come sooner or later when the Carsonites would effectually destroy their own case against a Parliament in Dublin for a United Ireland. The House of Com[illegible] for the past month suggest that the prophecy has been partly fulfilled, and will be wholly fulfilled before very long.

Speaking in Belfast to the Ulster Unionist Council on November 15 last, Sir Edward Carson said:

"Without waiting for a Home Rule Bill that will partition Ireland, let us make the demand of the Imperial Government that in all future legislation the democracy of Ulster is to march hand in hand with the democracy of Great Britain. Whatever Bill is passed for the betterment of Great Britain must also be passed for the benefit of the people of Ulster."

During the General Election Sir Edward elaborated that policy in his speeches in Belfast and other parts of Ulster and the new policy was strongly supported by all the Carsonite candidates throughout the province; although Sir Edward Carson had then, as he has now, as much right to speak for the democracy of Ulster as he has at present to voice te opinions of the natives of Timbuctoo. To have been consistent the Ulster Unionist leader (not the Ulster leader, as half of the electors of the province at least are in favor of Home Rule for the whole of Ireland) ought to have insisted upon the Transport Bill, the Housing Bill, and the Health Bill being applied to Ulster, in the same form as they affected England and Scotland. But he did nothing of the kind. Bucked up by the Belfast Harbor Board and the Belfast Corporation, he has exhausted his vocabulary in denunciation of the first-mentioned measure; he and his friends objected to the provisions of the Health Bill, and were only partly satisfied when a new clause was introduced to meet the special circumstances in Ireland, while the climax came on Thursday, when Mr. Bonar Law announced that he would introduce a Housing Bill for Ireland. As a matter of fact the Carsonites now seem as anxious to keep the legislation of Great Britain and Ireland as far apart as possible, and in no case has the leader, or any of his Parliamentary supporters made the slightest effort to carry out the policy he referred to in November last.

If anything else was required to demonstrate the inconsistency of the Carsonites in the House of Commons it was found in their opposition to the Proportional Representation Bill. For years the Ulster Unionists have complained that outside their own special preserves in the North of Ireland their men had little or no chance of being elected members of various local public bodies. Yet when a measure was introduced for the special purpose of giving minorities a share in such representation, and thereby safeguarding the interests of Unionists in the south of Ireland, the Carsonites would not have it, because, in the words of their leader, it discriminated between different parts of the United Kingdom. Well might the "Irish Times," the leading Unionist paper in this country, in commenting on the Proportional representation debate, declare that the "strict logic" of the Carsonites "carried them to indefensible extremes."

No truer words were spoken in the House of Commons than those uttered during the debate on the Bill by Lieutenant-Col. W. Guinness, a well-known Irish Unionist, who said: "Ireland differs from England in race, temperament and social organization and that difference must be reflected in the legislation suitable for Ireland. England's meat may in many cases be Ireland's poison."

At all events, the absolute failure of the new Carsonite policy is bound to have its effect on the provisions of the next Home Rule Bill. The essence of partition was that Ulster, or at least North-East Ulster, had more in common with England and Scotland than with the rest of Ireland. By their action in the House of Commons lately the Ulster Unionists themselves destroyed that illusion. Possibly Sir Edward Carson will not admit his failure and face facts. But no one can go about Ulster just now without finding plenty of evidence to show that many of the Unionist leader's supporters recognise the failure, and are becoming more and more convinced that their proper place in the future is side by side with their fellow-countrymen in the South and West working out the common destiny of their country.

WHEN YOU WAKE UP DRINK GLASS OF HOT WATER

Wash the poisons and toxins from system before putting more food into stomach.

Says inside-bathing makes anyone look and feel clean, sweet and refreshed.

Wash yourself on the inside before breakfast like you do on the outside. This is vastly more important because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing illness while the bowel pores do.

For every ounce of food and drink taken into the stomach, nearly an ounce of waste material must be carried out of the body. If this waste material is not eliminated day by day it quickly ferments and generates poisons, gases and toxins which are absorbed or sucked into ducts which would suck only nourishment to sustain the body.

A splendid health measure is to drink, before breakfast each day, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless way to wash these poisons, gasses and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the blood stream, through the lymph the stomach.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs but very little at the drug store but is sufficient to make anyone an enthusiast on inside bathing. Men and women who are accustomed to wake up with a dull, aching head or have furred tongue, bad taste, nasty breath, sallow complexion, others who have billious attacks acid stomach or constipation are assured of pronounced improvement in both health and appearance shortly.

United States soldiers used in building state highways, principally in the south, will be paid at civilian wages deducting regular army pay.

LIQUOR ADS BARRED

Revised Contains Provision to That Effect.

Toronto, April 15.—Amendments to the Ontario Temperance Act, chief of which is one to permit the Government to take over the control of the sale of liquor in the Province, were introduced in the Legislature last night by the Provincial Secretary, Hon. W. D. McPherson. There are twenty-three clauses in the bill, and while most of them relate to the change in the sale of liquor, there are a number of other amendments of lesser importance.

There is one section which will prevent the solicitation of orders for liquor by any form of advertising. It declares that no person within Ontario shall "print, publish or distribute circular or newspaper containing a price list of intoxicating liquor used for beverage purposes, however described, or any announcement, however expressed, having for its object the solicitation within Ontario of orders for such liquor, and no person within Ontario shall by any other means whatever solicit such orders."

CADADA TO SEE LAST OF TITLES

OPINION PREVAILS AT OTTAWA THAT END IS IN SIGHT.

Ottawa, April 16.—The intimation of Mr. F. F. Pardee, member for West Lambton, yesterday, that he proposed to return to the Opposition fold came as no surprise to the House, and particularly to the Liberal Unionists, who are unaffected by his stand.

A meeting of the Liberal Unionist members for Ontario was held in Toronto in January. They discussed the whole question as their attitude towards Union Government both for the session and for the future. The meeting was held behind closed doors and no story of it has been printed, but it is no secret that at the caucus Mr. Pardee told his fellow Liberal Unionist members that he was elected only for one purpose to support conscription and he considered his contract was finished.

The only other waverer was William Charlton, Norfolk, while he did not go as far as Mr. Pardee, he intimated that he was ready to jump back. The remainder of the Ontario Liberal Unionists were satisfied with the Government and decided according to the stories current in political circles to give it loyal support.

Never Enthusiastic

As a result of this meeting, Mr. Pardee's fellow Liberal Unionist colleagues realized that he intended to seize the first favorable opportunity to announce his intention to return to the Opposition. Mr. Pardee, as former chief Liberal whip, only left Laurier with the greatest reluctance and was never enthusiastic over union. He only decided to run as an official Unionist candidate at the eleventh hour. His loyalty to the Government has always been questioned.

The Title's Committee will meet immediately after Easter. It is expected that Hon. W. S. Fielding or W. F. Nickle will be elected chairman. The committee will endeavor to make a report this session and judging by the feeling in the House and the personnel of the committee titles will not be treated gently. The general impression is current that there will be no more titles in Canada, either hereditary or non-hereditary.

Bench Calls for Order.

During the proceedings of the court last night His Lordship rebuked several of the spectators for talking. He complained that there seemed to be no constable present. He stated that he would insist upon order in the court, and if the spectators did not stop talking he would have one of them arrested and fined.

Plainclothesman Cookman was on duty and at once warned the offending parties.

This morning, Ald. Edgar, Dr. Amys, the M.O.H., and W. H. Buller, chairman of the Board of Health, gave evidence.

A great deal of it concerned ground which had been partially covered by preceding witnesses.

Dr. Amys stated that he knew the conditions at the Mount were not what they should be and the clay which composed the soil there was quite unsuitable for cesspools. He admitted that no complaints had been received regarding the operations of the septic tank situated in Ashburnham.

Mr. Buller in his evidence stated that the construction of a sewer along McDonnel street would add to the value of the land.

Judge Lennox intimatd that it would also act as a burden.

Mr. G. W. Hatton, who, in conjunction with other property owners on McDonnel St., is responsible for the action to have the bylaw quashed, was the last witness heard this morning. His evidence was of a more or less technical nature dealing with the ownership and extent of the property held by the plaintiffs.

CHILD'S TONGUE BECOMES COATED IF CONSTIPATED

WHEN CROSS, FEVERISH AND SICK, GIVE "CALIFORNIA SYRUP OF FIGS."

Children love this "fruit laxative" and nothing else cleanses the tender stomach, liver and bowels so nicely.

A child simply will not stop playing to empty the bowels, and the result is, they become tightly clogged with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sours, then your little one becomes cross, half-sick, feverish, don't eat, sleep or act naturally, breath is bad, system full of cold, has sore throat, stomach-ache or diarrhoea. Listen, Mother! See if tongue is coated, then give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the system and you have a well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers give "California Syrup of Figs" because it is harmless; children love it, and it never fails to act on the stomach, liver and bowels.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

PRESENT GIFT TO MRS. WRIGHT

POPULAR TRINITY CHURCH SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHER REMEMBERED BY CLASS.

After attending the service at Trinity church, the "Whatsoever Class" of Trinity Sunday school spent a very pleasant evening on Tuesday at the home of their teacher, Mrs. P. B. Wright, it being the occasion of the Red Side entertaining the Green Side, as the result of the recent contest.

The games and different diversions were all suggestive of the season, with the pretty decorations and refreshments to carry out the ideas of Easter-tide.

During the evening the president of the class, Miss Marion Dugan, made an address of appreciation to Miss Parker and Miss Murray, who so kindly gave their help and direction towards the success of the recent play, "The Chaperon," given by the class.

Following the address, Miss Eva Waugh presented a set of silver vases to each of the ladies, who graciously acknowledged.

At the close of a very happy evening, the girls having learned it was her birthday, gave Mrs. Wright a delightful surprise. Miss Daisy Stocker on behalf of the class in words that showed the love and high esteem in which they feel toward their teacher presented Mrs. Wright with a set of silver coffee spoons.

Mrs. Morley B. Lyle and Miss E. Margaret Slight, of Toronto, were also guests of the evening.

MEETING WAS ADJOURNED

Board of Health Memfers Were Attending Court.

There was to have veen a meeting of the Board of Health last night at which representatives of the townships of North Monaghan, Otonabee, Smith and Douro were to have been present to discuss the details of an arrangement whereby residents of these municipalities would be entitled to treatment at the local Isolation hospital.

Owing to the fact that Dr. Amys, the Medical Health Officer, and several other of the members of the Board of Health, were in attendance at the trial, having been subpoenoed as witnesses in the action to quash the sewer construction bylaw, it was impossible to do anything even though quite a number of the rural representatives had come to the city.

FRESH MILKERS BRING AS HIGH AS $200 IN ONTARIO

Present Price of Butter is in Measure Explained—General Farm Conditions.

The following is a summary of reports made by Agricultural representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture:

Reports regarding the condition of fall wheat are most favorable. Winter Injury has been unusually light. The Kent representative states that some farmers in that county are of the opinion that the fields are too thick.

It is rather too early to determine the extent of winter-killing of clover, and alfalfa, but the injury does not seem to be as great as was feared a month ago, and fair yields of hay are now expected, should no further harm occur. Recent rains have put new vigor into all the wintering crops.

No serious injury to fruit trees has been done by the winter that has just ended but the great damage to orchards by the severe weather of the previous winter is only now being fully realized, as a number of the trees have been very slow in dying. At present fruit buds are most promising in well kept orchards.

Heavy rains during the last week or so have hindered field operations, and consequently seeding generally will not be much, if any, earlier than usual. The roads also have been put in bad condition.

The marketing of live stock is fairly active for the season. Finished cattle are scarce. Huron states that a dealer from Lethbridge recently shipped sixty bulls to Idaho and Alberta for range purposes, most of which were purchased in that county. A strong demand for fresh milkers is reported, prices running from $125 to $200. Haldimand states that a local co-operative creamery made 5,000 lbs. of butter last week. The price of butter continues high, but varies considerably according to locality.

Horses are not in general demand, but according to the Leeds representative, there has been considerable enquiry for good heavy farm chunks, and also some demand for heavy pure-bred mares.

Prices for bacon hogs on the market range from $10 to $20.75 a cwt.—the latter figure, according to the Wellington representative, being local "high-water mark." As a consequence brood sows and small pigs are again at a premium. At a recent auction sale in Huron one grade sow with twelve pigs two weeks old brought $100. Elsewhere little pigs are reported to be selling at from $15 to $20 a pair.

Egg circles in Frontenac are paying 44 cents a dozen to members for eggs.

Regarding fodders, grains are in good supply, but have so high a selling value that they are being very carefully fed. Hay is rather scarce, but can cover the need with most farmers until good grass comes. There is a sufficiency of other coarse fodders.

Rural labor is said to be scarce, especially in the western half of the Province. Several representatives report many applications for help from farmers which cannot be filled at present.

NEW YORK AMERICAN

The picturized version of "My Four Years in Germany" adapted from the book of the same name by former Ambassador Gerard, was shown last evening for the first time on the screen of the Knickerbocker Theatre.

Closely following the printed revelations made by Mr. Gerard the photo-drama is intensely clear-cut and impressive. The audience sat literally on the edge of the chairs, absorbed in the unfolding of this diplomatic drama. Interest was so intense that even applause was checked.

Pictures of German court life, in the opening reels, showed the Kaiser, Crown Prince and the German war lords. The events leading up to the break between this country and Germany and Ambassador Gerard's request for passports made thrilling material. In the end the answer was given to Germany's taunt: "America won't fight," by showing scenes of the new American army and navy.

At the Royal tonight, tomorrow afternoon and evening.

SOLUTION OF HUN PROBLEM

(Wall Street Journal.)

In these times every newspaper is receiving from its readers suggestions for placing Germany in a position to pay, so far as she ever can, her tremendous debt to the world. The suggestions are of varying merit, and the general comment might be made that they are too complicated. Experience of our own Congress should tell us that the second-rate mind fatally meets a complicated problem with a complicated remedy. But the world's great statesmen and administrators do everything to simplify the problem to be faced, and therefore get results.

No proposal has been made which approaches in merit that of a straightforward receivership in bankruptcy for Germany, exercising exactly the powers which the court delegates to the receiver, whose sole business it is to put a going concern on its legs. This is the businesslike way of handling the problem and simplifying it, but it is to be feared that we have too many second-rate and "single-track" minds in Paris.

With a practical administration of Germany's resources, which are undeniably great, the problem would be far from insoluble. Great Britain has produced administrators of our results in the Philippines, Cuba and elsewhere. It may even be said that such just and farsighted reconstruction is one of the noblest gifts of the English-speaking race.

In 1882, on the refusal of France to co-operate, Great Britain occupied Egypt. Sir Evelyn Baring, who afterwards became Earl Cromer, was the British administrator. He found a fiscal system rotten from top to bottom. In two years Egypt was paying its way, and the property of its people steadily advanced from that time on. He did nothing sensational. His official rank was only Consul-General, but in practice he was absolute dictator. He sent the dishonest tax collectors to jail—taxes had been stolen all the way up to the Khedive himself. Baring saw that they went into the Treasury. The Egyptian peasant was secured in the possession of his property and the right to earn his living and was no longer taxed to starvation with the rhinoceros kourbash applied to the soles of his feet to extort the last penny.

The simple secret was the honest and intelligent administration of law. There was no complicated new financing. The example of a few well-merited hangings had an excellent effect and we can see in the recent German agitation in Egypt against the British Government that a new generation of Egyptians has arisen which has forgotten the former depths of misery. We can understand this for we have had similar experiences ourselves.

This is the straightforward way of putting distracted Germany and ravaged Russia on their feet again. Perhaps the plan will recommend itself to some of our statesmen when they realize that it really implies an ideal and not a mere hodge-podge of sentimental generalitis.

The Gods of Mars

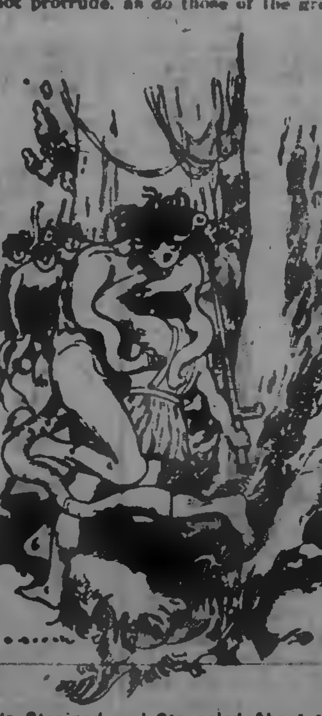
By
EDGAR RICE BURROUGHS

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

Now at last I saw the nature of the other monsters who had come with the plant men in response to the weird calling of the man upon the cliff's face. They were that most dreaded of Martian creatures—great white apes of Barsoom.

They stand fifteen feet in height and walk erect upon their hind feet. Like the green Martians, they have an intermediary set of arms midway between their upper and lower limbs.

Their eyes are very close set, but do not protrude, as do those of the green men of Mars; their ears are high set, but more laterally located than are the green men's, while their snouts and teeth are much like those of our African gorilla. Upon their heads grows an enormous shock of bristly hair.



We Strained and Struggled About the Tree.

Time and again the ferocious apes sprang in to close with us, and time and again we beat them back with our swords. The great tails of the plant men lashed about us as they charged from various directions or sprang with the agility of greyhounds above our heads.

But every attack met a gleaming blade in sword hands that had been reputed for twenty years the best that Mars had ever known, for Tars Tarkas and John Carter were names that the fighting men of this world of warriors loved best to speak.

But even the two best swords in a world of fighters can avail not forever against overwhelming numbers of fierce and savage brutes, and so, step by step, we were forced back.

At length we stood against the giant tree that we had chosen for our ascent, and then, as charge after charge hurled its weight upon us, we gave back again and again until we had been forced halfway round the huge base of the colossal trunk.

Tars Tarkas was in the lead, and suddenly I heard a little cry of exultation from him.

"Here is shelter for one at least John Carter," he said, and, glancing down, I saw an opening in the base of the tree about three feet in diameter.

"In with you, Tars Tarkas!" I cried, but he would not go, saying that his bulk was too great for the little aperture, while I might slip in easily.

"We shall both die if we remain without, John Carter. Here is a slight chance for one of us. Take it and you may live to avenge me. It is useless for me to attempt to worm my way into so small an opening with this horde of demons besetting us on all sides."

"Then we shall die together, Tars Tarkas," I replied, "for I shall not go first. Let me defend the opening while you get in. Then my smaller stature will permit me to slip in with you before they can prevent."

We still were fighting furiously as we talked in broken sentences, punctuated with vicious cuts and thrusts at our swarming enemy.

At length he yielded, for it seemed the only way in which either of us might be saved from the ever increasing numbers of our assailants, who were still swarming upon us from all directions across the broad valley.

"It was ever your way, John Carter, to think last of your own life," he said, "but still more your way to command the lives and actions of others, even to the greatest of jeddaks who rule upon Barsoom."

There was a grim smile upon his face as he, the greatest jeddak of them all, turned to obey the dictates of a creature of another world—of a man whose stature was less than half his own.

"If you fail, John Carter," he said, "know that the cruel and heartless Thark, to whom you taught the meaning of friendship, will come out to die beside you."

"As you will, my friend," I replied. "But quickly now, head first, while I cover your retreat."

He hesitated a little at that word, for never in his whole life of continual strife had he before turned his back upon aught than a dead or defeated enemy.

As he dropped to the ground to force his way into the tree the whole howling pack of hideous devils hurled themselves upon me. To right and left flew my shimmering blade, now green with the sticky juice of a plant man, now red with the crimson blood of a great white ape.

And thus I fought as I never had fought before against frightful odds that I cannot realize even now

With the fear that we would escape them, the creatures redoubled their efforts to pull me down, and, though the ground about me was piled high with their dead and dying comrades, they succeeded at last in overwhelming me, and I went down beneath them.

But scarce had I fallen ere I felt powerful hands grip my ankles, and in another second I was being drawn within the shelter of the tree's interior.

For a moment it was a tug of war between Tars Tarkas and a great plant man who clung tenaciously to my breast, but presently I got the point of my long sword beneath him and with a mighty thrust pierced his vitals.

Bleeding from many wounds, I lay panting upon the ground within the hollow of the tree, while Tars Tarkas defended the opening from the furious mob without.

For an hour they howled about the opening, but after a few attempts to reach us they confined their efforts to terrorizing shrieks and screams, to horrid growling on the part of the great white apes and the fearsome and indescribable purring by the plant men

At length all but a score, who had apparently been left to prevent our escape, had departed and our adventure seemed destined to result in a siege the only outcome of which could be our death by starvation, for even should we be able to slip out after dark where, in that unknown and hostile valley, could we hope to turn our steps toward possible escape?

As the attacks of our enemies ceased and our eyes became accustomed to the semidarkness of the interior of our strange retreat I took the opportunity to explore our shelter.

SAYS BRITISH GOVERMENT DID NOT PLAY FAIR IN CAMPAIGN

Newspapers Alleges That Electors Were Decoyed Into Voting for Lloyd George by Promised Abolition of Conscription

Westminster Gazette

If when the Government went electioneering last December its members had made speeches they are now making—if Mr. Churchill, for instance, had explained that the situation after the war would, in all probability, be such as to require the renewal of the Military Service Act for at least eighteen months, and if he had said that, though they woulddo their utmost to reduce military establishments every where to the voluntary level, they could not guarantee the future—they would at least have been in a position today to meet their opponents with a clear conscience. But last December they did nothing of the kind. They were apparently informed by their election agents that popular feeling was running strongly against compulsory service, and they straightway made "no conscription" one of their principal battle-cries. By so doing they disarmed their opponents and induced large numbers of working-people to vote for them in the belief that they were voting against compulsory service. A vote for the Government, they were told was a vote for "no conscription." Now Mr. Churchill tells us that in December the Government were imperfectly informed of the situation. They had not realised that the Army would automatically go to pieces when the peace was signed they had not foreseen that the European ferment would continue: The public does not take kindly to this explanation. It cannot readily believe that intelligent and responsible men could have overlooked the elementary conditions of military service in this country or so entirely have failed to gauge the probable state of Europe after the war. It concludes that where ignorance was bliss—where ignorance ensured such handsome electioneering profit—'twas folly to be wise, and so concluding, it is angry and resentful at the deception and asks suspiciously what is the real truth behind this manoeuvre, and whether under cover of present disclaimers it is not being handed over to a permanent system of compulsory military service.

The Government have only themselves for this result. Nothing could be more richly deserved than the nemesis which is overtaking them for the unscrupulous electioneering of last year. But if we are to reach safety on this subject we must recognise quickly that there is very much more in this affair than resentment at an electioneering trick found out. The traditional British sentiment about conscriptmilitary service has not changed since the war; it is, if anything, stronger after the war than before it. Evidently it is not due to any shirking on the part of the British people. No people have shown themselves more willing to endure and suffer in a good cause. To what, then, shall we attribute it? First of all to an abiding instinct that military service under conscription is not compatible in peace with political liberty, as understood in this country; and next to a belief that it will lead to a high-flying policy of adventure in Europe and the world. Conscription, to put it briefly, is, in the British view, the sign and symbol of the very militarism which we declared it to be our object to crush, and the probable forerunner of adventures and excursions, under military guidance, which would be incompatible with the free, tolerant unaggressive British Empire which is the ideal of the vast majority of British citizens. Its adoption, therefore, means to all these people an avowed failure in the principal object of the war, and a considerable danger that Great Britain will desire to replace Germany as the great militarist power instead of leading the world to a new international order.

MARRAIGE LAWS TO BE AMENDED

Toronto, April 16.—The Legal Committee reported the Marriage Bill at the final session of this committee at the Legislature yesterday. The main feature of the bill regarding a certificate of health before a marriage contract can be entered into is laid over for further consideration before the next session of the Legislature, but amendments are made to the Act which will strengthen it considerably.

Under these amendment it will be necessary for a minor under eighteen years of age to obtain the consent of parents in writing. With this consent ,the issuer of the marriage license must take evidence in writing of such consent to which declaration shall be attached a certificate of birth; and where consent cannot be given, evidene of that fact together with the birth certificate must also be taken and forwarded to the Registrar-General. Provision is also made that where parties under eighteen years of age are applying for a marriage license, they must, at that time, produce birth certificates.

Regarding the nullification of marriage , provision is made that the courts map proceed to render null and void a marriage contracted contrary to the law where the parties refuse to give evidence.

A GARDEN FOR EVERY HOME

Prof. P. G. Holden, director of the Agricultural Extension department of the International Harvester company, has published a leaflet that will be interesting and helpful to every suburban home owner and farm home in America.

Prof. Holden makes a strong plea for "an acre garden" becauseit will provide fruit and vegetables for the whole family the year round. It saves money, helps us to feed ourselves. It is healthful. It means more fruit and vegetables, less beef and pork. It means a real home where the children will love to invite their friends because they havesomething, to give them—strawberries raspberries, cherries and apples.

Don't say: "Oh, I can't bother with a garden. I'll grow corn and wheat and hogs and cattle and buy my fruit and vegetables." You know you won't buy them. We never do. We just go on eating pork. If we don't have a variety of vegetables and berries and fruit trees we won't have a real garden. If we don't plant one now we will never have one.

Grow a Real Garden.

Grow a real garden, not just some lettuce and some onions and some beets. Grow a garden that will supply fruit as well as vegetables all season and provide a surplus for canning, drying and storing for winter use.

Don't crowd your garden into a little patch near the house, with short, stingy rows close together "so it will be handy for mother to gather the vegetables." Handy for mother? That isn't the reason you put the garden near the house. It is so that mother will pull the weeds and do the hoeing. But mother has other things to do; the garden is poorly cultivated; the chickens get most of it. Besides, you can't half cultivate a garden with a hoe, the ground gets hard and packed.

Plant the garden in long straight rows, far enough apart to cultivate with a team and a field cultivator. Then every time you hitch up the team to cultivate the corn or the potatoes, go through the garden. It will only take a few minutes; mother won't need to break her back pulling weeds, the boys won't have to stay home on Saturday afternoon and hoe when they ought to go fishing.

Save Hand Labor.

A garden like this will give the largest returns with the smallest amount of hand labor. And hand labor takes time.

Get at the garden in time. Make a plan for it. Hang the plan on the wall. Talk about it. They lay out your garden. Make up your mind when you will plant the different things—then plant them.

Don't say you haven't time. You have time to live. A garden is one of the big parts of living.

This leaflet has been published for free distribution. It is accompanied by a planting plan showing varieties of fruits and vegetables best suited for general home growing.

This leaflet can be distributed in quantities by county school superintendents, county agents and garden and farm organizations.

THEATRICAL

PRIEST HEADS OFF A DIVORCE

"THE ROSARY," A PLAY DEALIN WITH PROBLEM OF LIFE.

Why is it that the percentage of divorce cases is rising steadily in the United States each year? What is the cause of marital unrest? These are questions that are being brought home to the people with every passing day. Able minds have been wrestling with these questions, but the answer does not seem to be forthcoming. Novelists have written of this topic; orators have spent their great eloquence on it and reformers have been busy, but all to no effect. The divorce mills grind and grind and the grist is never ending.

But, now comes a modern play "The Rosary" written by Edward E. Rose and produced by Rowland & Clifford which brings a solution of the vexed question. It is done in a quiet and effective style and offers a way out of the difficulty. The story takes you into the heart of an American family where all seems to be peace and happiness. But it is found that there is a canker spot even in this home. The husband does not have faith in his wife, and a rival so works upon his suspicions that the home is on the verge of the rocks.

Then at the critical moment, a priest arrives to set things in order again. He brings the spiritual side to bear on the situation, and the clouds of unbelief and distrust are dissipated into thin air. While the story is one to grip and to hold, it 's not a sermon. While it drives home a great truth with hammer blows, it is not a turgid and solemn drama, but is one told in terms of life, with the clouds of doubt illumined with unctuous comedy and with keen wit.

"The Rosary" will come to the Grand Opera House, on Thursday, April 24th, will be enacted by a select company, headed by Oscar O'Shea as "Father Kelly" and will be produced in modern style. It is a play that will cause endless discussion and will become of vast benefit to all who witness it. Its appeal is to all classes and all ages.

FATHER TIME AND WAR CREATED GREAT CHANGES IN BASEBALL

Numerous Shifts Have Taken Place and Many Famous Diamond Stars Will Be Missing When Curtain Goes Up on Major League Pennant Races.

The war has worked tremendous changes in baseball and baseball conditions. It shortened the season last year, weeded the major and minor league ranks of many of the stars and injected such a feeling of uncertainty into the atmosphere of the game, that a lot of the usual universal interest was detracted therefrom.

And, even during the year before the same spirit of unrest and uncertainty had slackened the music of the clicking turnstile.

The world war, following closely the conflict engineered by the federal league, proved a terrific menace to the life of the national game, and even now, with lasting peace in the making and the tangled ends about to be straightened out, it seems almost sure that the effects of the big strife will be long continued.

It needs but a glance at the various club rosters, the diminished player limit and the changed location of many stars to bring this fact home. Still, in spite of the big upheavals that the strife in Europe has wrought, old Father Time has wrought far more havoc with the personnel of the big league clubs. A glance at the Boston Red Sox team as it takes the field for the season of 1919 and a comparison with lineups the battled for the Hub in days gone by brings this fact home with a vengeance.

Ten years ago is not such an awfully long space of time even in baseball. True, it is longer than the average playing life of the baseball player today, although men like Lajoie, Honus Wagner, Fred Clark, Eddie Plank and Cy Young were every bit as efficient in the major league ranks after spending a decade of great usefulness there. Yet the last decade has wrought a tremendous upheaval in the makeup of the world's champion Red Sox. Go back even five years and look in vain for that array of heroes who carried the colors of Fenway Park to the front of the American League campaign season after season.

The great Tris Speaker has gone, Duffy Lewis has followed him, Jake Stahl is out of the business and so is Bill Carrigan. Gone are Nunamaker, Cady and Thomas. Heinie Wagner has just been let out, Joe Wood is playing on another team, so is Larry Gardner, and thus, after a close scrutiny of the roster it can be seen that of all the veterans who battled under Jake Stahl first and Bill Carrigan afterwards, Harry Hooper, whose return to the game is by no means positively settled, seems the sole survivor.

All that great army of pitchers including Wood, Bedient, Collins Hall and O'Brien, have departed Hooper is the last remaining link connecting the team of the present with that of the past. Go five years still farther back and the same condition is noted.

Where are Arellanes, Wolter Charlie Smith, Check, Karger and other flingers of 1909. Cicotte is still with the White Sox, and is the only one of this quintet working in the big league. Harry Lord, then a star third sacker, is out of it. Amble McConnell is no longer in harness. Lou Criger, McFarland, Madden and Donahue and Carrigan, all backstops, have found other spheres of usefulness, while Clyde Engle Harry Niles, Doc Gessler and the rest have followed suit.

Even the makeup of the royal rosters who used to troop south with the Red Sox every spring, have abandoned the pilgrimage to the sunny Southland. One looks in vain any more for the well remembered names of Nuff Ced McGreevey, Bill Cahill, Joe Burns and Jack Donnelly. And the same holds true even with the baseball scribes, for Ralph McMillin, the beloved Tim Murnane and little Eddie Martin and T. Harry Casey have gone west, while "Alphabet" Mitchell has given up his avocation as a baseball recorder.

NEW YORK EVENING MAIL

Former Ambassador James W. Gerard's "My Four Years in Germany" had its first presentation as a photoplay last night at the Knickerbocker Theatre. The most significant occurrence of the evening was the enthusiasm which greeted interpolated pictures of United States troops, an enthusiasm which gathered force until the theatre was ringing with cheers.

Two of the most interesting scenes of the picture are Mr. Gerard's visit to the prisoners' camp at Wittenberg and that in which he is given his passports. The German government, it will be recalled, at first refused to supply Mr. Gerard and his official family with passports until he had signed an agreement whereby America promised to release German boats interned at American piers. Mr. Gerard's refusal to sign on the dotted line and his statement that before doing so he "would stay in Germany until Hell freezes over" supplied one of the exciting incidents of the evening. The audience applauded the scene wildly.

At the Royal tonight, tomorrow afternoon and evening.

FASTEST RUNNER OF ALL

"There are none faster nor has he an equal in the world" would best describe Joie Ray, the diminutive distance running marvel of the Illinois Athletic club. This little speedster who can make record time over any distance from a half to two miles, is now at the height of his career and is giving sport enthusiasts the treat of their lives these evenings in the great Central A. A. U. indoor championships at the Coliseum.

Greatest Running Machine.

Ray, in the opinion of the most prominent sport critics from coast to coast, is the most famous and greatest human running machine in the game today. At no time in the last five or more years has there been any athlete who looked like his conquerer The only individual who ever gave promise of some day taking the scalp of this clever little tri-color runner, was Lieut. Johnny Overton of Yale, who paid the supreme sacrifice as a hero with the United States marines at Chateau Thierry. Had this valiant athlete lived the country might still have had the opportunity of seeing in action the two greatest milers that the world has ever known. New England cross country champion; Joe Stout of the University of Chicago, the western conference mile champion, and R Nightingale, the New Hampshire state college and New England state college champion Wins Mile Race at Boston.

This event set eastern fans a bit on edge and made them take notice of what the western phenom was doing. Ray next appeared in Boston for the famous Hunter one mile classic and won it in the remarkable time of 4:22 1-5. In doing so, he ran on a track of the kind he had never been accustomed to—a path that was 13½

Holds Many Records.

Joie holds enough records to make many a distance runner envious of him. He established the world's record of 2.14 for 1,000 yards on an indoor track, a world's indoor mark of 3.04 4-5 for the three-quarter mile, another international record of 6.45 for one and one-half miles, holds the world's record time of 9.11 2-5 for two miles (indoors) and only last night set a new world's indoor mile record by covering the eight furlongs in 4.14 3-5. To any one knowing the running game it can be readily seen from these figures that Ray is without a doubt one of the greatest athletes of modern times.

Frank Cayou, the well known coach at the Illinois Athletic Club, is Ray's mentor. In the recent tour Ray and he made through the east Joie met and defeated the best individuals the Atlantic coast athletic authorities could offer. The first race in which Ray appeared was the Rodman Wanamaker mile and one half, held under the auspices of the Millrose A. A. at New York. The I. A. C. expert won the race in 6.51, beating such opponents as Cecil Leath of Boston, the laps to the mile with square corners. Ray, nevertheless, mastered it and make Dave Caldwell of the Boston A. A., Mike Devaney of the Millrose A. A., Joe Stout of the University of Chicago and R. Nightingale of New Hampshire state look like "has beens."

HOW BIG LEAGUE MANAGERS SIZE UP THEIR CHANCES

Every Leader in the National and American Circuit Expects His Team to Finish in First Division in Big Races Which Start Within a Few Days.

John McGraw—"This is our year. In Doyle, Fletcher and Zimmerman we have the best infield that has faced the cameras since Connie Mack's Athletics were at their zenith. Our pitching staff is one of the finest and it will be hard to beat our outfield. Kauff and Young are due for great years and Burns is the best in the league. I call the Giants to win, though the Cubs, with Alexander back, may give us a close argument."

Ed. Barrow—"The Red Sox look the class of the league to me. We have lost a brilliant man in Duffy Lewis, but we got the better of the Yanks in that trade. Our pitching staff is better balanced and the work which our team did on its spring training trip convinces me that we won't go far behind. Jack Barry has been going in flashy style. The Red Sox are due for another pennant, unless I am greatly mistaken."

Connie Mack—"I'm a poor guesser, but I think the Athletics will be factors this year. Scott Perry is sure to be a sensation and with Kopp back our outfield will be one of the best. I have a lot of lively young fellows and they are full of determination. I place great confidence in our pitching staff and our offensive strength. George Burns will make them all sit up and take notice."

Fred Mitchell—"We won the National League pennant last year without Alexander and with him this summer we won't be satisfied unless we annex the world's championship. I haven't seen 'Alex' yet, but he wires that he is in great shape and that he will be at his best on arrival. If Bill Killifer's arm doesn't bother him we will set a merry pace for the other teams to follow."

"Kid" Gleason—"Don't overlook the Chicago White Sox in the betting this summer. We have Joe Jackson in his old position and Felsch may also be there. Eddie Collins seems tickled with the work of the team. Give us an even break in the luck of the game and the White Sox will be speeding out in front. I think the Red Sox and Yankees will be the most dangerous opposition we have."

George Stallings—"Not saying much this spring, but am very hopeful. Pitchers doing well and catching staff one of the best. If Herzog rounds out our infield as expected and Maranville gets back to his 1914 balance, the Braves will be worth a chance or two."

Wiber Robinson—"This will be one of Brooklyn's best years. We have a magnificent pitching staff with Cadore and Pfeffer in their prime and Marquard twirling better ball than he has done for years. One or two weak spots have yet to be plugged, but we will be there without a doubt. I was never better pleased with prospects."

"Pat" Moran—"This business of rebuilding a team isn't all it's advertised to be. The Reds required a lot of repairs, but are booked all right for the first division. My pitchers are a problem, but otherwise the team looks fine. If fight counts for much, we won't be out of it when they divide the spoils in October."

Hughie Jennings—"Not for years have the Tigers appeared so good. We will play Heilman at first base and keep Cobb, Veach and Shorten for the outfield. All our twirlers are in good shape. Detroit should have a very successful season. I think the Red Sox and Yankees will be the teams to beat."

Miller Huggins—"On paper the Yankees stand out over 'em all, and they demonstrated in their spring games that they are formidable. Duffy Lewis will make us a whirlwind outfielder, while Shore and Leonard should multiply the strength of our pitching corps. We are out for the championship. The Yanks are in superb shape after a great training season."

Clarke Griffith—"Washington can be counted on to make a real fight for it. We played in hard luck last year, but have evidently shaken it off. Walter Johnson is as good as ever and he will have better support."

Branch Rickey—"I look for a first division berth for the St. Louis Browns. Our men have worked overtime to get into shape and will have no excuse to offer. We have a well balanced club."

Lee Fohl—"Cleveland must be reckoned with as a championship contender this year. Take it from us, we will be right up at the top. Tris Speaker says our club is one of the strongest he has ever played with. Walker will prove a great find."

Hugo Bezdek—"I call Pittsburg to run one, two or three. We finished strong last fall and will improve this summer. Unless accidents cripple us, Pittsburg will be in the fight from May to October."

Meanwhile the Winter League "fans" have called the Giants as winners in the National and the Red Sox in the American. The opinion prevails that Chicago will give John McGraw's Giants the bitterest opposition in the National and that Ed. Barrow has the Yankees and the White Sox to beat out in the Johnson loop, with the Cleveland Indians dangerous contenders. However, all the "fans" are from Missouri. They want to be shown.

Both pennant races continue until the first week of October, after which the world's championship series will be staged.

CANADIENS HOME FROM SEATTLE

Montreal, April 15.—"Newsy" Lalonde, captain and manager of the champion Canadien hockey team and Couture, Berlinquette and Odie Cleghorn have reached home after their bitter experiences in the Stanley Cup games played in Seattle during last month. While "Newsy" Lalonde and Odie Cleghorn came on to Montreal, Couture got off at Sault Ste. Marie his home, and Berlinquette detrained at Mattawa to visit his home for a short time.

Of the four players Lalonde was the only who suffered influenza during the series. The other three having escaped it. McDonald and one or two other players, as well as Manager Kennedy, remained over in Seattle, although Kennedy was to leave Sunday. McDonald is still confined to the hospital and although he is on the road to recovery he is still very ill.

Although the games paid well there will be little left for the players out of their share after the hospital and doctors' expenses have been paid. The players received about $500 each including the two games, one played at Calgary and the other at Vancouver, from which the players got $210.

The games played at Seattle netted the players of each club $2,600 to divide up. The Seattle amount was divided evenly between ten players, while the money going to the Canadiens was divided among nine players. The clubs each made money as the games gave an average gate receipt of $4,400.

VETERANS' TAG DAY

For Relief Fund

Saturday, April 19

Peterborough citizens are reminded of the Annual Tag Day on Saturday next on behalf of the Relief Fund of this organization.

The money received in this way is kept in a separate fund, and is used solely to relieve cases of distress among returned soldiers and in the families of men who are still serving.

The fund has been well administered in Peterborough and your contributions in the past have helped to spare much of the suffering in Peterborough, that has existed in other cities, where a similar fund has not been organized.

The thoughtfulness of Peterborough citizens so much stimulated in the past, it is felt, will be again in evidence on Saturday next.

MILK PRODUCERS PROPOSE NEW PLAN TO DISTRIBUTERS

Price Paid Farmers to be Raised Without Increase to Consumer—Efficiency in the Delivery Will Make This Possible.

There is peace in sight between the milk producers of the district and the distributors of the city, a tentative treaty having been drawn up at the latest meeting of the former organization with prospects bright that it will be mutually acceptable. The producers will be satisfied if the proposition goes through. The main distributing centre will be benefitted and the consumer will not be penalized by an increase in present prices. The plan appears to be the most rational yet submitted.

Some time ago it was announced that the Milk Producers Association would follow the system that had been adopted in other centres and established their own distributing plant. This idea has been abandoned as unworkable. What is now proposed is to make some arrangement with the Peterborough Milk Products Co. by which the producer will receive a higher rate for their milk the selling price to remain the same.

The distributing company now maintains that their profits are so small that any advance in the cost price is impossible. This can be overcome, however, if the present plan is carried out and everything like overlapping in the work of distribution be eliminated. Mr. Gillespie and others in the business have always contended that in this department there has always been considerable waste. Two or three wagons delivering milk at the same time in one city block shows a lack of system that would not be tolerated in many industries.

If the city were divided into delivery districts and one driver assigned to each, just as the postal delivery is arranged, the cost of distribution could be reduced by almost fifty per cent. The members of the Milk Producers Association would obligate themselves not to deliver milk from their own wagons but to send it all to the central agency. Milk Producers who refuse to join the Association and prefer to play a lone hand will not receive the proposed increase in price.

Mr. Gillespie is in Toronto attending the session of the Legislature so that it is impossible to get an expression of opinion from him. However, the proposition of the producers, seems to be in line with the ideas he has always advocated.

BRITISH ARE PLEASED WITH ADDRESS OF LLOYD GEORGE

While He Did Not Disclose Terms of Peace He Told Enough to Reassure the Country That He Has Stood by His Pre-Election Pledges

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, April 17.—While opinions are divided regarding the substance of the address of Lloyd George before the House of Commons there is general agreement by the London press that it was a great Parliamentary triumph as, indeed was shown by the rousing cheers of his audience and the expressions of individual members in the lobbies. With the exception of the laborite and Northcliffe newspapers none of the morning journals condemn the Premier's statement wholly, while several warmly applaud it. These admit that Lloyd George revealed nothing of the peace terms but they do not complain. The Telegraph, for instance, says that his general account of the terms will give deep satisfaction and adds that he demolished whole structure his critics built on his supposed departure from his pre-election pledges.

ASK THAT RETAILERS BE BARRED FROM MARKET UNTIL 12 O'CLOCK

Trades Council Delegates Claim That Dealers Buy Too Much of Farmers' produce—Hotels and Restaurants Included in This Embargo

Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared before the Trades and Labor Council at its meeting last night and outlined to them the proposition for the electric line which he submitted to the Railway Committee at its meeting the other night and an account of which appeared in the papers yesterday.

He asked that if the members were in sympathy with the project they give it their endorsation and petition the Hydro Commission to have such a railway constructed.

He referred to the fact that this line would serve a country rich in minerals and with numberless waterfalls capable of generating great power. Its construction would afford work for many men and he was sure that in the past Eastern Ontario had not received so much attention from the Hydro as to make the people of Peterborough County feel diffident about asking that such radial line be built.

Six Hours a Day.

A communication was received from Vancouver enclosing the copy of a resolution passed at the recent Labor convention held at Calgary urging the establishment of a six hour day—a five working day week—and asking if the Peterborough Trades and Labor Council were in favor of a six-hour strike to bring this about. No action was taken in connection with this.

Another communication from the same source recommended the One Big Union idea in Canada. This was practically a request to sever international labor affiliation and become identified with the independent organizations of the West. No action was taken.

A communication from the postmen of the inside service was received asking influence to be exerted upon the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada to have a charter granted to their union.

It was decided to let this matter stand over as it is understood there is every indication at the present time of an amalgamation in the near future with the letter carriers' organization.

Property Qualification.

Several of the aldermen were called to task last night for failure to support Alderman Murray's resolution introduced at the last meeting of the City Council to have the property qualification clause in the Municipal Act abolished.

Two of th[illegible]bor aldermen who were present stated in explanation that the question had now been introduced upon two occasions and had been rejected and they felt it would have been defeated upon that occasion also.

It was generally felt at the meeting of the Trades Council that this was no excuse for the failure of the aldermen to give the measure their support once more and they were admonished that they were to make every attempt in the future to have a resolution of his kind passed. They were to watch their opportunity and introduce it when circumstances favored it.

Affairs on the Market.

A committee which had been appointed to look into the conditions prevailing upon the market especially as concerned the practice of storekeepers in buying produce in large quantities and keeping the price high reported last night.

Their chairman stated that as a result of his investigation he had found the merchants of the city were at perfect liberty to go onto the market and buy as much as they wanted for their retail trade after ten o'clock in the morning. As this meant nine o'clock by the farmers' time, now it followed that at ten o'clock the market was only beginning to become brisk and the ordinary people for whose accommodation it was supposed the market was especially designed were forced to pay a much higher price than was necessary if some wise restrictions were placed upon the retail buyers.

A long discussion followed upon this question, during which all kind of suggestions were made. One member advocated a free market; others advised extending the time during which merchants were prohibited from buying produce to 12 o'clock instead of 10 o'clock as at present; still others demanded that hotel keepers and restaurant keepers be included as merchants and barred during that time and still others there were who expressed doubts as to the efficacy of such a remedy as was proposed in extending the time limit for retailers. One member stated that in criticising the farmers for demanding a high price for their produce the Trades Council was taking a most peculiar stand inasmuch as they represented organized Labor, which was out for highest possible price and yet they criticised and opposed the farmers for doing the very same thing.

The farmers were organized like themselves and he could not see where it was fair to try and have restrictions passed of a nature which would work against their chances of getting

ALLIES BREAK GERMAN STRIKE

ARMY OF OCCUPATION THREATEN ALL MEN WHO QUIT WORK.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Cologne, April 17.— In consequence of the spread of German strikes to the Cologne district Sir Herbert Plumer in command of the British forces on the Rhine, issued a proclamation ordering the immediate return of men to work and threatening the strongest measures against persons promoting or countenancing a strike in the British zone of occupation. The general offered military mediation or other means of settlement. A squadron of British airplanes flew over the affected district today.

JAIL BREAKER IS STILL AT LARGE

POLICE BELIEVES FRANK McCULLOUGH IS MANY MILES FROM CITY.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, April 17.—There is little news today in connection with the escape of the condemned murderer Frank McCullough, from the Toronto jail, yesterday morning except theories. The main fact is that McCullough is still at large. This morning Mrs. Currell, wife of the night watch who was on duty when McCullough escaped received through the mails her husband's returned soldier buttons, with a letter in the same handwriting as those received by the newspapers yesterday. Last night a small boy found a lady's valuable watch and fob a few feet from the spot where McCullough jumped clear of the jail property. Some people incline to the opinion that McCullough is still in Toronto. While the police think that he is probably many miles away.

GERMANY TO ASK ALLIED NATIONS FOR INDEMNITY

CLAIMS DAMAGES FOR AERIAL ATTACKS AND OCCUPATION OF TERRITORY.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, April 17.—Germany intends to claim indemnities from the Allies, according to the Frankfort Gazette. It says the German delegates at Versailles will ask payment for damages sustained from aerial attacks, from the occupation of German territory by the Allied troops and for delay in concluding peace, causing a prolongation of the Bolshevik and Spartacan trouble.

LITTLE MEAT, NO SALT IN HUNGARY

VIENNA WILL MAKE EFFORT TO HELP OUT FOOD SUPPLY.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Vienna, April 17.—Reports of the executions at Budapest of Count Michael Karolyi, Archduke Joseph and others are untrue. The city continues outwardly quiet, with progress being made toward the nationalization of property. An effort will be made to send food to Hungary as there is little meat and few vegetables in the hotels and there is no salt. Eggs are plentiful, while bread sold in Budapest is worse than that on the market here.

Ottawa, April 24.—The ambulance transport Araguava, carrying 794 sick and wounded Canadians and seven nursing sisters, is due at Portland, Me., about April 23rd.

The soldiers include 254 for Toronto district, 88 for Kingston, and 52 for London. Transport Corsican with 384 Canadians and a number of dependents is due at St. John N.B., about April 24th.

Hundreds Are Killed at Ufa

Detroit, Mich., April 15.—Canadian Government Agent M. V. MacInnes shipped forty-three most desirable settlers, together with four cars of stock and effects, from Michigan to Western Canada.

GIVE 57TH BAND WHOLE GRANT

Trades Council Delegate Crowe Believes it Only Musical Organization Entitled to Public Support.

Delegate Joseph Crowe at the meeting of the Trades Counil last night, while discussing matters pertaining to the City Council brought up the question of band grants.

He stated that in his opinion the 57th Regiment band was the most deserving of the three in Peterborough. It was the pioneer musical organization and had an exceptionally able bandmaster in Mr. R. Glidden. It [illegible] was a union band and he felt that to vote it a paltry $200 for playing in the park 13 times in the year was totally inadequate.

Instead of breaking up the grant into three shares, the musicians of the city should join in one big band and get the whole thing. As it was at present it fell far below the amount set by the union scale for players and bandmaster per night.

As a religious organization, Mr. Crowe [illegible] his opinion that the Salvation Army should not expect a grant from the Council.

PETER WRIGHT PAINTS DARK PICTURE OF BARBAROUS HUN

Germany's Fighting Men All Have Yellow Streak and Must Be Forced into Battle—Address at Collegiate Hall Last Night Pleased Audience

Peter Wright, of the British Seamen's Union, in tense and forcible language last night, gave a graphic story of the part that the British navy played in the war, a part that saved the Empire and the United States alike from disaster. For over an hour and a half the speaker, who appeared here on behalf of the local branch of the League, held the closest attention of his audience, which comfortably filled the assembly room of the Collegiate Institute. Frequent applause marked the different stages of the speaker's terrific arraignment of the unparalleled brutality of the Huns.

"I did not want to come to Canada," said the speaker, who added that after the strenuous years of the war he was inclined to rest. "But the Seaman's Union wanted me to come. I told them I was ready to go to hell for them, and I did."

Mr. Wright probably did not intend it just that way, but the audience interpreted the statement literally, and a good-natured laugh followed the assertion.

Mr. Wright is a sailor, proud of his profession, but he is above all a Britisher, and is not disposed to permit the United States to walk away unchallenged with the honor, some American newspapers are disposed to claim, of winning the war. It was the British navy that frustrated the unholy ambitions of the Germans for a world conquest, and defeated a program that provided for the conquest of Belgium, part of France, and the levying of large war indemnities as they were for new revelations of United States. In the words of the Hun, England was to be left nothing but "eyes with which to weep."

While he hopes that there will be no more war, Mr. Wright believes in preparedness. The Empire must not again be caught asleep as it was in 1914. Even Lloyd George believed in the friendship and pacific intentions of Germany as late as 1910, and Lord Roberts and other military experts were declared alarmists because they held opposite views. When the Germans began building a navy to equal that of Britain, a navy that could be used against no other country, all doubt as to her purpose ended, and the Admiralty knew that the final test of strength was only a question of time.

Mr. Wright believes that Canada must have a navy, and in this enterprise the country must not be satisfied to be a mere adjunct of the United States.

Black indeed was the picture that the speaker painted of the Germans. The incidents of barbarity which he cited startled his auditors, prepared as they were for new revelations of barbarity. If the object of promoting hate of the German race is to prevent the people of the Allied powers from forgetting or condoning past offences against humanity, then Mr. Wright is a powerful agent in the work. He does not give the Hun soldiers credit for even ordinary bravery. There is a yellow streak in all of them. They can neither advance nor stand their ground unless there are machine guns behind them, when they have their choice of being shot either from the front or the rear.

Judge Huycke, president of the local branch of the Navy League, presided last night, and on the platform with him were Mr. Justice Lennox, who is presiding at the sessions of the Supreme Court, and Mr. W. R. Morris, secretary of the League. Support of the organization was solicited at the close of the address.

Capt. and Mrs. Maurice Park rendered an excellent musical program, their solos and duets being in keeping with the address. The program consisted of solos and a duet, each of which was given a hearty encore. Mr. John Allan acted as accompanist, and this gave Judge Huycke the opportunity, of which he courteously availed himself, to say kind words about Mr. and Mrs. Allan, who are soon to leave the city for their new home in Brantford. During their residence here both Mr. and Mrs. Allan have been prominent in every good work, and during the war the Allan family was always ready to help no matter what sacrifices their assistance involved. Judge Huycke said he was sorry to see Mr. and Mrs. Allan leave the city, but assured them of a hearty welcome if they ever decided to return.

The meeting broke up with the singing of the National Anthem, after which an informal reception was extended to Mr. Wright.

New Government Loses Prestige

London, April 17.—The prestige of the Paderewski government in Poland has been effected seriously by the position of the Allies and associated powers regarding the transport of Polish troops from France to Poland, according to advices. DECISIVE BATTLE SEEMS IMMINENT

BAVARIAN TROOPS ARE REPORTED AS MARCHING ON MUNICH.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berlin, April 17—Large forces of Bavarian troops, with artillery and mine throwers, began an advance on Munich yesterday morning, according to the Tageblatt, but it is unknown whether a decisive battle has as yet been fought. It is assumed the Government will await until an adequate number of reliable troops have been placed about the city.

ALLEGED BOLSHEVIST GIVEN FREEDOM ON TECHNICALITY

Russian With the Unpronounceable Name Did not Make Seditious Statements to a British Subject.

Kasmo Svestelnekoff, the Russian who it is alleged holds Bolshevik opinions and airs them at times appeared in Police Court this morning and the Crown's chief witness gave his evidence against the accused, who was charged with uttering seditious expressions and making threats.

This man who is a Russian like Svestelnekoff with a name almost as long and impossible of pronunciation, stated that he came to Peterborough in September from Brantford, having spent three years of his time in Canada in the latter city.

He claims that while at the home of the accused on Sunday, March 30, he was reading a religious paper. Svestelnekoff was there with his wife and small children. The wife is an Austrian, according to the testimony of the witness.

An argument followed between the accused and the witness as to the proper observance fo the Sabbath. The witness, who had been reading the religious paper, maintained that the owner of the house should not play cards on Sunday especially in view of his children.

Svestelnekoff replied baring his arm and waving it at the witness that it was his God. He then announced his willingness when the opportunity offered to kill the ministers—he did not specify whether it was to the divines or the ministers of state that he alluded—the police and all the rich men. According to the witness Svestelnekoff stated that he would take the money from the banks and divide it amongst the working men who had a right to it.

He is credited with planning a most

JOSEPH CROWE IS LABOR'S CHOICE FOR ALDERMAN

Nominated at Last Night's Meeting of Trades Council to Succeed Ald. Murray When He Resigns—Has Had Experience.

Alderman Alex. Murray tendered his resignation at the meeting of the Trades and Labor Council last night, as one of Labor's representative at the City Council Board.

In the letter which announced his desire to withdraw from the position he expressed his gratitude to the members of the Trades Council for selecting him as one of their representatives, and stated that only failing health could influence him to take the step he felt was necessary.

Alderman Murray's resignation was accepted with regret and many expressions indicative of the satisfaction he had given during the brief period he had found it possible to take active part in municipal affairs, were heard.

It was decided that as the seat which would be vacant on the City Council as a result of the resignation of Alderman Murray was a labor one the Trades Council should proceed without loss of time to choose a successor.

The names of Brother Crowe, an ex-alderman, Brother Sharpe and Brother Stenton were mentioned but upon Brother Crowe announcing his willingness to subscribe to all the planks of the Labor platform the others withdrew and allowed him the place by acclamation.

Mr. Crowe expressed some doubts as to the manner in which the vacancy in the City Council would be filled. He stated that having had some experience there he certainly understood that the candidate next lowest in the running at the election would be the appointee.

One of the members stated that he understood this was not the case.

SATURDAY IS TAG DAY.

REMEMBER that Saturday is the Veterans' annual Tag Day, the date marking the anniversary of the second battle of Ypres.

Remember that the funds which it is proposed to raise are not to be devoted to helping the veterans themselves, but every cent is to be used to assist the helpless dependents of those who have fallen in the war. If there is any class who should be made the peculiar charge of the people right here is where they are to be found.

You may not be eligible to wear a button, a silent witness to military service, but the next best decoration that will be in evidence Saturday will be the badge that will be given as an evidence that you have responded to the appeal.

He gives twice who gives quickly, but it is possible to do both. If by any chance you are overlooked in the crowd, then help on a worthy cause by looking up someone who is receiving contributions.

ALD. M'INTYRE AND LABOR.

ALD. M'INTYRE was not elected as an out-and-out Labor man at the last election, but it was the votes of the workingmen, just the same, that put him where he is today, and on every purely labor issue that has come up in the Council Ald. McIntyre was found lined up with the four regular representatives of the workingmen.

There is no longer any doubt as to the status of the alderman. He has become a full-fledged member of the Carpenters' Union, one of the strongest in the city, although he is an employer rather than a journeyman. However, the constitution of organized labor provides for just such cases. Ald. McIntyre has been advanced another step in the ranks, having been accepted as a delegate to the Trades Council from his union. No one will be surprised if one of these days he cuts loose from former political associations and casts in his lot with the Independent Labor Party.

If the City Council elects Joseph Crowe to the vacancy that will be caused by the resignation of Ald. Murray, Labor will have five representatives on the Board of Aldermen. This will mean a tie on all questions in which the cause of the workingmen is the issue, and Mayor Duncan is certain to find himself frequently forced to use the casting vote.

Ald. McIntyre is ambitious, like every other seasoned member of the Council who aspires to the highest elective office in the gift of the city, and Labor is already grooming him for the mayoralty. His hat will be in the ring next January, when Labor hopes not only to elect a majority of the Council but to put one of their representatives in the seat of honor.

THE FARMERS' INCOME TAX.

SOME TIME AGO it was announced in these columns that every farmer was expected to fill out an income tax blank, regardless of the extent of his possessions. This statement was contended in some quarters, the claim being made that only those subject to the tax were required to make a return, just as is the case with the wage-earners and business men of the city.

The Review, to settle this point, asked the inspector at Kingston for a ruling, which was duly furnished and which made it clear that every farmer was required to fill in a blank. The inspector said that such were the instructions from headquarters, and that the deputies had no alternative but to carry them out.

The Review has received a number of complaints from farmers, not against the law itself, but the assertion is made that they have been taken unawares and re not in a position to comply with the order. Not one farmer in ten keeps books. He is unable to even approximate either the amount of his production or the sums received from sales or other sources. One farmer in this position told The Review yesterday that he had written the inspector to this effect. The best he could do was to send in an estimate of what he is worth. The inspector wrote back that this was not sufficient. The blank must be filled out and returned, and as a result the farmer does not know what to do. Any conscientious man is naturally disinclined to affix his signature to a statement that is little better than a guess.

No law was ever designed—or at least no law should be so intended—to bear down unjustly upon a special class or to work peculiar hardship to any community. There may be some misunderstanding with regard to this matter. The farmer, in the blanks furnished, is required to make a detailed statement of every department of his business. Few business men in the retail trade would be able to do as much on short notice, and the equally impossible should not be required of the farmer.

MINISTERS AND REPORTERS.

AT A CONVENTION of Congregational pastors at Stratford, one of the delegates made the charge that the newspapers mutilated the sermons which they reported. The responsibility for this was laid upon the unregenerated reporters, who, from a lack of religion rather than from the want of ethics, efficiency or professional enthusiasm, are unable to enter into the spirit of this branch of their work.

If there is any class of public men in Canada with a real grievance against the newspapers it is the ministers. Alleged epitomes of some of the discourses published would be impossible of identification except by the text or other landmarks. The real cause of the trouble is that the undeveloped cub reporter is usually assigned to this work, perhaps as a preparation for the Sunday labor that goes with journalism, or as a means of seasoning him to the business. Then, too, the editor may deem such a course safe. No pastor, no matter how deep his grievance, can, from the very nature of his profession, visit the sanctum and start a rough house, as politicians and others of the tribe of the non-elect frequently do.

Frequently the budding journalist who tries his apprentice hand on reporting a sermon lacks knowledge of the subject under discussion. However, the real danger to which he is exposed and to which he exposes the victim of his efforts, is that he will concern himself with the speakers words rather than his ideas, ignoring the latter altogether and engaging in a catch-as-catch-can bout with the former. The result is [illegible] chaos, to which the preacher very justly objects.

But practice in this line of work will develop any latent talent the reporter may possess, and in time he is likely to become an expert, even if his spiritual condition shows little if any improvement.

THE EXAMINER ON TITLES.

LET US BE CHARITABLE and believe that if the Examiner knew more—or even anything—about parliamentary procedure, it would not perpetrate those frequent editorial follies with regard to Capt. Burnham's attitude on the question of titles for Canadians. It represents the captain as talking against titles inside and outside of the House and then dodging the issue by refusing to vote either way when the test comes.

Some papers are malicious; others are simply stupid. One year ago Premier Borden made it clear in the House that if an anti-title resolution then before Parliament were adopted, it would mean a vote of want of confidence, and the Government would be obliged to resign. The war was on at that time, and winning the war was of vastly more moment than stripping a gaudy decoration from the person of some tin-horn knight or baronet. The situation was peculiarly grave, and it is little wonder that some men realised their responsibility to the extent of voting against their convictions with regard to titles rather than precipitate an election while the fate of the Allied cause was trembling in the balance. Capt. Burnham refused to vote either way, a fact which should be sufficient proof that he was not afraid to maintain his usual attitude.

The passing of Mr. Nickle's anti-title resolution in the House the other day would have been another want of confidence vote. Acting Premier White averted that by a parliamentary strategy which forced Mr. Nickle himself to vote against his own motion, much to the amazement of the George Street wheelsman, who affects to direct the course of the nation. Capt. Burnham found himself in the same positon.

"Red Michael" Clark says that this discussion of titles is, after all, largely a tempest in a tea pot. It does seem to have assumed dimensions out of all proportion to its importance. It should be settled in short order, and not be used as a means of getting the Government into a hole. It would scarcely speak well for the dignity of the Canadian Parliament to have it go abroad that the Government had come triumphantly through every test on matters of real moment only to go down to defeat over a bunch of ribbon decorations and titular appendages.

ALL FOR DAYLIGHT.

(Guelph Mercury.)

Since the first days of railway time have passed there's hardly any one in this district who would go back to Parliament time. Think what the farmers would gain if they had the children home from school an hour earlier. Might help to solve the labor problem.

HUMAN NATURE.

(London Advertiser.)

A little boy with a crippled leg was trying to pull his frail body up the steps of a P.A.Y.E. car on Saturday. Four or five men saw him and started toward him, but the conductor was out of his car end ther first to give this Tiny Tim a hoist. Most people love every lonely kid they meet, and a helpless one most of all. But how they dislike to be caught showing their feelings. They'd almost rather be caught doing something wrong than to parade a good impulse.

OBSTINATE MME. COW.

(Buffalo News.)

The Canadian farmer prevented the adoption of the daylight saving plan. He made the same objection about harvesting in the dew that was made by the American farmer, and added something to it. He told the Ottawa legislators that Mrs. Cow simply would not move up her schedule. She has set the machinery of her laboratory to run according to sun time, and he said she refused to change it. As a result, the milk output would not be up to the amount required when the hired man appeared with his milking stool if the clock was set ahead.

PARIS MAN MADE LOVE TO WIDOWS

IS NOW ASKED TO ACCOUNT FOR TEN MISSING FIANCEES.

Paris, April 16.—The disappearance of a number of women from a suburb of Paris has led to the arrest of Henri Laudru, who, the Paris detectives assert, may be able to solve the mystery of their continued absence from home.

The missing women were acquaintances of Laudru, who is declared to have made a specialty of becoming engaged to widows. The police authorities say that from papers found in Laudru's possession they believe that he had at least ten fiancees who cannot be found.

Under the name of George Dupont, Laudru hired in 1915 a lonely villa in the outskirts of Gambass, on the border of the Rambouillet Forest. The villa is almost surrounded by walls and is 550 yards from the nearest house. The allegation is made that Laudru only paid brief visits to the villa, accompanied by women none of whom was seen to leave the place.

Suspicious Discoveries.

One woman visited the house with her two small dogs, the bodies of which were found Sunday under a heap of leaves. They had been strangled by a cord. Women's dresses, a revolver, a rifle a blood-stained mattress and a cord similar to that with which the dogs were strangled, are alleged to have been found in the villa.

Laudru according to statements made by the detectives, admitted having used various names because he had been imprisoned several times. He denied, the authorities say, that he did away with any of the women, but said he killed the dogs at the request of the woman because it was too expensive to feed them.

AUTOS CAN HIT HIGHER SPEED

LIMIT TO BE RAISED IF COMMITTEE'S REPORT IS ADOPTED.

Toronto, April 16.—Motorists in the Province will be jubilant at the action of the Municipal Committee of the Legislature yesterday. After a short, but strenuous fight, the committee reported favorably upon a clause in amendments to the Motor Vehicles Act permitting motor cars to be driven at a speed of 20 miles an hour in cities, town and village, instead of 15 as at present and at 25 miles an hour in the country instead of 20 as at present. The fight was largely between the rural and urban members although there were a few bolters from the former class, who owning cars of their own, backed up the request to permit motors to be driven at a faster rate of speed. It was stated cars are now driven over, the 15 and 20-mile limit and it only makes hypocrites of people. The clause permitting the cars to be driven faster in urban centres was passed by 19 to 17, and to permit them to be driven at 25 miles in the country, was passed by 20 to 16.

The committee killed a clause which proposed to make it impossible for a person to be convicted of an offence under the act upon the opinion of a single witness as to the rate of speed. Another bill amending the Motor Vehicles Act which was reported, provides that every motor vehicle shall be equipped with a noise muffler; also that every motor vehicle used for commercial purposes must be equipped with a mirror.

Opponents to the higher rate of speed intimated they would fight the clause when the bill comes up in the House.

HOT CROSS BUNS ON GOOD FRIDAY

RECIPES FOR BAKING THESE ARTICLES OF HISTORIC INTEREST

Serve Hot Cross Buns on Good Friday morning!

In England the first home of the bun is Cambridgeshire and Hertfordshire where the old Roman roads Ichnield street and the Armynge street, crossed and there in Roman times stood the altar of Diana of the Crossways where the Romans offered their sacred cakes.

In modern times a plate of Hot Cross Buns appears on every English breakfast table Good Friday morning, and early in the day there are bun-peddlers in the street with baskets of the fresh sweet cakes for sale.

Their most familiar cry is:

"One a penny, two a penny,
Hot Cross buns.
If you have no daughters,
Give them to your sons."

1. Mix 1 cake of compressed yeast into 1 and 1-4 cupfuls of scalded milk, dissolving thoroughly. When dissolved stir 1 cupful of bread flour into the yeast and milk and beat until very smooth. Cover and let stand until the sponge is light. When light stir in two eggs, well beaten, 1-3 cupful of melted lard and butter, mixed, and 1 teaspoonful of salt. Add enough flour to make a dough soft but stiff enough to knead, and knead until smooth and elastic. Put in greased bowl, cover, and let rise. Shape the buns into twenty-five or thirty balls, putting a raisin in the centre of each. Put on greased pans and bake twenty minutes. Make a white frosting and mark a white cross with it on top of each bun.

2. Dissolve 1 cake of yeast in 1 cupful sweet milk, add to 2 cupfuls of milk and 1 quart of sifted flour. Beat to smooth batter. Let rise till double in bulk. Beat again, adding 4 teaspoonfuls melted butter, a pinch of nutmeg and 1-2 teaspoonful salt. Sift 1 cupful of flour with 1 level teaspoonful soda, add to the batter, and knead for ten minutes. Cover and let double in bulk. Turn on floured board, roll to half inch thick, and cut with biscuit cutter. Place on greased pans to rise. When light scope topes with cross-marks. Bake, covered, for twenty minutes, then brown. Brush tops with beaten white of egg and powdered sugar and cinnamon.

WASHINGTON IN FULL DRESS

Washington, April 17—"Everybody in Washington seems to be somebody" is the native way in which a discerning young woman new to capital society expressed her interest in meeting not only our present day dignitaries (who are still quite plentiful despite the conspicuous absentees in Paris) but the sons and daughters of famous men whose deeds and words have helped to make our nation's history.

The occasion which led to the comprehensive remark was the drawing room talk of Mrs. Roswell Randell Hoes, the former Miss Rose Gouveneur, who, with her sister, Miss Maude Gouveneur, are the great granddaughters of James Monroe, fourth president of the United States and author of the now world famous Monroe doctrine.

These ladies, lifelong residents of the capital and fixed stars in its social firmament, are particularly prominent just now not only by reason of their illustrious progenitor, but by reason of Mrs. Hoes' contribution to history in the form of a collection of historic gowns which she has assembled and placed in the National museum, where any visitor to Washington may study the taste of the first ladies of the land from the time of Washington to Roosevelt. The latest addition to the collection is the gown worn by Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt to the inaugural ball of March 4, 1905. This gown of blue and silver brocade should have particular attention for several reasons, besides the very obvious one of its historic value, which it shars with other pieces in the collection.

It is first of all, a made-in-America gown of American grown and woven silk, from an American design, and presented to the wearer by the manufacturers with the assurance that with her acceptance of the gift the design would be destroyed, hence the gown would remain unique. It is furthermore the last inaugural ball gown ever worn by the president wife, as this Roosevelt-Fairbanks ball was the last so called function of its kind ever given. The ball arranged in honor of the Taft and Sherman inaugural was abandoned at the last minute by reason of a short, sharp and sudden storm that descended on Washington March 4, 1909, while President Wilson made it clear before leaving Princeton in 1913 that this time honored celebration should be eliminated from his inauguration, a resolution repeated four years later to the great disappointment of the majority of inaugural visitors.

Mrs. Hoes, in describing the museum collection of gowns limited to those of the respective mistresses of the white house, unconsciously contributes to the history of good dressing, as she wears an always modish and becoming evening gown of rare old lace inherited and treasured by many of the Monroes and Gouveneurs, which is brought up to date over a foundation of soft black satin draped on becoming lines.

Miss Maude Gouveneur, in walking down Connecticut avenue one morning recently wore a conservative but well tailored suit in serge, black with white collar, cuffs and waistcoat, and, as usual with this young woman, who always knows her own mind, high boots of white buckskin.

On the next block the visitor who feels everybody in Washington is somebody had her opinion confirmed by meeting a handsome young woman in tan colored suit of severe cut with low brown oxfords and round hat of brown straw, who was pointed out to her as Mrs. James Wadsworth, Jr. wife of the senator from New York, youngest daughter of the late John Hay and in her own right president of the National Anti-Suffrage society.

Two other interesting figures noticed on the same walk were Mrs. H. B. S. Beale, youngest daughter of the late James G. Blaine now in deep mourning for her only child, a gallant young officer killed in action early in the winter, and Mrs. Medill McCormick, wife of the newly seated senator from Illinois. Mrs. McCormick like young Mrs. Wadsworth, wore a severely plain tailored suit in high colored cloth with round semitailored hat. Also like Mrs. Wadsworth she has to her credit a happy girlhood in Washington, when as Miss Ruth Hanna she was one of the belles of the senatorial circle living in what was then known as "the little white house" on Lafyette square, just across from the park from her present residence.

The none too kindly criticism of a foreign visitor that American women have never learned when to wear ostrich feathers or velvet at it's no longer holds good, as if one may judge by the Lenten bible class at the home of Mrs. Stephen B. Elkins, where some 200 leaders in the capital's social life come together every Thursday morning for a study of the Book of Genesis, under the leadership of Mrs Spencer, wife of the senator from Missouri, a lifelong student of bible history.

By actual observation only one ostrich trimmed hat appeared at last week's meeting, where simple dressing was distinctly the rule. Simplicity in this company is, however, of the severely elegant kind.

The handsome hostess, who receives each member of the class at the entrance of the ballroom, wore a one piece serge dress in dark blue, combined with bands of black satin and the well cut square neck, which was finished in turnover collar of white batiste. Mrs. Spencer wore a gown of the same description, with a round low crowned hat trimmed in dark dahlias of rich red.

Mrs. John Hays Hammond also wore a serge gown in black or very dark blue with its collar and cuffs of heavy Russian lace. Mrs. Hammond wore no ornaments, while her becoming hat was a large tricorne of black Milan trimmed in a scant bow of glycerined ribbon, the bow placed far to the back.

Mrs. Jouett Shouse, wife of the assistant secretary of the treasury, a very recent acquisition to the administration circle and one of the most faithful members of the company wore a brown serge suit on smart lines with round hat of brown Milan turned well up at the left side, where it was held by a fan shaped rosette of grosgrain ribbon of the same color.

Mrs. Charles Boughton Wood wore a checked coat suit of blue and black with one of the ribbon made round hats all in dark blue with tiny cluster of gay flowers on the edge of the brim.

MRS. CLARE MADE A LIFE MEMBER

WARSAW W/ M. S. HONOR WIFE OF THEIR POPULAR PASTOR.

(Special to The Review)

Warsaw, April 16.—On Monday night after the regular meeting a number of the members of the Women's Missionary Society and Epworth League Workers repaired to the parsonage where they presented Mrs. Clare, their pastor's wife with a Life Membership Certificate of the Women's Missionary Society and the following address:—

Dear Mrs. Clare:

During the past three years in our loving associations with you and yours we have had splendid opportunity to appreciate your many good qualities. You have been a faithful and efficient member of our Women's Missionary Society and League and you also have assisted ably in all the different departments of church work. It is therefore with much pleasure that we ask you to accept this Life Membership Certificate of the Women's Missionary Society, as a concrete proof of our feelings towards you, and we trust that as you look upon it in the future years it will be to you a symbol of the pleasant relationships between you and ourselves. Our prayer is that as time rolls on your service in the Master's work may be a blessing to others amongst whom you may labor and that you yourself may experience the joy and satisfaction which only those who truly serve know.

Signed on behalf of the Warsaw Women's Missionary Society and Epworth League:

MRS. WASSON,
MRS. G. TAYLOR,
MISS E. M. DEWART.

The address was read by Mrs. Wasson and the certificate was presented by Miss Dewart.

Mrs. Clare, who was completely taken by surprise, made a very suitable reply expressing her appreciation of her being made a life member. A short social time was spent and after singing Auld Lang Syne the company dispersed.

ALLEGED BOLSHEVIST

advanced system of nationalization. He announced that the factories should be run by workingmen for the workingmen.

According to the testimony of the witness Svestelnekoff felt that in running the factories, he, himself, would be a most capable man as he is alleged to have said on the eventful Sunday evening that he had worked in the C.G.E. for some time and had made as much as $60 in 10 days. He claimed that he could show the Canadians how to work. They could only do one thing and he was capable of turning his hand to anything.

The foreigners, he claimed, were the strong men of the country. In Europe they built great high buildings and were much in advance of the times in this country.

The witness claimed to have reminded him that having made good money in this country he should be silent and not express such views. The accused is alleged to have replied that he would use his money to buy revolvers, bombs and dynamite and when he received word from Hamilton, Toronto or Montreal to revolt, he would be among the first. He also expressed a strong conviction that he could show the people of this city how to run Peterborough if he could only talk English better and could preach his doctrines to them.

The case against the alleged Bolshevik was dismissed on account of a clause in the statutes which states that seditious utterances must be heard by a British subject and the Crown witness admitted that he had never been naturalized.

Crown Attorney Hatton prosecuted and G. N. Gordon appeared for the accused. The examination was accomplished with the assistance of two interpreters, one of whom when handed the passport of the Russian to decipher was as much in the dark as any Canadian could possibly be although she maintained stoutly that she could read Russian.

Kosvo Svestelnekoff, as he appeared in the prisoner's dock this morning, looked like a typical Russian.

Union Methodist Service Tomorrow

The ministers and congregations of the four Methodist churches are uniting in a service on Good Friday morning at eleven o'clock in the George Street Methodist church.

This service will take the form of a Methodist Love Feast and at the close, the sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be administered. There will also be a special musical number appropriate to the occasion. The gathering of last year will long be remembered and it is expected that the coming service will be one of great blessing and profit.

Because of the significance of the day it behooves everyone to spend at least a portion thereof in worship and Christian fellowship. The sacrifice which Christ offered has meant much to the world, and this gathering has been planned to provide an opportunity for the people to give expression to the gratitude of their hearts. A most cordial invitation is extended to the public to be present at this service.

RESTORE THE NATURAL SIGHT

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody will Know

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is mussy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it, and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

WILLIAMSON HAS A BIG SURPRISE

TORONTO MAN FINDS RELIEF FROM TROUBLES AFTER YEARS OF SUFFERING

"I was never so surprised over anything in my life, as I was over the relief I got through using Tanlac," said C. W. Williamson, of 1115 St. Clarens Avenue, Toronto, Ont., recently.

My kidneys had been worrying me for four or five years," he continued, "and kept me miserable most all the time. I had terrible pains across my back and rheumatism in my right leg that pained me so awfully that I'd almost drop in my tracks. I had no appetite and could hardly sleep, I was so nervous, and many a night I never closed my eyes at all."

"I had no life or energy, I felt blue and discouraged, for I was in a dreadful condition, and there seemed to be no help for me.

"One of my friends told me to try Tanlac, which I did, and have been improving every day since I started on it. The rheumatism never bothers me now at all, and my kidneys are in fine shape. My appetite is fine and everything agrees with me. My nerves are steady and I sleep like a log all night and have gotten back my former strength and energy."

Tanlac is sold in Peterboro by W. R. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield, by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by C. Pringle & Son.

the best possible price for their produce.

The matter was disposed of at last by passing a resolution urging the City Council to extend the time during which dealers were barred from the market to 12 o'clock and including with dealers, hotel keepers and restaurant keepers.

Another resolution was passed asking the City Council to see to it in future that office holders upon any public body are not allowed to take contracts for work which is given and paid for through that body.

This action was taken as a result of the committee which had been requested to investigate the circumstances connected with Mayor Duncan's Public Library contract. President Bolwell stated that when approached by him His Worship had no excuse to offer save that he had not thought of its being against the law and as far as awarding the contract without calling for tenders was concerned, he stated that he had never attended a meeting of the Public Library Board and therefore knew nothing of it.

It was stated last night that the bakers of the city are forming a union and the Peterborough Bread Company was especially commended as it was a union concern when it came to the city.

CAPT. BURNHAM SAYS HE WILL NOT VOTE FOR PROHIBITION

Has Done so Before but "Never Again" is Now His Verdict—Will Support Strict Government Control.

The following letter from the Rev. O. C. S. Wallace, D.D. LL.D., President of the Baptist Convention of Ontario and Quebec, formerly Chancellor of McMaster University of Toronto to Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., of Peterborough on the subject of the latter's views regarding prohibition will be of such general interest and benefit that Mr. Burnham has forwarded it for publication. The letter is as follows:

Montreal, April 15, 1919

J. H. Burnham, esq., M.P.,
House of Commons,
Ottawa,

Dear Sir:—

Your letter without date in answer to mine of April 10th has been received and I thank you for it. It has been my rule through life to keep an open mind; and I am always especially pleased when able and thoughtful men busy too with great affairs personal or national, are willing to take time to state to me their point of view in respect to vital matters. Prohibition is regarded by many as a vital matter though I submit there is a possibility that neither the average advocate or opponent of the measures which are commonly connected by that term is certain to be thinking yet in perfect harmony with the thought of God. And by the way may I be permitted to express my satisfaction that you are as a responsible Member of the House of Commons, are disposed as each of your letters to me has indicated, to turn your thoughts to God and to enquire about His will in respect to a matter affecting the liberty and welfare of the people as well as the integrity and prosperity of the State. In the letter now before me you use the words "God who by the way prohibits nothing!" You put an exclamation mark after this statement which does not surprise me. My chief knowledge of God has come from the statements found in the Bible and from the intimations discoverable in the laws of matter and mind; and from these sources of information I have never learned what you state in the words 'God prohibits nothing.' In view of this you may be very certain that your point of view interests me exceedingly. I am dear sir,

Respectfully yours,
O. C. S. WALLACE

Capt. Burnham's Explanation

To the Editor of the Review:

This correspondence arose from a letter received by me from Mr. Wallace in reply to his request I frankly told him that I endeavored to find out always what God intended believing that men were included in creation and not above it and that I found that to curse alcohol was to curse something that God made in nature and therefore was to curse God and to be an athiest. It was not for me to criticise the ways of God but to imitate them them and I may say that whilst I have always voted for prohibition in the past, I will never do so again although I will vote for strict Government control and sane regulations which is permissible by the Divine Law to which I have referred. Your total abolitionist or extinctionist presumes to censure the Creator, whether he will acknowledge it or not and is setting up a system that will result if successful in the downfall of the world. The subject is too long to go into at further length but arguing from this principle the whole question will permit of an assured and easy solution. He is too wise who knows more than God.

J. H. BURNHAM.

The Gods of Mars

By EDGAR RICE BURROUGHS

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

The tree was hollow to an extent of about fifty feet in diameter, and from its flat, hard floor I judged that it had often been used to house others. As I raised my eyes toward its roof to note the height I saw far above me a faint glow of light.

There was an opening above. If we could but reach it we might still hope to make the shelter of the cliff caves. My eyes had now become quite used to the subdued light of the interior, and as I pursued my investigation I presently came upon a rough ladder at the far side of the tree.

Quickly I mounted it to find that it connected at the top with the lower of a series of horizontal wooden bars that spanned the now narrower and shaftlike interior of the tree's stem. These bars were set one above another about three feet apart, and formed a perfect ladder as far above me as I could see.

Dropping to the floor once more, I detailed my discovery to Tars Tarkas, who suggested that I explore aloft as far as I could go in safety, while he guarded the entrance against a possible attack.

As I hastened above to explore the strange shaft I found that the ladder of horizontal bars reached always far above me as my eyes could reach, and as I ascended the light from above grew brighter and brighter.

For fully 500 feet I continued to climb until at length I reached the opening in the stem which admitted the light. It was of about the same diameter as the entrance at the foot of the tree and opened directly upon a large, flat limb, the well worn surface of which testified to its long continued use as an avenue for some creature to and from this remarkable shaft.

I ventured out upon the limb, then beat a hasty retreat for fear that I might be discovered by our enemies [illegible] to Tars Tarkas.

I soon reached him, and presently we were both ascending the long ladder toward the opening above.

Tars Tarkas went in advance, and as I reached the first of the horizontal bars I drew the ladder up after me, [illegible] to him he carried it a hundred feet farther aloft, where he wedged it safely between one of the bars and the side of the shaft.

In like manner I dislodged the lower bars as I passed them, so that we soon had the interior of the tree denuded of all possible means of ascent for a distance of a hundred feet from the base, thus precluding possible pursuit and attack from the rear.

CHAPTER IV.

The Chamber of Mystery.

When we reached the opening at the top Tars Tarkas drew to one side that I might pass out and investigate, as, owing to my lesser weight and greater agility, I was better fitted for the perilous threading of this dizzy, hanging pathway.

The limb upon which I found myself ascended at a slight angle toward the cliff, and as I followed it I found that it terminated a few feet above a narrow ledge which protruded from the cliff's face at the entrance to a narrow cave.

As I approached the slightly more slender extremity of the branch it bent beneath my weight until, as I balanced perilously upon its outer tip, it swayed gently on a level with the ledge at a distance of a couple of feet.

Five hundred feet below me lay the vivid scarlet carpet of the valley. Nearly 5,000 feet above towered the mighty, gleaming face of the gorgeous cliffs.

The cave that I faced was not one of those that I had seen from the ground, and which lay much higher, possibly a thousand feet. But, so far as I might know, it was as good for our purpose as another, and so I returned to the tree for Tars Tarkas.

Together we wormed our way along the waving pathway, but when we reached the end of the branch we found that our combined weight so depressed the limb that the cave's mouth was now too far above us to be reached.

We finally agreed that Tars Tarkas should return along the branch, leaving his longest leather harness strap with me, and that, when the limb had risen to a height that would permit me to enter the cave I was to do so, and upon Tars Tarkas' return I could then lower the strap and haul him up to the safety of the ledge.

This we did without mishaps and soon found ourselves together upon the verge of a dizzy little balcony, with a magnificent view of the valley spreading out below us.

Below us upon the river's bank the great white apes were devouring the last remnants of Tars Tarkas' former companions, while great herds of plant men grazed in ever widening circles about the sward, which they kept as close clipped as the smoothest of lawns.

Knowing that attack from the tree was now improbable we determined to explore the cave, which we had every reason to believe was but a continuation of the path we had already trav[illegible] but clearly away from this valley of ferocity.

As we advanced we found a well proportioned tunnel cut from the solid cliff. Its walls rose some twenty feet above the floor, which was about five feet in width. The roof was [illegible]

"THE BETTER 'OLE" AT THE GRAND

FAMOUS COMEDY TO BE PRESENTED HERE APRIL 25 AND 26.

"The Better 'Ole", the comedy with music, which will be offered by Mr. and Mrs. Coburn as the attraction at the Grand Opera House on Friday and Saturday, April 25, and 26, with a matinee Saturday, is said to present three of the most humanly humorous characters that has ever been attempted upon the stage. These characters 'Old Bill', "Bert" and "Alf" form the three modern musketeers of Captain Bruce Bairnsfather's famous war cartoons, "Fragments From France," upon which the play is based. With a dash of pathos used here and there, these three so-called muskrats picturize the lighter and more humorous side of trench life. The Boston Company, with Edmund Gurney, Leon Gordon and Percy Jennings as the [illegible] will appear in our city. Mail orders now. Seats on sale Wednesday.

SEE OSCAR O'SHEA

Former Peterborough Resident Appears in "The Rosary."

Messrs. Rowland & Clifford are always abreast of the times. Noting the demand of the public for clean plays with wholesome characters and with human appeal, they have revived Edward E. Rose's "The Rosary" and have provided a notable cast of trained players, including Oscar O'Shea, as Father Kelly. They have also made a magnificent production for this modern drama. It will be seen at the Grand Opera House next Thursday, when the people of this city will have an opportunity to laugh and cry with Father Kelly, the lovable priest who dominates the action of the piece.

The world is wide enough for all, but it is not deep enough for some college graduates.

McDONNEL ST. SEWER CASE TO BE ARGUED IN TORONTO

Evidence Was Concluded Last Night After Several More City Officials Had Testified That They Had Favored Improvement in the City's Interest.

Last night at 6 o'clock the evidence in connection with the action brought by G. W. Hatton and other ratepayers to quash the McDonnel street sewer by-law was [illegible]. It was arranged that argument would be heard before Judge Lennox in Toronto at a date to be decided upon in the near future.

Yesterday afternoon Engineer Parson on the stand gave evidence as to conditions as regards sewage disposal at Mount St. Joseph. He admitted in answer to questions of His Lordship that it would be possible to build a sewage disposal plant at the rear of the institution though it might be expensive.

Mayor Duncan and Ex-Ald Weir, the latter having been chairman of the Board of Works last year gave testimony as to their reasons for favoring the passage of the by-law to construct the sewer. They stated that they had acted with a view to safeguarding the welfare of the entire city but pressed upon this point admitted that there were no conditions of an unsanitary nature existing within the city itself which would or could be remedied by the construction of such a sewer.

School Inspector Alex Mowat gave evidence as to the number of pupils attending the Queen Mary School which is situated in the vicinity which it was claimed would be affected by unsanitary conditions emenating from Mount St. Joseph.

Alderman McIntyre in the witness box was asked by Mr. Hall why he had favored constructing a sewer which would raise the taxes upon citizens owning four or five hundred feet of property in order that two hundred feet might be served. Ex-Alderman Malcolm McIntyre who was a member of the Council last year also gave evidence of a similar nature to that of the witnesses who had preceded him.

James Murtey of the Board of Health, when called to the stand stated that he had supported the resolution when it came before the Board because he was aware of the unsanitary conditions existing at Mount St. Joseph. He had noticed the sewage oozing from the ground some time ago while walking in the garden there and noticed that it ran down to the ditches on the Monaghan Road and was therefore bound to give rise to conditions which were not in the best interests of public health in that part of the city. He stated that he had been aware of these conditions for over two years. Mr. Murtey throught that it was especially dangerous in view of the fact that the the children played about a great deal upon the Monaghan Road where the slime was to be found in the ditches. He felt that the cesspools at the Mount were quite inadequate to take care of the sewage from such an institution.

These points were brought out in Mr. O'Connell's [illegible] witness. Mr. Hall had no ques[illegible] to ask him.

Judge Lennox—You knew of these conditions and for two years slept on and the matter was never mooted in the Board of Health. As soon as attention was drawn to the question from another source you at once took the matter up and advocated. You did not want one hour to consider or investigate, did you?

Mr. Murtey—I was already aware of the conditions existing there.

Judge Lennox—But when the matter was brought up at the Board of Health meeting you did not want an hour to consider or investigate?

Mr. Murtey—I did not need to.

Judge Lennox—Once more I will ask you that question. You did not want an hour to consider the matter?

Mr. Murtey—No.

Alderman Taylor was the last witness. In answer to the question of Mr. O'Connell he stated that he had supported the By-law to construct the sewer along McDonnel street in the general interest of the people of the city who resided in the district where health might be affected by the sewage flowing down from Mount St. Joseph.

Questioned by Mr. Hall, Alderman Taylor admitted that he knew of no immediate sanitary conditons upon McDonnell street which needed attention.

In answer to a question of the Judge, Alderman Taylor conceded that he would have preferred an arrangement whereby the Community of Mount St. Joseph might have joined the city in the usual manner [illegible] with the arrangement arrived at and felt that it was in the public interest that their institution should be given sewer connections with the city's system.

Sporting Gossip

One night last week in the railroad yards at Charleston N.C., enough baseball gossip to last a sporting editor for a month was passed back and forth over the ties. The players of six big league clubs were passing through and the trains were stopped just about long enough to give them a chance to chat. The Red Sox, Giant, Braves, Tigers, Senators and Phillies were the teams en route.

OPEN GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP IS SET FOR JULY IN HAMILTON

Royal Canadian Golf Association so Decides —Approves Proposed Tour of "Chick" Evans.

Hamilton, April 17—The Canadian defend his title. open golf championship will be played at the Hamilton Golf club on Monday, July 28, and Tuesday July 29, it was decided at a meeting of the [illegible] Association when they accepted the invitation of the Hamilton club to stage the tournament here and selected the above dates. Karl Keller, the open champion, arrived home from overseas a few days ago and will be on hand to

The International golf match between teams representing Canada and the United States, will be staged at Hamilton on Friday, July 25, which is the date that Mr. W. C. Fownes, jun., captain of the American team suggested for the contest, and it is very probable that all the members of the visiting team will also stay over for the open championship so that some very spirited competition should result. As soon as the list of players composing the American team arrives, Mr. B. L. Anderson, secretary of the R.C.G.A. will extend invitations to all of them and any others who may care to compete, to do so, while the Toronto Golf clubs will be given the opportunity of having the visitors play over their courses by also extending invitations to them to visit that city on the Saturday and Sunday intervening so that the Queen city will have a chance to see the American stars in action.

Conditions of Match.

Mr. Fownes suggested also that the team match be composed of two ball foursomes and single matches with ten men a side which has been found to be very effective in the United States. This would give fifteen matches and a tie could not result. The plan is to play the foursomes in the morning and the singles in the afternoon, and with the best in the United States pitted against the cream of Canada some of the course records should go. The staging of the International match just before the open championship means that in all probability there will not be any American entrants in the amateur championships at Lambton on June 30, unless some of them should express the desire to come up specially for the matches, in which case the R.C.G.A. would very gladly extend invitations to them.

The proposed series of matches which Mr. Charles "Chick" Evans, the national open and amateur champion of the United States, is to play throughout Canada this year to aid the Canadian Red Cross society received the sanction of the R.C.G [illegible] coast can be arranged without clashing with the tournaments now ar- [illegible] instructed to communicate with the itinerary. Mr. Anderson has been instructed to communicate with the C.P.R. and other officials interested to make all the necessary arrangements.

Case of Silver For Dr. Holloway

WEDDING PRESENT FROM CORINTHIAN LODGE OF MASONS

Dr. Holloway, the Worshipful Master of Corinthian Lodge, A.F. & A.M., was taken by surprise last evening when in the course of an unusally largely attended gathering of the craft he was made the happy recipient of a beautiful and costly wedding present. This graceful testimony to the high esteem and respect in which the doctor is held, not only by members of his own lodge, but also by Peterborough Masons in general, took the shape of a case of silver. The presentation was made by Senior Deacon Breyfogle, accompanied by a brief but exceedingly fitting address.

During the evening Dr. Morrison gave the members an instructive and illuminating talk on matters of interest to the Masonic craft.

VETERANS WILL ORGANIZE CLUB

MEMBERS OF SECOND BATTALION WILL WAIT RETURN OF OTHERS

At the meeting of the returned men of the 2nd Battalion held in the reception room of the Armories last night it was decided to form a 2nd Battalion club composed of the returned and returning men of the Iron Second.

However, no formal organization will be effected until there are several more of the members of this battalion returned. In the meantime it was decided to do everything possible to give a hearty reception to the 2nd Battalion heroes as they return, the date of their arrival in the city, however, being still unknown. Notice will be given, however, as soon as information as to the arrival of these veterans in Peterborough is received from Kingston.

SCOLLARD UNDER ARREST.

Charged With Failing to Answer the Call To Service.

Mr. J. S. Scollard, alleged defaulter under the M. S. A., was arrested by the Dominion Police a day or two ago. The Peterborough detachments have for some time been endeavoring to locate this men, without success. Inspector Ward received information that he was attempting to escape to the States, but his efforts were frustrated by information given by another district.

All reports go to show that while defaulters may try to escape to other districts they will be found out through other sources.

A federation of the Public and High School teachers of the Province of Manitoba will be consummated on April 22.

SEVEN RETURNED SOLDIERS ON PETERBOROUGH FIRE BRIGADE

Another Veteran to be Re-Instated Commencing May First—Chief Grange Explains His Delicate Position in Regrrd to Discharging Men—Suggests Sub-Station For East City.

Fire Chief Grange gave to the Fire, Water and Light Committee Thursday evening his version of the incident complained of in Council on Monday night whereby a returned soldier had been refused a position on the fire brigade vacated by him to fight for home and country.

The name of the firemen in question is Clancy, who, the Chief said called on him and very authoritatively demanded when he was to be put on to work. "I was quite ignorant," the Chief went on to say, "of the resolution by Council assuring Clancy of reinstatement on his return from the front, such understanding having been reached prior to my installation as Chief. However, I told him that there were no vacancies on the brigade. Had there been any, he would not have needed to ask for a job, and that I would consult the chairman of the department and the city clerk as to what could be done for him."

Seven Soldiers on Brigade.

Chief Grange explained that when the two-platoon system came into effect, he made up his mind to engage veterans to fill the new openings on the force if desirable men were available. He had conferred with Secretary Whatley of the G. W. V. A. as to his (the Chief's) policy in this regard, and Sergt. Whatley was quite satisfied that the interests of returned soldiers, so far as the firehall is concerned, were safe in the hands of the Chief. There are now seven returned men on the brigade.

THREE GALLONS MONTREAL BOOZE

TAKEN BY THE POLICE FROM A MIDLAND MAN THIS MORNING

P. C. Young met the 8:10 train from Montreal this morning. A man carrying a grip aroused the officer's suspicion, and in answer to several questions the traveller replied that he didn't know what was in the grip and couldn't unlock it as he had no key. The officer, with the assistance of Plainclotheeman Boyd, took the man to the station, where the grip was opened, it being unlocked, disclosing three gallons of whiskey.

In court this morning, Magistrate Dumble, after applying the Dumble test, remarked that it was not so bad after all, and the Chief agreed with him.

Louis Valentine, the prisoner, was given the option of three months in jail or a fine of $204.10.

The prisoner's home town is Midland, and he paid $5.50 a gallon for the "O be joyful," which in the grip was surrounded by garlic to hide the smell of the liquor in the train.

Frank Robert Cooper, a soldier in Calgary was accidentally killed when a live cartridge got accidentally mixed up with blanks.

GOOD FRIDAY SERVICES HELD IN LOCAL CHURCHES

Presbyterians and Baptists Hold Gathering at Murray Street—Love Feast For the Methodists.

Good Friday was fittingly observed in the local churches yesterday with a solemnity which lent dignity to the occasion. Services were held at St. George's and St. John's Churches at 10:30 o'clock, and at All Saints' at 11. At the same hour a union service of all the Baptist and Presbyterian Churches was held in Murray Street Church, and the Methodists united at 11 o'clock in George Street Church.

At St. George's Church the rector, Rev. J. Price, chose as his text the words, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do," and in a very able manner showed that the lesson of Good Friday is Forgiveness.

At All Saints' Rev. R. B. Grobb, M. A., spoke to a large audience on the words "The life of all flesh is the blood thereof," taken from Leviticus xvii:19. All Saints' troop of Boy Scouts was present in a body under their leader, Mr. W. D. Tyrer, and took up the collection.

At Murray Street.

The seating accommodation of Murray Street Church was pretty well taxed by the large number of people from the three Presbyterian and two Baptist churches of the city, as well as from Bethany Tabernacle and Gilmour Memorial Church, who attended the union service there. Rev. Messrs. Pogue, Mackenzie, Rowand, Webb, Brown and Galt occupied seats on the platform and all assisted in the service. The sermon was preached by Rev. Mr. Rowand, who chose his text from Phil. ii.:8 and Romans xii.:1. Mr. Rowand stated that the shadow of the crucifixion rested on Jesus long beforehand, and no human mind could grasp what it meant to Him. Nevertheless He had steadfastly set His face to go to Jerusalem for the great consummation of His earthly ministry.

Mr. Rowand asked if Christians have been justified in laying so much emphasis on the crucifixion, and answered his question by a complete affirmation. By doing so they have followed the example that was set by the early disciples. The blood that was shed on the Cross is the only hope of the wretched men and women of the world. Faith in the finished work of Christ is able to lift mankind from the lowest depths to

GOLD WATCHES FOR VETERANS

VILLIERS WELCOMES HOME SIX HEROES FROM THE BATTLEFIELDS OF EUROPE

The Villiers Patriotic Society welcomed home six returned men on Good Friday evening, in the persons of Privates Peter Wood, George Edwards, James Halliday, Robert Lovell, Henry Carter and Driver Frank Godfrey.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., an old Villiers boy acted as chairman and after the reading of the address of welcome by Mr. Alex Gillespie, each of the six veterans was presented with a gold watch, on behalf of the Villiers Patriotic Society, by six little girls dressed in white.

During the evening addresses were delivered by Rev. Mr. McEachern, Keene, and Lieut. Col. T. J. Johnston.

The musical part of the program was ably rendered by local Villiers talent, assisted by Miss Comstock and Miss Price of Peterborough.

On the conclusion of the function, which was held in the schoolhouse, those present repaired to the home of Mrs. Wood where a delightful lunch was served.

TO ASK GOVERNMENT TO PUT UP ELEVATOR IN ONTARIO

Farmers of This District Are Interested in Question—Capt. J. H. Burnham and Local Board of Trade Will Be Asked to Try to Secure This Improvement For Peterborough.

Farmer's throughout the Peterboro district have a considerable financial interest in the proposal that has been underway for some time to induce the Dominion Government to establish a large interior elevator at some central point in Ontario, probably Toronto but in Peterborough if possible. Five large elevators of this character have been in operation for some years by the Dominion Government in the Prairie Provinces. The government owns and operates all these elevators. They have been of immense value to the farmer of the west and it is believed that should one be erected in Ontario it would be of even greater value to the farmers in this province.

At present there are no reorganized standards for Ontario grain. In the west where grain is one of the most important crops produced, the grain exchange have established, with government approval, certain standards defining the different grades of grain. Millions of dollars worth of grain are sold according to these standards in the grain exchange without any of the grain being produced directly in connection with the transaction. This is because the grades are so well known and defined that disputes concerning them seldom occur.

In Ontario the situation is very different. While the total value of the grain crop of Ontario is very large, running up into millions of dollars, it is seldom one of the principal crops on any farm. Some of it is fed on the farm and much of it is sold to the local mills or to dealers. There are no standards established for it and the prices paid vary greatly in different districts. Some time ago when Mr. Roderick Mackenzie of Winnipeg, as the secretary of the Canadian Council of agriculture was addressing a meeting of the sixth line Farmers' Club in Otonabee, he pointed out that some of the lower grades of Western grain were realizing 20 to 30 cents a bushel more on the Liverpool markets, than Ontario farmers were obtaining for their grain at home. He then pointed out that if standards could be established for Ontario grain, farmers would be able to tell by the market reports what their grain was worth and would be able to sell it to much better advantage and the trade as a whole would be standardized and placed on a better basis.

The object in asking the Dominion Government to establish an Interior Elevator is to make it possible for farmers who have any considerable quantity of grain to sell to ship it to this elevator where it can be stored and cleaned. The gathering of large quantities of Ontario grain together in this way would make it possible to establish grades for it. These grades in turn would be recognized in the grain exchange and the grain would be sold according to grades, in this way Ontario grain would be sold by grades just as Western grain has been for years.

Another great benefit that would be derived through such an elevator is that it would promote the cultivation and sale of clover seed. In some counties of Ontario large quantities of clover seeds are produced while in other counties the farmers have to buy their seed. At present the middlemen often get control of this seed at low prices and sell it to farmers elsewhere at high prices. Could this seed be shipped and stored in an interior elevator it would establish a market for it and put the growing of clover seed in a much better position.

The United Farmers of Ontario in conjunction with representatives of some of the large milling interests and the grain dealers as well as with the support of Hon. G. S. Henry, Provincial Minister of Agriculture have laid these facts before the Dominion Government and have asked for the erection of an elevator. It is understood that the Dominion Government is favorable to the proposal. Why should not our recently organised Board of Trade get busy and take steps to have this elevator when it is erected, be put up in Peterborough? Here is a chance for Mr. Burnham to get busy and do something for Peterborough and the farmers of this district.

BRIDGE WILL BE ERECTED THIS YEAR

CONFIDENTIAL STATEMENT OF ONE ALDERMAN—PRAISE FOR ENGINEER BARBER

The City Fathers in brief session Thursday night agreed to return to Contractor O'Toole of Ottawa his cheque, deposited with his tender on the original plans for the Hunter street high-level bridge.

In this connection it will be interesting to learn that according to one Alderman's statement, the bridge will be constructed this year, or at least a start made at no very late date, notwithstanding rumors to the contrary. He assured a member of the press that he had concrete reasons for such an assertion.

Praise for Mr. Barber

One local contractor who tendered on the proposition was generous in his praise of Mr. Barber. He said that never before had he been presented with such an explanatory set of plans and specifications to tender on. They were equally fair to both the city and the contractor alike in explaining quite frankly just exactly what conditons might arise that none could anticipate but the engineer who had thoroughly gone over the ground. This contractor left the inference that his experience in this regard was an agreeable surprise.

SATURDAY, APRIL 19, 1919

THE REVIVAL OF THE BOY SCOUTS.

ONE OF THE BLESSINGS that comes with the return of peace is the revival of the Boy Scout movement in this city, a revival that will be welcomed not only by the parents who have boys of Scout age, but by all who are in any way interested in the development of the rising generation into a desirable class of Canadian citizens.

The laws under which the Boy Scouts operate seem to be perfect, or as nearly so as it is possible to make anything devised by the mind of man. There is not a single educational essential overlooked. Anything that is apparently lacking in his home or Sunday school training is supplied by the new organization of which he is asked to become a member. The Scout law says that a Scout is loyal to his King. That is something that is instilled into his young mind at home and at school. He is loyal to his parents, an early-acquired if not an inherent virtue. Lastly, the Scout is loyal to his employers.

The last attribute is most significant of all for the reason that it is so often overlooked in the education of the youth in the home or in the day or Sunday school. The King is assured of devoted adherents, who will flock to his banner in the event of war, and against him no harsh words are to be spoken, but the employer has all these years been left to take his chances in securing service. It is regarded as a crime, for example, to pilfer a loaf of bread, even if starvation prompt the theft, but there is no law making it an offence to steal the time that another man pays for. There will never be better relations between capital and labor until there are mutual concessions, and this implies more devotion to the interests of the employer on the part of those on his pay roll.

Let the Boy Scouts work the desired reformation in this regard. They have already accomplished wonders. Many an indifferent young fellow has upon joining the organization suddenly awakened to a sense of his responsibilities. The careless office boy joins the Scouts and no longer sweeps around the office furniture, but under it as well, and does not loiter when sent on an errand. The aim of the movement is to trust to a boy's honor, and in nine cases out of ten no mistake is made by the adoption of that course. Here is a chance for the employer of the young fellow to meet the other side half way and take it for granted that there is latent honor in every youth, instead of proceeding on the assumption that all boys are so many necessary evils and so many natural-born dead beats.

Branches of the Boy Scouts are being organized in a number of churches and other places in the city. The boys themselves cannot be expected to take an active interest in the revival, if their parents are indifferent. If any of the latter are in doubt as to the wisdom of having their boys join, let them ask the opinion of some person who has had one or more sons come through that course of training. If there is any institution warranted to make sturdy and honorable men out of Canadian youth it is the Boy Scouts.

THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT.

THROW A MAN into prison on some charge of which he is innocent, condemn his wife and family to the same fate, keep them in close confinement until their bodies and minds have alike been weakened, until their moral nature is warped and their sense of justice outraged beyond all hope of ever being appeased. Imagine the feeling that would be bred in the hearts of such unfortunates against those in authority over them.

Suppose the latter class were suddenly removed by death, suppose the prison doors were thrown wide open and the captives were set free with nothing like law or order to restrain them. Is it hard to imagine that they would go out resolved to make up for the oppression of years and with a determination to take possession of anything in sight, if they could acquire and retain it by force. The African race, in bonds in the United States for a century, was suddenly set free. The change from slavery to freedom went to their heads, and it required years of effort on the part of the Klu Klux Clan, really a voluntary army for the salvation of the whites, to teach the emancipated negroes the duties of citizenship.

The Russian people were ground down since the beginning of time. There was only a single law in the land, and that was the word, or the whim, of one man. The right of free speech was denied them. There were signs of revolution on all hands, and to prevent internal discord the empire was time after time plunged into unjustifiable war, and in the prosecution of which the passions of the people found vent.

If Germany's object in bringing on the late war was, at least incidentally, to prevent an uprising of the common people at home, Russia for the same reason welcomed the conflict. The soldiers were required to fight for a monetary equivalent of one cent a day Canadian [illegible] officered. Supplies failed to reach them on time. They were exposed to the rigors of a northern winter without adequate clothing. The sick and wounded did not receive humane treatment.

Is it any wonder that such an army was the easy prey of the wily German propagandist who promised food and gold, and that the Russian army laid down their weapons and refused to go on any longer with the war? Millions of men just cast upon civil life found that since the war had started all semblance of the old reign of force had disappeared. The former soldiers were their own masters. Liberty at once degenerated into license.

No one apologizes for the present reign of terror in Russia. An attempt to account for it cannot be so interpreted. Serfdom begets savagery, and famine-stricken mortals are always dangerous, besides being the easy dupes of unscrupulous leaders.

Revolutionists or rebels never yet proposed a constitutional change that did not contain an element of righteousness, an improvement over the old. The Confederate leaders may have sinned against constituted authority, but it is admitted on all sides that they drew up a constitution vastly superior in many ways to that under which the country had operated since the beginning of its national history. Even the Soviets of Russia are not entirely devoid either of sense or humanity. There are provisions in their propaganda that civilization would make no mistake in adopting, many of the features having been matters of debate in orthodox democratic countries for years. The health of the public is to be carefully guarded. The victims of contagious diseases are to be given no chance to spread the malady among the innocent. Children are to be raised by the State, not left to the indifferent care of so many mothers ignorant of what is required of them. All the rising generation of children will under such a system have the same chance. They will all start the race of life from the same line, the measure of their success depending merely upon their natural endowment. It will no longer be a hovel for one and a mansion for another, plenty for the rich and semi-starvation for the poor, education for the few and illiteracy for the many.

THE LAND OF THE FREE.

THE RUSSIAN—we will not venture upon a reproduction of his name—who was discharged in the police court Thursday, should retur nto his home a wiser, even if he be not a sadder, man. It seems, according to the testimony of a compatriot, that the defendant had in his own house and in his own language made statements that fairly sizzled with anarchy and terrorism. But the law which forbids treasonable utterances provides that such utterances, to be actionable, must be made in the hearing of a British subject, and this, we take it, implies that they must be made in the English language.

Let the Russian who made so narrow and so fortunate an escape drop his violent sentiments against law and order and bless the day he adopted Canada as his home. Let him contrast conditions here with those in his native land, where, under the old autocracy at least, short shrift would have been made of a man held on a charge of treason to the empire.

But in Canada it is different. There is usually some loophole in every law sufficiently large to afford even the lowly and the unfriended an easy avenue of escape, provided they are lucky enough to secure the services of an attorney who has an eye for defects in statutory law. In Canada the Russian's home is his castle. The use of his native language, by which, it seems, he is able to cover up a multitude of sins against the State, is guaranteed him. Provided he refuses to associate with British subjects or to take them into his confidence with regard to his views on arson, murder, treason, stratagem and the acquisition of spoils, he is tolerably secure.

A Canadian born and bred, finding himself in the same statutory entanglement, would have fared worse even if he had said less than the Russian uttered according to the sworn testimony. It would have been the prison farm or the penitentiary for him. Men are serving terms today for infinitely less. Had the defendant been a native of this country, and had been arrested on a charge of taking to the woods when the State ordered him into military service, the penalty would have been a fine of from $250 to $500 or imprisonment from six months to five years, with the chances not all in his favor for the presiding magistrate to strike an average.

The case of the Russian is another evidence of the necessity for the education of the foreigner. So long as they are unable to speak the English language, it would seem almost impossible to prevent them from hatching treason and planning violence, if they are so disposed. Heaven alone will be able to keep track of their sentiments towards the government of the country that shelters them. But if this particular Russian had been able to carry out his threats, if he had murdered rich men, ministers, police, indiscriminately, if he had used dynamite to blow up banks, would it have been a question of language then? Deeds of violence speak louder than words and their meaning is clear to everyone, regardless of education, expression being made in the tongue that is universal.

THE EASTER HAT OF HER DREAMS

I do not write of any hat. I mean an ideal hat; a hat I have never found, a hat wrought of the insubstantial fabric of fancy. It is because I have not yet seen this hat in actual existence that I write of it in prose. When I find My Hat, I shall write of it in poetry—poetry, the language of passion.

The hat I wear is a different matter. It changes superficially, of course, from season to season, but its nature does not change. The discrepancy between it and the hat I seek is always the same. It may flaunt its youthfulness above my weather-beaten brownstone-front style of countenance, or by its uncompromisingly middle-aged character it may write my years in plain figures on my brow, but essentially it is always the same hat.

Understand me, I do not underrate my face. It is not beautiful, but for some decades it had faithfully fulfilled all the prope rfunctions of a face. With time, I have even come to feel a certain atachment to it, a feeling which which is requited for obviously my face is attached to me. After a youthful pang or two I have come to believe that it suits as well as any face would suit me. I respect it, if I do not love it. It deserves, I think, a descent consideration in the matter of headgear. An ideal hat ought delicately to accentuate its highly elusive merits, and soften its too obvious architectural gaucheries. It should be fashioned for honest service, and yet should not over emphasize the qualities which this implies. This is the hat I seek, and I seek it still, in spite of many a bitter disillusionment. (Now these are the woes of an average woman as told by her to "Saturday Night.")

The details of the search vary but little from season to season. I wait for the right day, the right mood. Atmosphere is everything. My first encounter is perhaps with the sensible clerk. A woman of my own age, she leads me, after one glance to a case marked "Matrons' Hats." If we could only know the wave of devasting hate that surges up in my heart! Matrons. The very word suggests sterling worth, and who wants a hat to sugest sterling worth? What is the use of telling her that I am not a matron? She could retort Clarke Griffith—"Washington can (and the retort is as effective left unspoken): "What of it? You look like a matron!" So I weakly pretend that it is only the color or the price which deters me from purchasing, and leave her.

Eventually I feel into the hands of the frivolous clerk. Her coiffure is exquisite, and she wears a frock. I wear a dress and feel abashed, and the interview thus begins upon the wrong note. I make known my wants. Her mind is elsewhere. She is at the age, when, no matter where one is, one's mind is elsewhere. She seats me in front of a painfully truthful mirror, and brings hats—pink hats, lace hats, hats gaudy with tinsel. She puts them on my too, too solid head. From underneath their flaunting fripperies I peer out morosely at my image in the glass. A low moan escapes my lips.

"That's very good-looking isn't it?" she twitters heedlessly. She sets it on her own pretty yellow head to show how true she speaks.

"It is—on you." I murmur chivalrously, "but haven't you something a little more suitable—?"

Then she brings the matron's hats.

Always I am forced to the conclusion that commonplace as it looks my head is constructed like no other human head. It seems to have convexities where other heads have concavities, and vice versa. A toque wheih the clerk assures m eto chic perches in wistful isolation upon some promontory of my head—

"Like an eagle's nest hangs on the

Of purple Apennine."

Picture hats rest upon my shoulders and extinguish me, and suggest the scriptural admontion as to lights and bushels. Hats that turn up in the back of my head. Hats that turn up in front—I have one now. It gives me a look of simplicity and earnestness quite at variance with my character. It makes me look like a settlement worker. It embitters my life. When I come home at night, weary with a day's more or less honest toil, some member of my family remarks inevitably, "Do pull that hat down over your forehead." [illegible] pression in domestic intercourse will guess the arcerbity of that "do."

But it is the same with all my hats. They are a source of regret and embarrassment to myself and to my friends. It was my hats, I think that first made me question the idea of a material heaven. I knew how it would be when it came to that crown! Mine would be either some plain substantial solid gold affair guaranteed to wear for all eternity or else some airy structure, encrusted with garish jewels, all very well for some pretty young angel but not my crown.

Yet I still hope that there waits for me somewhere my hat. Without any preliminary trying-on, I shall know it for my own. Its line, its color, its fabric will proclaim that we were made for each other. Its price will matter nothing—when did mere money come between affinities? To wear it will be a spiritual adventure. A friend of mine has confided to me that he never wears a high hat without feeling that smoke should issue from its top. This is as it should be, for the wearing of a high hat properly suggests something of a religious rite. At least I would rather attribute his feeling to this than to any vulgar association gith he sove-pipe. Thus my hat too will have an esoteric significance.

And it will not be a Matron's Hat!

WIT AND WISDOM

The young thing wafted into the photographer's and was taken up to the studio, says an exchange.

"I want my photo taken," she simpered. "You'll make me pretty, won't you?"

The photographer grunted.

"You'll see that it's a good likeness, won't you?" urged the girl.

"Well, madam," said the man, "it's for you to decide which it shall be."

Preparedness.

"Pa, when a man doubles his fists has he four hands?"

"Why, no, my son; though the action is generally a forehanded one."

Out and In.

"Hello, Millet!" called out a neighbor one morning. "I saw you starting away yesterday morning very early on your fishing trip. Did you have any luck?"

"Great!" was the reply. "While I was away three collectors called."

With Bolshevikis sore distressed,
How glad would Hungary feel,
If Budapest were the only pest
With which she had to deal!

Oh, for a Song.

A newly appointed crier in a county court in Australia, where there are many Chinese, was ordered by the judge to summon a witness to the stand.

"Call for Ah Song!" was the judicial command.

The crier was puzzled for a moment. He glanced shyly at the judge, but seeing that he was perfectly grave, he turned to the court and said: "Gentlemen, would any of you favor his worship with a song?"

That's Different.

"What was the price of that suit?"

"Sixty dollars."

"If you paid $60 for that suit you got stung."

"I didn't pay $60. I merely promised to pay $60."

WELL SATISFIED WITH BABY'S OWN TABLETS

Mrs. Edmond Gagne, Tikaupe, Que., writes:—"I am well satisfied with Baby's Own Tablets. They are absolutely necessary in homes where there are little children. They cured my baby of constipation and I would not be without them." Thousands of mothers always keep a box of Baby's Own Tablets on hand as a safeguard against constipation, colic, colds, simple fevers or any other of the minor ills of little ones. TO-DAY'S STORY

"Girls," said the conceited man, "are incomprehensible to me. I must have done something to make her mad, or she would not have insinuated what she did. But I can't for the life of me think what it was."

"Yes," said the barber, encouragingly.

"There were six of them," said the conceited man. "They all lived together in a studio, and usually flocked in bunches. Hambat phoned Miss Spiggle, and said that he and I wanted to go to the movies, and would she and Miss Chirp care to go, too? And Miss Siggle said, why, thank you, they would all be tickled to death. We were stung, of course, but we had to stand for it."

"Of course," said the barber, lathering diligently.

"We arrived, and the six were ready and waiting. Hambat started off with Miss Spiggle, and before I could locate Miss Chirp she had paired off with somebody and two more linked arms followed, and there was I left with the sixth one. She was, however, rather attractive, and I was not so very sorry that Miss Chirp had been borne off by her companion."

"No?" asked the barber, stropping his razor.

"No," said the conceited man. "We all went down the walk, two by two, like a ladies' seminary; and by way of opening the conversation, I said, 'We seem to have been in luck.'

"'Oh,' she replied, prettily, 'you know, when we heard that you and Mr. Hambat were taking us, we drew lots to see who our partners would be.'

"'Ah,' I replied, glowing; 'and you and Miss Spiggle won, I perceive?'"

"And?" said the barber.

"I told you at first that women wer incomprehensible," said the conceited man. She looked up at the sky, and she said, sweetly, 'Why, no, Mr. Snooks. Miss Spigglo and I lost.'"

WAYS TO FOOL FATHER TIME

The woman who stays young in appearance is the one who can afford to have the attentions of the best beauty specialists or the one who sensibly looks after her health and pays heed to certain hygienic rules. That clever manipulations of the facial muscles, together with gentle anointings of tissue reviving emollients help a heap is not to be denied. [illegible] make an early start. Keep in mind [illegible] "How will I look ten years from now?" Hang to every little bit of youth, expression of youth and memory of youth.

There are two simple formulas for [illegible]. They are easily compounded at home. They are what every woman knows she needs.

Melt together in a water bath, one-half ounce of white wax and one-half ounce of spermaceti. Add one ounce of cocoanut oil, one ounce of lanolin and two ounces of oil of sweet almonds. Remove from the heat when the oils and fats are nicely blended and pour in one ounce of orange-flower water. Whip to a froth with an egg beater. Just before the emollient thickens to a point of solidfying pour into little porcelain jars. The orange flower water will give a suggestion of perfume, but if this is not enough add a few drops of oil of lavender [illegible].

Every [illegible] bathe the face thoroughly, rinse with warm water, dry gently and apply the cream, rubbing it in gently and thoroughly. The friction [illegible] is beneficial, stirring up all the tissue veins and capillaries and coaxing the functions of the skin to become active. Place a towel over the pillow [illegible] and let your complexion soak up this good food all the night long. Next morning bathe the face with cold water, dry and apply the following astringent wash, putting it on with absorbent cotton:

Take a half pint bottle and in it place one and one-half ounces of cucumber juice. Half fill the bottle with elder-flower water, add one ounce of eau de cologne and shake well. Add one-half ounce of simple tincture of benzoin, shake slightly and fill with elderflower water. You will have here an excellent astringent that will be beneficial when the skin is oily, the pores coarse or the tissues flaccid.

FRIENDS THOUGHT HE WOULD DIE

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" Conquered Dyspepsia and Restored His Health.

MR. ROBERT NEWTON.

Little Bras d'Or, C. B.

"I was a terrible sufferer from Dyspepsia and Constipation for years. I had pain after eating, belching gas, constant headaches, and did not sleep well at night. I lost so much weight—going from 185 pounds to 146 pounds—that I became alarmed and saw several doctors who, however, did me no good. Finally, a friend told me to try 'Fruit-a-tives'.

In a week, there was improvement. The constipation was corrected; and soon I was free of pain, headaches and that miserable feeling that accompanies Dyspepsia. I continued to take this splendid fruit medicine and now I am well, strong and vigorous". ROBERT NEWTON.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. At all dealers or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

EASTER DAY

EASTER DAY
(By Mrs. A. F. Calder)

In the cold grave, yesterday,
Prostrate still the Saviour lay,
Pallid death triumphant there,
Swayed a sceptre, of despair,
Sorrow, silence, deepest gloom
Then, enwrapped the lonely tomb.

But the Sun's uprising ray,
Scattered far night's shadows grey
And at radiant dawn He rose,
Glorious, as from calm repose,
Death and Hell, combined in vain,
[illegible] great Conqueror to detain.

All the bitter suffering o'er,
Now, He lives to die no more.
Death was of His terrors shorn,
On that joyful Easter morn,
Now on bright and buoyant wing
Faith, and Hope, exultant spring.

Where the frown on Death's pale brow,
Where, Oh grave, thy victory now,
Through thee still, our pathway lies,
To the life, beyond the skies,
But when Jesus through thee passed
Light upon thy gloom He cast

Joyful now, with sweet accord,
Nature hails her risen Lord.
Dons her beauteous verdant dress,
Decks the earth in loveliness,
Witness, forest, field and flower,
Of His resurrection power.

SPRING IMPURITIES CLOG THE BLOOD

A Tonic Medicine is a Necessity at This Season

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are an all-year-round tonic, blood builder and nerve restorer. But they are especially valuable in the spring when the system is loaded with impurities as a result of the indoor life of the winter months. There is no other season of the year when the blood is so much in need of purifying and enriching, and every dose of these pills helps to make new, red blood. In the spring one feels weak and tired—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills give new strength. —In the spring the appetite is often poor—Dr. William's Pink Pills develop the appetite, tone the stomach and aid weak digestion. It is in the spring that poisons in the blood find an outlet in disfiguring pimples, eruptions and boils—Dr. William's Pink Pills speedily clear the skin because they go to the root of the trouble in the blood. In the spring anaemia, rheumatism, neuralgia, erysipelas and many other troubles are most persistent and many other troubles are most persistent because of poor, weak blood, and it is at this time, when all nature takes on new life, that the blood most seriously needs attention. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually renew and enrich the blood and this new blood reaches every organ and every nerve in the body, bringing new health and new strength to weak, easily tired men, women and children—Here is a bit of proof: Miss Anna Patterson, R.F.D. No. 1, Thorold, Ont., says:—"My trouble was one of general weakness which thinned my blood and gave me at times unbearable headaches, loss of appetite and also loss in weight. I tried several medicines, but without success. Then I heard of Dr. William's Pink Pills and decided to give them a fair trial. The result is that I feel like a new person. My appetite improved, I gained in weight my blood is thoroughly purified, and my face cleared of some unsightly pimples which had troubled me. If one good turn deserves another then I have much pleasure in recommending Dr. William's Pink Pills."

If you need a medicine this spring try Dr. William's Pink Pills—they will not disappoint you. These pills are sold by all medicine dealers, or you can get them by mail at 50c a box or six boxes for 2.50 from The Dr. William's Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Compare the tone and value

The only way to get a true idea of the exceptional values of our "Phonolas" is to compare them with other cabinets selling at about the same prices.

We venture to state that you cannot get another phonograph at $25 equal to the cabinet at that price. Certainly Model B at $61 is unexcelled value. It is 17¼ inches wide, 18¾ inches deep, and 12⅞ inches high—a good-sized instrument, with a double-spring, easy-winding, quiet motor and a surprisingly large volume of tone.

It would be hard to compare our magnificent "Organola" model with any other, because this is the only phonograph in the world with tone control pipes which include every note in the scale and give wonderful clearness and volume to the music.

We are able to give these exceptional values because we make our "Phonolas" complete in our two large plants in Canada at Kitchener and Elmira.

"Phonolas" play all makes of disc records. Ten models, ranging from $25 to $340.

Seven Returned

A Delicate Situation.

Chief Orange considered the discharging of men to reinstate veterans rather a delicate matter, as the firemen are organized and their union demands that good reasons must be furnished for laying off a man. As to Clancy's physical fitness, that could only be tested by a tryout at fires. The Chief said he understood that there are two other returned ex-firemen and he would suggest that all three be re-instated, physical fitness and their own wishes to determine this course. He could find room for Clancy at once to fill the gap opened by men on their leave, and the holiday period would extend over about eight months, allowing one man off at a time for two weeks. Then, while the new Hunter street bridge is under construction, traffic to Ashburnham will be crippled, and if access thereto is available only by means of Smith street, dangerous delay will ensue in case of an alarm. Such a condition should be met by the provision of a temporary substation in Ashburnham. Clancy, the Chief concluded, had served on the force two years lacking eight days, and is reported a first-class man.

Reinstated.

On motion of Ald. Turner and Taylor, Fireman Clancy is to be reinstated, his duties commencing May 1st.

Fire Department Improvements.

In regard to the Underwriters' inspector's report recommending certain improvements in the fire department, the committee decided to take up the matter of more fire stations when work on the new bridge is [illegible] put into first-class condition, and improvements in the electric alarm system are under way. As to the request for better salvage provision, and control over night patrols, these recommendations from the inspector will be given consideration.

Fire Prevention.

On motion of Ald. Taylor and Turner, citizens will be asked to observe the week commencing May 5th as clean up week, and clean up their premises as a fire preventative measure. This week will be observed generally throughout Canada.

Better Protection.

The Peterborough Canoe Co. asked that a hydrant be installed at the foot of King street east of Water street, to afford adequate protection in case of fire.

On motion of the Mayor and Ald. Taylor, the Canoe company will be notified that before paving King and Water streets a rearrangement of hydrants is to be looked into.

More Coal.

On motion of Ald. Turner, the fuel committee was instructed to purchase a car of stove coal to be sold with black diamonds of other grades on hand.

Elmira Board of Trade has been reorganized.

Each New Day Brings a Better Maxwell

MOST anyone would think that after building 50,000 motor cars on one chassis plan that close on to perfection would be reached.

That is true in a large measure; but it happens to be only the point at which the Maxwell executives began.

They decided to keep on building Maxwells better and better as each new day went by.

The locomotive engineer drives his engine better every day. The banker who loans money does so with more and more judgment. The man at the forge—likewise.

This is the principle on which the Maxwell is built. It is not new in the business world. But it is sound.

And to-day, with 300,000 Maxwells built on this plan, anyone will readily understand—

- Why a Maxwell runs on and on and never quits with age;
- Why a Maxwell seldom turns in at a repair shop;
- Why a Maxwell is so eagerly sought for in the second-hand market.

One of the last of more than 1000 improvements made since the first Maxwell was built is the appearance.

Let your eyes glance over this present day Maxwell and you'll think the price $200 more than we ask for it.

Hopes Women Will Adopt This Habit As Well As Men

Glass of hot water each morning helps us look and feel clean, sweet, fresh.

Happy, bright, alert—vigorous and vivacious—a good clear skin; a natural, rosy complexion and freedom from illness are assured only by clean, healthy blood. If only every woman and likewise every man could realize the wonders of the morning inside bath, what a gratifying change would take place.

Instead of the thousands of sickly anaemic-looking men, women and girls with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "rundowns," "brain-fags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy cheeked people everywhere.

An inside bath is had by drinking each morning before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds; and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store which will cost but a trifle but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember than inside cleanliness is more important that outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood, while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do the greatest heights. It is the key to all that is highest and best in the life of man. Gathered around the Cross we find those men and women whose religion is strong and true and free from froth. From the Cross come the forces that enable our souls to grow.

GOOD FRIDAY

An appropriate solo was effectively sung by Mr. Asa Huycke. The choir was a large one and was composed of a number from the different Baptist and Presbyterian churches and Bethany Tabernacle.

Love Feast at George Street.

The local Methodist churches held their second annual Good Friday union service yesterday in the George Street Church, each of the four Methodist churches, St. James', Mark Street, Trinity and George Street, having a good representation out which nearly filled the auditorium. The service took the form of a Methodist love feast. The pastors of the four churches together with Rev. S. Cruikshanks and Rev. C. E. Manning had charge of the service.

The service opened with the singing of a hymn. Rev. F. E. Malott then read a few verses from the Bible on the resurrection of Christ and followed with prayer. Miss E. Kemp then rendered a very acceptable solo.

Rev. R. A. Whattam took charge of the testimonial service. First he expressed his appreciation for the large number who had come to render their thanks for God's blessings, and his appreciation for the respect paid to God as Methodists. As all were Methodists, everyone should feel at home, and should express his or her feelings to God for His blessings. Mr. Whattam then asked as many as felt it to be their duty, to express in a few words what God's love and God's guidance meant to them. A great number testified as to their faith in God and their realization of God's love and guidance. Several times during the rendering of the testimonials certain ones started the singing of familiar hymns and all joined in to praise God. This part of the service was very inspiring, especially to see so many men and women, young and old, ready to express to others their faith in God. Mr. Whattam impressed the audience with the value of singing praises to God, saying that was one of the best parts of the service.

Rev. B. Greatrix then led in performing the love feast. He referred to the sacrifices made by Jesus Christ, His crucifixion and resurrection. He then led in prayer, after which the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered by the ministers present.

Rev. C. E. Manning offered another prayer, and the service ended with the singing of a hymn.

At St. John's.

There were two services held in St. John's Church yesterday in commemoration of Easter. These were at 10:30 and 3 o'clock, and the latter, which was for the children, was well attended.

One of the Finest In Peterborough

Mr. Jaquith, 115 James street, Ashburnham, has purchased from Mr. E. V. Warne, the local Pathe dealer, a handsome imported solid mahogany Console cabinet Pathe instrument, which is one of the finest talking machines in Peterborough. Apart from the instrument's faithful reproductions of vocal and instrumental numbers, its exceedingly handsome cabinet offers a rich and useful furnishing for drawing-room or parlor. Its table top is a source [illegible] many purposes. In the Console there are two large departments in which to keep an ample supply of records.

It is worthy of note that a discriminating Canadian public is appreciating the many premier qualities of the Pathe, which has reached an advanced stage of mechanical development; its cabinet shows character, beauty and artistic taste.

Since assuming the sales managership of the Pathe for Peterborough and district, Mr. E. V. Warne, 325 George street, has been favored with an ever-growing patronage. All visitors at this local home of the Pathe can hear a demonstration at any time.

MRS. CAIRNS WAS ALMOST IN DESPAIR

NOTHING SHE DID FOR HER TROUBLES HELPED HER TILL SHE TOOK TANLAC

"I had suffered so long without being able to get anything to help me that I was almost in despair," said Mrs. Bessie Cairns of 81 Shelburne St., Toronto, Ont., recently.

"For five years," she continued, "my stomach was out of order, and I couldn't digest my food properly. I had such a tight feeling in my chest that I could scarcely breathe, and at times the gas would press on my [illegible]. I had attacks of acute indigestion so often that I was afraid to leave the house for fear of one of those awful spells that might come on me and I felt miserable and worn out all the time.

"My first bottle of Tanlac helped me so much that I have kept it up and now I can eat anything anything I want without having those terrible smothering spells afterwards. Every sign of indigestion has gone, my nerves are calm and I sleep like a baby. Tanlac has done so much for me that I feel I am only doing right in telling others about it.

The Gods of Mars

By EDGAR RICE BURROUGHS

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

We had no means of making a light and so groped our way slowly into the ever increasing darkness, Tars Tarkas keeping in touch with one wall while I felt along the other. To prevent our wandering into diverging branches and becoming separated or lost in some intricate and labyrinthic maze we clasped hands.

How far we traversed the tunnel in this manner I do not know, but presently we came to an obstruction which blocked our further progress.

It seemed more like a partition than a sudden ending of the cave, for it was constructed not of the material of the cliff, but of something which felt like very hard wood.

Silently I groped over its surface with my hands and presently was rewarded by the feel of the button which as commonly denotes a door on Mars as does a doorknob on earth.

Gently pressing it, I had the satisfaction of feeling the door slowly give before me, and in another instant we were looking into a dimly lighted apartment which, so far as we could see, was unoccupied.

Without more ado I swung the door wide open and, followed by the huge Thark, stepped into the chamber.

As we stood for a moment in silence gazing about the room a slight noise behind caused me to turn quickly.

To my astonishment, I saw the door close with a sharp click as though moved by an unseen hand.

Instantly I sprang toward it to wrench it open again, for something in the uncanny movement of the thing and the almost palpable silence of the chamber seemed to portend an evil hidden in this rock bound chamber.

My fingers clawed futilely at the unyielding portal, while my eyes sought in vain for a duplicate of the button which had given us ingress.

And then from unseen lips a cruel and mocking peal of laughter rang through the desolate place.

For moments after that awful laugh had ceased reverberating through the room Tars Tarkas and I stood in tense and expectant silence. But no further sound broke the stillness, nor within the range of our vision did anything move.

Although Tars Tarkas laughed softly after the manner of his strange kind when in the presence of the horrible or terrifying. It is not a hysterical laugh, but rather the genuine expression of the pleasure they derive from the things that move earth and men to loathing or to tears.

I looked up at the Thark, a smile upon my own lips, for here, in truth, was greater need for a smiling face than a trembling chin.

"What do you make of it all?" I asked. "Where in the deuce are we?"

He looked at me in surprise.

"Where are we?" he repeated. "Do you tell me, John Carter, that you know not where you be?"

"That I am upon Barsoom is all that I can guess, and but for you and the great white apes I should not even guess that, for the sights I have seen this day are as unlike the things of my beloved Barsoom as I knew it ten long years ago as they are unlike the world of my birth. No, Tars Tarkas; I know not where we be."

"Where have you been since you opened the mighty portals of the atmosphere plant years ago after the keeper had died and the engines stopped and all Barsoom was dying that had not already died of asphyxiation?

"Your body even was never found, though the men of a whole world sought after it for years, though the jeddak of Helium and his granddaughter, your princess, offered such fabulous rewards that even princes of royal blood joined in the search.

"There was but one conclusion to reach when all efforts to locate you had failed, that you had taken the long, last pilgrimage down the mysterious River Iss to await in the Valley Dor upon the shores of the lost sea of Korus the beautiful Dejah Thoris, your princess.

"Why you had gone none could guess, for your princess still lived."

"Thank heaven!" I interrupted him. "I did not dare to ask you, for I feared I might have been too late to save her. She was very low when I left her in the royal gardens of Tardos Mors that long gone night—so very low that I scarcely hoped even then to reach the atmosphere plant before her dear spirit had fled from me forever. And she lives still!"

"She lives, John Carter!"

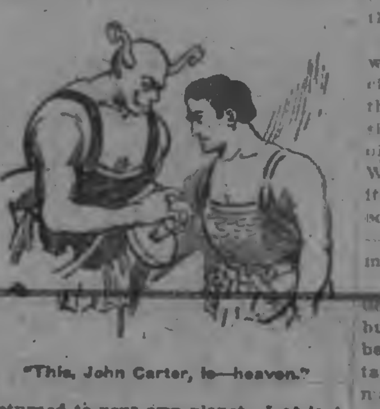
"You have not told me where we are," I reminded him.

"We are where I expected to find you, John Carter—and another. Many years ago you heard the story of the woman who taught me the thing that green Martians are taught to hate—the woman who taught me to love. You know the cruel tortures and the awful death her love won for her at the hands of the beast Tal Hajus.

"She, I thought, awaited me by the lost sea of Korus."

"You know that it was left for a man from another world, for yourself, John Carter—to teach this cruel Thark what friendship is, and you, I thought, also roamed the care free valley Dor.

"Thus were the two I most longed for at the end of the long pilgrimage I must take some day, and so as the time had elapsed which Dejah Thoris had hoped might bring you once more to her side—for she has always tried to believe that you had but temporarily returned to your own planet—I at last



"This, John Carter, is—heaven."

SPECIAL BILL AT THE GRAND

SPLENDID PROGRAM OF VAUDEVILLE AND PICTURES WILL BEGIN MONDAY

Mabel Normand as "Sis" Hopkins, the role made famous on the stage by Rose Melville, makes her appearance in the Goldwyn Picture of that name at the Grand Theatre, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Why she has not done it before is one of hte mysteries of the cinema. The part is completely a part of her. She obliterates her own personality as she never has done before and the story told is as absorbing as a drama.

Sis Hopkins' dog really starts things. He overturns the family oil can. It rolls into the [illegible] the Hopkins farm and its contents permeate the hitherto undefiled water. Vibert's, the [illegible] and schemer, by [illegible] the water and concludes [illegible] the simple hearted Hopkinses have [illegible] oil well on their [illegible]. Whereupon his manner becomes all [illegible] itself. He sends Sis to the [illegible] education fount—a [illegible] —and [illegible] marriage.

But this can't go on, [illegible] but her real sweetheart [illegible] bert of inferior motive, and when Sis takes a drink from the [illegible] and makes a wry face the boy [illegible] suit. Then he understands Vibert's interest. They both foil the scheme-er by selling him the farm at an enormous price.

The vaudeville fortion of the program will comprise of the famous Ambler Brothers presenting an act which is described as "The Act Sensational." From start to finish they display an ease and grace in the execution of their marvelous feats that seem miraculous. Their routine consists of equilibrium accomplishments requiring the utmost [illegible]. Ambler Brothers cause an audience to actually gasp for breath by their stupendous work. The Carson trio "Entertainers De Luxe," present a musical offering, consisting of solos, duets and trios, performed on banjos, piano and piano accordian. Their repertoire is extensive and comprises the best standard numbers of the classics and the latest popular songs and ballads. An added attraction to the bill will be the Melroy Sisters, one of the [illegible] and most delightfully entertaining offerings seen here this season. The Melroy Sisters though still [illegible] have played all the [illegible] and are considered the [illegible] in their line of [illegible] and dancing. If lovers of [illegible] and charm like dashing dancers of the ecentric variety with frills and curves of feminine loveliness, will find the Melroy Sisters all that their hearts could desire.

AT THE GRAND

The attraction at the Grand last night was Berzac's Mammoth Indoor European Circus, presented by Odlum and Malcolmson. It was an entertainment devised with the sole object of amusing lovers of beauty, wit, skill and endurance and comprised many novel features that kept the crowd interested throughout. There was a galaxy of clowns, including one of the feminine sex, trained animals, trapeze artists, daring wire walkers, and western and Australian novelties. Poses adopted by a woman and three dogs pleased the audience.

From the time the curtain rose until it fell there was not an idle moment. Most of the time two attractions were being presented at once.

The entry of the clowns was the hit of the evening, and on each subsequent apeparance they scored. The acrobatic novelty by the Murray Ward trio is well worth seeing. The two Renos, the boys with the odd twist, have seldom been excelled in Peterborough. Levine's statuesque dogs in artistic grouping were particularly good and showed rare intelligence and training.

The entire attraction provided an enjoyable evening's entertainment, which will be presented again tonight.

Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday there will be vaudeville and pictures, with daily matinee.

At Lethbridge, Alta., a deputation of the Great War Veterans waited on the Pilling Land Co., who sold the land to most of the colonies established last year in Southern Alberta and demanded that the company give their word to have no further dealings with the Hutterites.

A HOT SPOT Chalmers Never Cries For Gas

A GALLON of gas goes a long ways in a Hot Spot Chalmers. For the great engine in this remarkable car wrings every last bit of power out of gas.

As soon as it leaves the carburetor the gas hits the Hot Spot (one of two magnificent devices common only to a Chalmers) and there it is "cracked up" into "dust."

So "dry" does this gas become that once it reaches the cylinders and the spark plugs touch it off there is translated immediately almost every single bit of power that nature put into gas.

But to get the "dry" gas to the cylinders from the Hot Spot is no easy matter.

The great Ram's-horn was designed to do this work and it does the task well.

See this device and you'll never forget it. You'll wonder why it wasn't done years ago. But the common every day thing known as a pin, remember, was one of the last things the human mind devised.

One look at this Chalmers car of today and you'll want to sit behind the wheel. One ride there—and you'll want one.

Six months later you, too, will say that the Chalmers is really one of the few great cars of the world.

BASEBALL IS IN QUANDARY AFTER RULING BY BOARD

Leaders Are Stirred Up Over Decision That Big Leagues Form a Trust—Reforms Proposed.

Chicago, April 17.—Baseball leaders are in a quandary. Consternation reigns while magnates grope for a ray of hope following the decisivnie ray of hope following the decision in court that makes baseball a monopoly which gave the Federal league a $240,000 solace and a victory announced late Saturday afternoon. There is hope in the appeal of the case. This is a forlorn hope which works in the minds of Ban Johnson and others apparently. Other followers of the game expect much from an appeal and in a fight based on the contention that baseball is not a commercial enterprise and that it does not come under the Sherman law. It is felt this was not emphasized by the attorneys of amalgamated baseball.

In the appeal, of course every point possible will be studied and used if found strong, and there appears to be a stronger opportunity for success in the appeal than was apparent in the other trial, in which Baltimore, claiming to be left out in the big settlement, made a claim which appealed to the jury which was willing to give Baltimore solace and did do so, but perhaps was not in sympathy with the trust chare, which to them may have appeared secondary.

Knows No Other Method.

Charles Comiskey, said Saturday that he knew of no other way to run baseball then has been followed in the past. He could imagine no other way to control the shifting, discontented ball player, no other way to hold teams together in any way that would prevent the richer city teams from hogging all the talent. And Comiskey comes pretty near to sounding the minds of the big leaguers.

Ban Johnson, virtual director of this fight, which was a losing one in the lower court, says the verdict marks the doom of the national commission. Johnson has been anxious to lose this commission for some time largely because its complexion or make up did not please him.

Until the appeal in court is heard and answered baseball will go along as usual, under the present government. Leagues in themselves are permissible. Combination of leagues, with suggestions of restraint, are not allowed according to the ruling.

Must Fulfill Entire Contract.

The passing of the ten day clause merely means that a player will sign a certain contract. At the expiration of that contract he can either renew or drop it, but both parties must fulfill the entire contract while that exists or else be subject to a court action without the blacklisting of either party.

The problems before baseball men will be the retention of players from year to year, the holding of youngsters until they develop or fall without long term contracts and the development of gentlemen's agreements that will prevent over much jumping of players fro mone team to another or from one league to another.

The solution and readjustment which apparently must come will be watched with interest by fans.

Herrmann Tells of Appeal.

According to a dispatch from Cincinnati, August Herrmann, chairman of the national baseball commission who returned to the Ohio city from Washington yesterday, when informed of President Johnson's propositions said they might be the outcome of the Baltimore Federal league suit but that he did not believe it would be necessary to go as far as forecast by the American league president.

"We have prepared an appeal in the Baltimore club suit, will execute bond and the matter probably will not come up during the coming playing season," Mr. Herrmann said.

"The national commission as a whole is preparing a statement and this will be ready in a couple of days. Pending the appeal of the verdict against us, baseball will be conducted as in the past."

Pensions are the silver linings of war clouds.

CHORAL SERVICE AT ST. JOHN'S

SPLENDID PRESENTATION OF "OLIVET TO CALVARY" ON FRIDAY NIGHT

The Good Friday services at St. John's Church were well attended. As usual, a choral work was given in the evening at 8 o'clock, and a large congregation assembled to listen to a very fine presentation of "Olivet to Calvary." Shortly before 8 lantern slides were shown of the stations of the Cross, and at 8 o'clock Canon Davidson conducted the opening devotions. The soloists were Mrs. A. L. Amys, soprano, Miss D. Rathbone, contralto, Mr. Harold Lee, tenor, Mr. Thos. Ward, baritone, and all acquitted themselves splendidly. The choristers thoroughly sustained the high standard of choral singing which is so pleasingly associated with St. John's services, and last night's work was of a remarkably high order, especially since St John's choir is altogether a voluntary organization. Mr. R. J. Devey conducted the work with his usual skill, which is well known, and is to be congratulated on the work of the evening, which showed unmistakable signs of arduous rehearsal. An offertory was taken for the choir funds.

HIGH SCORES AT GUN CLUB SHOOT

CHRIS. WOOD MADE 48 OUT OF A POSSIBLE 60

The Peterborough Gun Club held their opening shoot yesterday afternoon at the grounds, and it was a decided success both from the point of numbers attending and the shoot. The weather was windy, and under the circumstances the scores were very good. Mr. Stan. Coon won the opening event of twenty birds, taking eighteen, and Jack Loucks won the second money in this event. The handicap event of twenty birds produced some good shooting, and Mr. Roy Hutchison won with a handicap of three, making his score a possible twenty. Chris Wood and Bruce Gillespie were tied for second money, and in the shoot off Mr. Wood won by one bird. The sweepstakes event was won by Peter Gettas, who had a handicap of three, and second money was won by Jack Loucks in the shoot off, when three of them were tied with nine birds. Several new shooters joined the gun club Friday, and it looks like a very successful season for the shooters. In the quail event of five birds, Mr. Roberts of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. was tied with Stan. Coon after an exciting shoot. Below are the scores:

NEW HONOR FOR CHURCH CHOIR

ALL SAINT'S CHORISTERS PRESENTED "THE CRUCIFIXION" LAST NIGHT

In their rendition of Sir John Stainer'sworld-famous oratorio, "The Crucifixion," the members of all Saint's choir last night reached a higher standard of accomplishment than ever before. Their work showed the results of the careful instruction the choir has received during the past seven years by the choirmaster, Mr. Geo. E. Chandler, all the soloists having received their training under him as well as the members of the chorus parts. The choir was ably assisted by Miss Ida Sanderson whose rendition of "He was despised" from Handel's Messia, with contralto air and violin and organ accompaniment was a distinct feature of the evening. Miss Laura Logan also gave much appreciated assistance on the violin, her violin solo "Andante Religioso," by Ernest Gillet, showing rare sympathy and fine technique.

The tenor solo "King Ever Glorious," always watched for in this work, was finely rendered by Mr. Chandler. The modulation through the various keys in this solo requires more than ordinary ability and was handled by Mr. Chandler with marked ability.

The bass solos were taken by Mr. T. H. Boddy who showed an appreciation of the various parts that added to their effectiveness. Mr. Boddy's enunciation was distinct and his voice full and round, the higher notes being particularly fine. A duet by Mr. Chandler and Mr. Boddy was an exceptionally fine number. Both voices blended perfectly making this number one of the best of the evening. The minor solos were taken by Mr. W. Gatfield and Mr. Geo. Rose, baritones, and Mr. Jas. Raybould, tenor and were sung with finished effect.

A double quartette, "God so loved the world," was finely rendered by Miss Mabel Williams and Miss Helen Rush soprano, Miss Ida Sanderson and Mrs. Hinchcliffe, contralto and Mr. F. Headfield and Mr. Jas. Raybould, tenor and Mr. Boddy and Mr. R. Hirst, bass. This was sung unaccompanied in perfect pitch and was an excellent rendition of the number. Miss M. Flowers presided at the organ throughout and added greatly to the effectiveness of the presentation of this great aratorio.

This was the second occasion on which this choir has sung "The Crucifixion." Last evening's effort showed a distinct advance in the manner in which the various parts were handled. The choir numbered about 40 voices.

THE MARKETS

There was a good outside market this morning, while the indoor market was exceptionally large. Upstairs eggs were from 40 to 43 cents a dozen and butter from 60 to 65 cents a pound.

Outside there was quite a quantity of syrup on sale, the price ranging from 60 to 65 cents a quart.

LOVE TRIUMPHANT" PRESENTED IN SONG AND STORY LAST NIGHT

The Conservatory of Music Hall was filled last night, the occasion being the presentation of "Love Triumphant," a tale of the first Eastertide, under the auspices of the Y.W.C.A. "Love Triumphant" was told in song and story. The story is adapted from Florence Morse Kingsley's book "Tor." Its presentation was interspersed with appropriate musical numbers, and then in an unique and beautiful manner the Easter message was repeated.

The audience first sang three stanzas of All Hail the Power of Jesus Name, after which Rev. J. A. McKenzie read from St. Luke the story of the Crucifixion.

The Y.W.C.A. girls had reason to be pleased with the large audience, and the substantial manner in which they showed their appreciation of the evening's entertainment.

The story parts were read by Miss Winnifred Parker.

All the returned soldiers in Saskatoon marched to church when Lt.-Governor Lake, of Saskatchewan presented the parents of Sergeant Hugh Cairns with the V. C. that deceased hero had won in the war.

At Port Colborne, Mrs. John Anderson committed suicide by cutting her throat with a pair of scissors. After committing the act she lived a few hours, suffering intense agony.

ITALY'S UNYIELDING STAND CAUSES GRAVE SITUATION

Meeting of Italian Parliament Postponed Until Council of Four Settle the Problem of Fiume and the Dalmatian Coast—President Wilson Drops Out.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, April 21.—The Italian Parliament which was to have met Wednesday will not convene until May 6, according to dispatches from Rome. The postponement has evidently been caused by the failure of the Council of Four to reach any solution of the problem raised by Italy's claims to Fiume and the Dalmation coast. Dispatches from Paris indicate that the situation caused by Italy's unyielding attitude has reached a critical phase.

News from the peace conference on Sunday showed that representatives of Great Britain, France and Italy the three nations signatory to the treaty of London, framed in 1915 before the entry of Italy into the war on the side of the entente were in conference and that President Wilson was not present. It was announced that he would not be present when negotiations were reopened today.

STICKNEY MOTORS LTD., WITH CAPITAL OF ONE MILLION AND HALF TO LOCATE HERE

Farm Tractors, Motor Trucks and Gasolene Engines to be Manufactured by New Company That Will Operate in Old Canadian Cordage Plant

Announcement was made on Saturday that a corporation which will manufacture under the name of Stickney Motors Ltd., at Peterborough was capitalized at $1,500,000. Farm tractors, motor trucks and gasolene engines will be the product turned out by the new company which is to carry on business in the former Canadian Cordage plant, which has been recently purchased from the Renfrew Manufacturing Company.

It has been known in official circles for some time that negotiations were being carried on with the city for a favorable agreement whereby the new company would locate in Peterborough.

Some time ago Mr. Chas A. Stickney the president of the company, with Mr. G. N. Gordon, who is the solicitor for the corporation, appeared before the council in committee and Mr. Gordon outlined the proposal which his client made and asked for certain concessions from the city.

The concern comes to Peterborough subject to the granting of certain concessions which briefly are a fixed assessment of $10-000 for ten years with the exception of school and local improvement taxes, in which case the property would be assessed for its full value.

The new company is a Canadian corporation and Mr. Low is one of the directors. Mr. Stickney is in the city today.

He stated at the meeting of the committee that he would be willing to guarantee that fifty men would be employed at all times in the plant, and he expected that the number might reach the 250 mark at times.

These men would all be machinists drawing good wages and with families in most cases, and the concern will be a decided asset to the city of Peterborough. Stickney engines are well known in the United States and in Western Canada, where their tractors are largely used, and there is not the slightest doubt but that the demand for all three products of the plant will increase steadily.

Mr. Stickney stated that it would be the endeavor of the company to get the plant in running order as quickly as posible so as to be in a position to put their products upon the market at an early data.

BISHOP O'BRIEN PREACHES TO MEMBERS OF G.W.V.A.

Assured Them of Cordial Welcome in Every Church of the Diocese the Doors of Which Stand Open Seven Days a Week—Timely Discourse on Easter.

Great War Veterans assisted at Pontificial high mass in St Peter's Cathedral at half past ten yesterday morning. Mass was celebrated by Bishop O'Brien assisted by Reverend Father Phelan, deacon of the mass. Father Cote, recently returned from France, Sub-deacon and Reverend Father Daignault, of Montreal, and Father Guiry, of the Cathedral, Deacons of honor.

At the conclusion of the mass the Bishop spoke upon the resurrection of Christ from the dead. After referring to the manner in which the passion and sufferings of Christ were commemorated during Lent and Holy Week, the Bishop showed that Christ wished His resurrection to be the outstanding proof of His Divinity. During the course of His life He had performed wonderful miracles, even appealed to His works as being the works of God, but time and again he asserted that His resurrection from the dead was to be the supreme act whereby He would prove Himself to be the Son of God and all His works to be the works of a divine person. The mystery the Bishop said, is the foundation stone of our faith, and because of its importance the church today exclaims in her liturgy "This is the day which the Lord hath made, let us rejoice and be glad in it." Secondly, the resurrection of Christ is the model and the guarantee of our own resurrection from the dead.

Door Always Open.

Addressing particularly the members of the Great War Veterans' Association, the Bishop heartily welcomed them in his own name and in the name of the priests and people of the Cathedral parish. He assured them of a cordial welcome into every church in the diocese and as a proof of this they would find the church doors open seven days a week. He remarked that for many of the veterans this was their first Easter at home in some years. Last Easter they were midst the horrors of war somewhere in France. Captain, the Reverend Father Cote, had told His Lordship that he had spent Easter Sunday of 1918 with his battalion, the 116th, in the trenches before Lens. The Bishop assured the Veterans that during the more than four years of war they were the objects of the sympathy and prayers of those who had remained at home. God in His Providence had seen fit to call many brave soldiers to their reward on the field of battle and they were today enjoying their Easter with Him who was the first to lay down His life for His brethren. Others again were spared and had returned home, and the Bishop hoped that individually and as a nation, we would ever be grateful to those brave men who had risked everything for their king and country.

A Word of Counsel.

The Bishop remarked that we read a good deal nowadays about the problem of the returned soldier, but as far as he knew the men from Peterborough, the only problem they presented was that of men ready to get back to civilian life and do their duty as good citizens as they had done, what they humbly called, their "bit" on the field of battle. He would offer but one word of counsel to the men who had been such faithful soldiers of an earthly king and that was to emulate the singleness of purpose they had in France, in serving their Heavenly King. Job has said that man's life is a warfare; the Generalissimo of the allied army is called the Gray man for Christ. May our returned soldiers be always known as the khaki-clad soldiers of Christ and may they after having served faithfully and well our lawful rulers on earth, and the King of Kings above enjoy for eternity, the happiness of heaven, of which it is written "That eye hath not seen nor ear heard neither hath it entered into the heart of man what things God hath prepared for them that love Him."

Musical Service.

A splendid musical service was rendered at the Cathedral yesterday under the leadership of Mr. J. Minnicola, choir leader, and Miss M. Doherty, organist. In the morning was the Mass Solenelle by Bordese. Solos during the mass were taken by Miss Florence Leahy, Miss G. Clancey, Mrs. E. A. and N. Simons, and by Mr. E. Pacard and Mr. J. Minnicola. Offertory, Regnia Coeli, by Lambilotte.

In the evening there was Pontifical vespers: O Salutaris, duet by Messrs. Fitzpatrick and Minnicola, and Tantumergo by the entire choir.

Bolshevist Troops Join Ukranians

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Vienna, April 21.—Forces under Petlura, Ukranian peasant leader, have retaken Zhitomir and Proskuroy and also secured the adhesion of 10,000 Bolshevist troops, particularly those originating in East Ukraine, according to a wireless despatch from Ternopol. It would appear that the Petluras plan, of cutting behind the Bolsheviki advancing into Bessarabia and toward Odessa, is succeding.

Paris, April 21.—Grave doubts are expressed today whether the perfected peace treaty would be presented to the German representatives Friday. UNIQUE WEDDING AT VICTORIA HALL

BANQUET AT 5.30 AT SALVATION TEMPLE TO PRECEDE CEREMONY.

The musical program and Hallelujah wedding, which is to be held in Victoria hall on Monday evening, will be preceded by a banquet served in the Salvation Army Temple, between 5.30 and 7 o'clock. Covers are being laid for 1-400, and after the supper the guests will repair to Victoria hall. The proceeds from this wedding will be used to wipe off the Sunday school debt, and for this reason, and for the reason that the contracting parties are both Sunday school workers here. The two speakers representing Com. Richards, are to come from Toronto.

In the room at the home of Mr. R. C. Braund where the wedding breakfast will be served, there hangs a huge poster which was published by The Review in 1893 and announcing the wedding of Mr R C. Braund and Miss May Green under the same circumstances as this coming wedding.

His Memory Will Keep Ever Green

BY UNVEILING OF TABLET TO LATE DR. GEORGE BURNHAM

The name of a life-long and consistent member of St. John's Anglican church will be perpetuated in the history of the parish by the unveiling last Saturday afternoon of a tablet, in memory of the late Dr. George Burnham.

The impressive ceremony was conducted by Rev. Canon Davidson, following the 5 o'clock lenten service, and Warden Dr. Cameron unveiled the tablet which is situated in the south end of the nave, on the west wall. The tablet is of brass, and its lettering legibly cut in black and red. The inscription reads as follows:

To the Glory of God
And in Memory of
GEORGE BURNHAM, M.P.
Aged 72 Years
A life-long Member and a Benefactor of this Parish
Erected by the Congregation

Rev. Canon Davidson in a brief, but appropriate address, referred to the late Dr. Burnham's exemplary Christian life and consistent loyalty to the church. He fully appreciated the loss in the deceased gentleman of a benefactor to both church and parish, whose ready response to calls for cooperation and financial contribution were always of a generous nature.

The late Dr. George Burnham actively engaged in church lay work all his long life. Not only did he contribute liberally to the needs of St. John's but he extended a generous hand to St. Luke's and St. George's churches, this city, and likewise to St. Mark's in Otonabee, which edifice his father was the means of having erected.

For the first time in its history women were invited to be present at the annual dinner of the Cleveland Democracy recently held in New York.

New Hitch in the Peace Conference

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, April 21.—The German reply to the ultimatum of the Council of Four that it will not receive any German delegates not fully empowered to conduct and negotiate peace, is awaited anxiously in Peace Conference circles. The next step toward peace depends on the Germans' reply. Fears are felt in some quarters that this unexpected development will affect the program for the meeting planned for Friday at Versailles. If the German government, in reply to the ultimatum of the Council, raises a controversy regarding the status of their delegates and the procedure to be followed, it is conceivable that the arrival of their delegates at Versailles may be postponed.

MOUNTED POLICE NEED RECRUITS

APPLICATIONS MAY BE FILLED AT THE GOVERNMENT EMPLOYMENT BUREAU.

Peterborough men who are eligible and who are desirous of joining the Royal Northwest Mounted Police have the opportunity offered them at the present time through the local Employment Bureau. There are 535 men required.

It is essential that recruits should be secured from the following classes:

Single men.

Between 18 and 40 years of age.

Must furnish birth and character certificates.

Ex-members of the force preferred.

Returned soldiers, preferably from the cavalry and horse artillery.

The ranks of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police were sadly depleted as a result of the calls made upon them by the recent war, and it is evident that an effort is to be made to bring the organization back to standard again.

This force is one of the most unique in the history of the world; none other ever excelled the record it has gained for itself for thoroughness and tireless perseverance. It has come to be looked upon with affection by the people of the Northwest as one of the peculiar properties and interesting features of their expansive country. By the Indians the R.N.W.M.P. was considered since 1870 as a most effective bulwark of the British Empire and as the direct representatives of the great White Chief across the sea.

With the curtailment of the force as a result of the demands made upon it by the war, the people of the West feared that the historic organization might be allowed to pass out of existence, especially in view of the fact that the purpose for which it was designed is no longer present, though other work has been found for the men in addition to keeping order.

The Government has given assurance that the Mounties will not be allowed to pass away, at least not for a while, and an effort is being made to recruit the unit to its full strength once more. Anyone wishing to join must lose no time as it always was a remarkably popular service and there will be numberless applications received. Those requiring further particulars should apply to Mr. Hugh Robertson, secretary, local Employment Bureau.

GERMANY FORCES THREE POWERS TO FORM ALLIANCE

BRITAIN, FRANCE AND UNITED STATES HAD NO OTHER ALTERNATIVE.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, April 21.—The announcement by Count von Brockdorff-Rantzau, German foreign minister, that his government would send delegates without full powers to receive the peace terms and transmit them to the government has contributed greatly, newspapers say, toward the alliance between Britain, France and America. The French press insists that negotiations looking toward such an alliance are still in progress.

J. R. BELL SELLS OUT BUSINESS

SANITARY GROCERY STORE IS PURCHASED BY R. A. LAWSON, NORTH BAY

Mr. James R. Bell has sold to R. A. Lawson, formerly of North Bay, the grocery business at 197 Hunter St., which Mr. Bell has conducted so successfully for the past fifteen years. Mr. Bell will continue to conduct the ice cream parlor which he has been running for some time as an adjunct to his other business.

Mr. Bell has been noted as the keeper of one of the best arranged and cleanest grocery stores in the city, with a stock that was always fresh and up to date, and Mr. Lawson, his successor, realizes that he has one of the most desirable places in Peterborough. Mr. R. Ross, manager for T. Kinnear & Co., who assisted Mr. Bell in his final stocktaking, complimented him upon the arrangement and the quality of the goods on hand.

Mr. Lawson comes to Peterborough well recommended as a live business man with a long experience in the grocery trade. His aim will be to keep his new place up to its former record.

Mr. Bell desires to thank the public for their generous patronage for the past fifteen years.

SPECIAL SERVICE ST. GEORGE'S DAY

BISHOP OF OTTAWA WILL PREACH IN ST. JOHN'S CHURCH.

The arrangements for the National service on St. George's Day, the 23rd inst., are now almost complete. The service will be held at St. John's church at 8 p.m. The preacher will be the Bishop of Ottawa. Peterborough is lucky in having such a prominent prelate for this occasion. He is one of the busiest Bishops in the whole of Canada. Besides his diocesan duties he is chairman of the War Service Commission of the English church of Canada. He is also chairman of the Federal War Service Commission of the Anglican, Presbyterian, Methodist and Baptists of the commission.

He is also a member of several other war commissions, yet notwithstanding all this, he finds time to come and preach the National sermon on St. George's Day in Peterborough.

The musical part of the service will be under the direction of Mr. R. J. Devoy. He has organized a special choir of 120 voices for this National service.

It may be mentioned that the Red Roses will be sold in the city on Tuesday and Wednesday next, as on former occasions. The proceeds will be given in aid of St. George's Mission in the south end.

BUGGY RUN DOWN BY AUTOMOBILE

"PERRY" BUTLER ARRESTED ON CHARGE OF RECKLESS DRIVING.

Reckless driving while in an intoxicated conditon was the charge against Pierce (Perry) Butler when he appeared in the police court this morning and pleaded not guilty. He was remanded until tomorrow morning in custody, upon the Crown stating that this would be necessary in order to obtain a necessary witness.

In addition to the charge of having been in an intoxicated condition while driving an automobile upon George street on Saturday night, Chief Thompson announced that there was another charge against Butler.

He was accused of having smashed into a buggy driven by Sidney Reid of Otonabee at a point on George street near the intersection of Charlotte street. Mr. Reid, in laying the information, stated that the collision occurred about a quarter to twelve o'clock. Butler drove up behind him in a Ford car and sent his buggy flying onto the sidewalk.

Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared for the accused and requested that bail be allowed, but Magistrate Dumble refused upon the grounds that Butler was endangering the lives of the citizens of the city by driving recklessly and should be kept in jail. Mr. Gordon replied that he had not been proved guilty yet, and that the court usually gave the prisoner the benefit of the doubt. The magistrate would not agree to allow the accused to go, however.

MEN WANTED FOR CIVIL SERVICE

SOLDIERS' AID COMMISSION HAS LIST OF VACANCIES FOR VETERANS.

The local branch of the Soldiers' Aid Commission has received a list of men required as employes in the outside civil service on canals throughout the Dominion.

The list includes as many as 175 positions, in all branches of the outside service, now opening up. This list, which is too long to insert in the papers, can be consulted at the office of the local branch in the city building.

On the Trent Canal and at and about Peterborough are required two assistant lockmasters, one foreman of repairs, and one cook on dredge. Applicants can see Mr. Killaly at the canal office, Bank of Commerce building, city.

In connection with the above, it may be noted that as the positions are in the civil service men must fill in the application for that service.

At Mitchell, Ont., an old lady, Miss W. B. Wills, aged 87, was at the station to welcome her grandson from the war.

FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH

MONDAY, APRIL 21, 1919

UP TO THE BUYERS.

THE HOUSEKEEPERS of Canada are the greatest purchasing agents in the country. It is the women who buy the supplies for the home, and in such an economic crisis as the present the influence of the women is practically unlimited. They can see to it that preference is given to those goods that are made in Canada by Canadian workmen. The wife of the toiler, every time she purchases an article made at home, is making her husband more secure in his position. The wife of the manufacturer is helping the industrial problem when she does likewise.

And the women of Peterborough, in public session assembled, have, it is cheering to note, recognized their opportunity and their responsibility in this regard, and Canadian-made goods are to be given the preference in their purchases.

AN UPRIGHT MAN IN OFFICE.

HON. DR. CODY, the Minister of Education, in more ways than one presents a hitherto unparalleled example of what it is possible for a public man to be and to do in the way of setting up a new precedent. The doctor went on an official trip to England, and the Opposition thought they saw an opportunity to bring home to the Government a charge of extravagance. One of the members set out to ascertain just what that trip cost the province. Dr. Cody did not hesitate to furnish this and all other information that was sought, and he comes through the ordeal of cross-examination with his reputation brighter than ever.

When the Minister of Education started on an official trip, undertaken not of his own motion but at the behest of his superiors, he was furnished with $1000, to be used in the payment of his expenses. When he returned he handed back $875, so that his trip cost Ontario only $125. Of course, there are politicians in the province who will regard this as an opportunity that the Minister of Eduction simply threw away. His course is vastly different to that pursued by an official in a wider field, who was given $5000 for his expenses on an official journey which he was unable to take, and who returned the money only after Parliament had made the matter the subject of debate at two sessions.

Yes, Dr. Cody is in many ways a rarity indeed. He is an office holder without being a partisan, a patriot who does not parade his devotion to his country, a church man without being a zealot, and, perhaps more to be marveled at than anything else, a man who seems to believe that business principles and upright dealing are not out of place in public life.

PEACE COMPACTS OF HISTORY.

EVERY DAY some new report concerning the Peace Conference at Paris is given to the public. The information is sent out on the strength, too often, of mere rumor that the delegates are in accord, that Germany is to be brought to her knees, and that the League of Nations has been organized on such terms as to render all future warfare impossible. Next day comes a story that shakes the faith of the world in what has been heard before.

About all that the public knows definitely is that the proceedings have been carried on with the secrecy that is supposed to be part of the wisdom of diplomats, and that any idea of what has been really done is simply so much conjecture. But the people are justified in comparing the purported findings of the present conference with those of other gatherings held for the same lofty purpose, and in speculating upon the success of any new diplomatic experiment that may be planned. When the convention was held at The Hague in 1907 to devise a plan for keeping the peace of the world, what was really a league of nations was formed, to which all the leading powers were parties. In the event of international trouble, there was to be arbitration. It is true that disputes between governments, both in America and the Old World were adjusted under this arrangement, but these disputes involved only questions of law and not such matters as usually result in an open rupture. Even if such differences had never been smoothed away, real warfare between the nations interested would have been improbable. But when the opportunity came for The Hague tribunal to accomplish something of moment, the tribunal failed. The whole world went to war.

It is claimed that the defect in the arrangement made at The Hague was the failure to provide police power to enforce the decrees of the court of arbitration. That power, it seems, is to be provided in the constitution of the new League.

Germany was a signatory to the international treaty made at The Hague in 1907, and when it suited their convenience the Germans violated every clause of their obligations. The armies of the Allies constituted at that time the police force that brought Germany to terms, and that police force succeeded only after four years of ghastly war. So long as the balance of power is out of all proportion, so long will the world be in danger.

The more severe the terms imposed on Germany by the Peace Conference, the more likely are the people of the former empire to unite together for offence and defence. The democratization of the various states, the overthrow of the dynasty, will not necessarily make for peace. As an empire, France lost the war of 1870 and the provinces of Alsace and Lorraine. As a republic, France spent half a century in preparing for the recovery of her lost territory, and succeeded at last, but only at a terrible cost.

Russia and Germany, in anarchy and chaos, are little less to be dreaded than Germany and Russia under arms and ready for the field. The safety of the world would still be menaced by such breeding places of the effluvium that would penetrate civilization in every corner of the earth.

LABOR AND THE TARIFF.

THERE IS NOTHING in the platform of the Independent Labor Party which contains any specific reference to the tariff question, and so far as the local branch of the organization is concerned, the subject is rarely mentioned. At the convention in Toronto last week, however, the tariff was the subject of a discussion that lasted for hours. The very fact that no definite decision was [illegible] conclusively that there [illegible] a wide difference of opinion, the inference being that the majority are in favor of leaving this problem to work out its own solution. Finally it was decided to take a vote of the members of the party throughout the province, the result of the referendum to determine future action.

Some of the delegates to the Labor convention argued that the party should concern itself with social rather than fiscal problems, that to better the living conditions of the workingman was the highest mission of the organization. Does not this savor of the common mistake of putting the cart before the horse, of confounding cause and effect? The condition of the workingmen in Canada is infinitely better than that of the wage earners of Europe, and it is the tariff that has made it so. If the tax on imports, by which home production has been encouraged, is a benefit to the manufacturer, it is so to an equal degree to the men who work for wages, and whose employment depends upon the extent of manufacturing activity at home. Prosperity is apt to impair the memory of the beneficiaries. Are there in the Independent Labor Party no members old enough to recall the social conditions of this country prior to 1878, when the fate that threatened the masses of the people was little short of appalling? Are the workingmen of Canada mad enough to bring about a reversal to these conditions by listening to the sophistries of those who at the best have only an academic knowledge of fiscal questions or who are simply agitating for political effect?

Labor men in Peterborough, whether they belong to unions or not, whether they are identified with the new party, or still acknowledge allegiance to the old, only recently united in a protest against the importation of goods, duty free or otherwise, when those goods could be manufactured in Peterborough by wage-earners who are now idle. A few weeks ago members of the Trades and Labor Council, in company with local manufacturers, went as a delegation to Ottawa to ask the Government to foster home indusery by every means in its power.

Organized and unorganized workingmen the country over protest against the importation of cheap Coolie laborers. They are also opposed to the unrestricted immigration of the pauper labor of Europe. The Government has protected Canadian labor from the first menace and has promised to do as much with regard to the other demand. But what purpose will be served by keeping out the cheap foreign labor if the products of that labor are to be admitted to Canada without question? If Canadian factories are closed down and the men cast out of employment, what will it avail if the cost of living goes down so long as the unemployed have no money or other means of buying food or clothing?

The millennium is the ideal condition for which the world waits. As an academic theory, free trade may be the fiscal Utopia, but, like the millennium, that Utopia is still a distant prospect, and the people are facing stern facts instead of theories. There may come a time when labor will operate under the same conditions in all parts of the universe, when the Chinese and the Japs will be able to vary their rations of rice, when the slums and sweat shops of Europe are abolished. Then, and not till then, will the interchange of goods without tariff restrictions, be the subject for the talk of practical men instead of tricky politicians and dreamers.

REVIEW OF THE LEGISLATION

Some of the Important Measures Passed at Recent Session of Provincial House.

Since February 25 when the Ontario Legislature opened its fifth session of the 14th Parliament, a number of important measures were introduced in addition to the legislation passed there were features of the session which furnished a great deal of speculative comment.

Mr. Hartley Dewart, K.C., M.P.P. and Col. Machin were early prominent in connection with the O.T.A. both denouncing what they termed the fanatical puritanism in its administration.

War profiteers also got a gruelling and a sad note was introduced in reference to the death of the late W. J. Hanna.

Housing Legislation

In connection with the different measures introduced to the House, those which stood out most prominently were the Housing Bill, new educational bills and the Disqualification Act.

The Housing Bill was brought in by Premier Sir William Hearst, and in order to give municipalities an opportunity to supply houses for the working classes the bill was put through without discussion.

The Referendum

A full explanation of the Referendum Act was given by the Premier. This gives the public of Ontario an opportunity to repeal or sustain the present act, to have light beer in standard hotels, or Government control of beer and other malt liquors.

New legislation dealing with the school situation of Ontario was submitted by Hon. H. J. Cody, Minister of Education. This made provision for the establishment of consolidated schools throughout the province the decrease in population in rural districts being responsible for such legislation. A twin bill to Dr. Cody's was introduced by Hon. George S. Henry, which establishes community halls throughout the rural districts for the puprose of increasing social intercourse among the population.

The Disqualification Act, which received its third reading on Thursday night last, had for its aim the disfranchising for a number of years all those who failed to comply with the Military Service Act and those convicted of seditious offences.

During the session Hon. T. W. McGarry submitted to the House one of his best budgets, in which he showed despite wartime conditions, a surplus of $1,869,000. In his speech he also announced the discontinuance of the one mill provincial war tax.

Pay Opposition Leader

In future the Opposition Leader will receive $3,500 a year, the paying of the stipend to commence from October 31 last. The members of the T. and N. O. Railway Board with the exception of the chairman, were given an increase from $1,000 to $2,000 a year and Col. Delemare's salary was advanced $500.

Hon. Finlay MacDiarmid, Minister of Public Works, announced that the Government is to increase its assistance to county roads to 40 per cent, for maintenance thus making the province's assistance the same as for capital expenditure.

That Overseas Trip

Hon. H. J. Cody, Minister of Education, answered a number of questions concerning his trip overseas, asked by Col. Pratt. They were: "On the authority and for what purpose did the Minister of Education visit Great Brlain and France in 1918 and what was the total cost of the trip? Was he entertained by the Agent-General for Ontario at a banquet given in his honor at the Savoy Hotel, London? What was the total cost of the entertainment? What was the itinerary of his trip in France? Dit he deliver any addresses to the front line troops? Was a report of his trip furnished to the Government and will it be tabled?

The Minister of Education said he was invited overseas by the Imperial authorities; was ordered overseas by the Militia Department in his capacity of senior chaplain of the Queen's Own Rifles, his absence was sanctioned by the Prime Minister, who directed him to make investigations with a view to furthering the comfort of Ontario men overseas, particularly as regarded Christmas parcels.

"Before leaving he informed the Prime Minister that he hoped to inquire into educational activities in Great Britain, which he did, with good results. He made special investigation into the technical and industrial educational systems of England and Scotland, also the training of teachers, particularly those to be employed in secondary schools. Dr. Cody also looked into the actual working of the Khaki Club as an educational institution for Canadians overseas.

Dinner Modest Affair

The dinner at the Savoy Hotel was arranged by the late Agent-General for Ontario. It was a modest affair. There was no liquor and as he was not in the habit of enquiring as to what it cost his hosts to entertain he did not do so on that occasion.

The Minister said he visited practically the entire front, but did not address the troops, the battle of Cambrai being on at that time the soldiers being too busy to listen to speeches.

Hon. Mr. Cody said that on his return he reported to the Prime Minister, but did not make a written report. Through his accountable warrant he was furnished with $1,000 by the Government, but on arriving home he returned $875 to the Provincial Treasurer.

$5,000,000 For Roads

Legislation to provide for $5,000,000 out of consolidated revenue for the construction of highways and roads was put through.

Twilight Musical At Trinity Church

Peterboro's music lovers who attended the Twilight Musical given in Trinity Methodist church on Good Friday, between the hours of four and five were pleased with the fine well-balanced program that was most ably rendered.

The musical was under the auspices of the Young Ladies' Mission Circle and was presented by Mr. and Mrs. Geo. H. King, organist and soprano soloist of the church, respectively, and Miss Edna Stewart pianist, an accomplished pupil of Mr. King. They were assisted by Miss Laura Logan and Mr. John Allan.

The first number was an instrumental organ solo "War March of the Priests," an old favorite with Peterboro audiences and very capably rendered by Mr. King, whose playing was most able.

The next selection was to have been a soprano solo by Mrs. Geo. H. King, entitled "The Lord is My Shepher," by J. Adams, but this part of the musical was replaced by an instrumental number in two parts. There were three instruments playing in these two, which were (a) "Love's Coronation," (b) "For You Alone," namely, the organ presided over by Mr. Geo. H. King, the piano, by Mr. John Allan, and the violin in the able hands of Miss Laura Logan.

This was in all probability Mr. Allan's last public appearance in Peterboro. His part was performed in his usual effective manner which Peterboro people have learned to appreciate.

Miss Laura Logan performed in her usual capable and finished style on the violin and once more demonstrated her right to be known as Peterboro's premier violinist.

The third number was the piano solo, "Valse Chromatique," (Godard) which was played by Miss Edna Stewart. Miss Stewart reflected credit on her teacher, Mr. King, as her playing was excellent and took well with the audience.

In the next number Mrs. King, in her fine soprano voice rendered J. Pringle Scott's "The Voice in the Wilderness," very effectively.

The organ solos by Mr. King which followed Mrs. King's solo showed him to be one of Peterboro's finest organists. Mrs. King's solos, which followed, revealed her capabilities as a soloist to excellent advantage.

Miss Stewart in her second appearance, presented Prelude, Op 3. No-2, (Rachmanioff) in a manner that made it one of the treats of the afternoon.

The last number was Morris' "Out of the Depths," which was ably handled by Mrs. King.

NOTED DIVINE TO HOLD SERVICES

REV. T. J. THOMPSON TO PREACH ANNIVERSARY SERVICES AT ST. PAUL'S

This year St. Paul's Presbyterian church is fortunate in securing as its anniversary preacher the Rev. (Capt.) T. J. Thompson, M.A., minister of the Glebe Presbyterian church, Ottawa. Mr. Thompson served as chaplain with the overseas forces at Gallipoli, and in Egypt. He will preach at both services on May 4th and will lecture the following Monday night on "The White Man's Burden in Egypt." Mr. Thompson is a keen student of modern conditions, both in the church and in the world, and his sermons are sure to be of a high intellectual order. Possibly less is known of the British possessions in Egypt and the work which the British Government has been doing there than of any other of her possessions. His lecture, therefore, promises to be one of great interest.

St. Paul's church has had but three ministers during its long history of 86 years. It was in the year 1833 that the Rev. John Morris Roger, a minister of the church of Scotland, came out from Aberdeen and gathered together a small congregation from Peterboro and surrounding district.

The first building was on lot seven, north of King street, but there was no formal organization until October 12, 1834. The first elders were ordained November 2nd that same year. Their names were Andrew Tully, Jno. Hutchison, M.D.; John Edmundson and David Hamilton. Mr. Roger continued to serve the congregation until 1875, when he became pastor emeritus. He died in 1878. The second pastor, Rev. E. F. Torrence, D.D., served the congregation from 1876 to 1907, when he retired and went to reside in Kingston.

The present pastor, Rev. Robert Popue, was inducted December 5th, 1907.

A rich Chinese in Calgary said it was a common thing for $10,000 to change hands there in the course of an all-night session of "fan-tan."

MRS. DOOLEY'S ADVICE TO WORKING GIRLS

Milwaukee, Wis.—"I wish all girls who work and suffer from functional disorders would profit by my advice and take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Before I was married, when I came home from work at night, I would be just worn out with pains which dragged me down. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it made me feel like a new woman. I can work from morning until night and it does not bother me, and I wish all girls who suffer as I did would try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. H. DOOLEY, 1135 25th Street, Milwaukee, Wis.

Working girls everywhere should profit by Mrs. Dooley's experience, and instead of dragging along from day to day with life a burden, give this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It has overcome just such conditions for thousands of others, and why not for you? For special advice, write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of their 40 years experience is at your service.

Work and Workers.

There is not so much difference in the world's work as in the world's workers. It is not so much difference what we are doing—so long as it is useful—that counts as the way in which we are doing it. The work of which we are ashamed we either have no right to do, or we are not doing it as we should.

"Hail, Smiling Horne."

Because he wears a smile that won't come off, Sir Robert S. Horne, the new Minister of Labor is thus known to his friends. He is one of the big men of the Scottish Bar, abandoning a large practice in order to devote himself to national service.

He is rather fond of the story of the judge who gave one of the briefest summings-up on record. "Gentlemen of the jury," he said, "if you don't believe the witnesses for the plaintiff you will find for the defendant. If you don't believe witnesses for defendant, you will find for the plaintiff. If, like myself, you don't believe any of them, Heaven knows which way you will find. Consider your verdict."

The People's Might.

The feudal system, like other stupendous fabrics of past ages, is known only by the rubbish it has left behind it. Crowned heads have been compelled to submit to the restraints of law, and the people, with that intelligence which makes the voice resistless, have been able to say to the prerogative: "Thus far shalt thou come and no farther."—Daniel Webster.

European Army Uniforms.

Until the great war broke out France had never adopted any official field uniform for its army as a whole. Troops on duty in Africa had been supplied with khaki, while several experimental uniforms had been tried in sections of the home army. When the war broke out in 1914 the troops went into service in their historic red and blue. The impracticability of this uniform was soon discovered and a colored cloth of light grayish blue was adopted. This was said to blend better with the surroundings in the field in Northern France than the khaki worn by the British.

The British army was first entirely equipped with a field service uniform in the South African War of 1899-1902. The color adopted was the same as the khaki-colored uniforms which had been used in India and the same uniform is still used. Though varying in color and details this type of uniform has been practically copied by all nations.

The uniforms of the Italians have been rather French in character, particularly since the Napoleonic conquest of Italy, but of an endless variety of colors. Previous to the unity of the country in 1861 each separate kingdom and state maintained and dressed its army as it saw fit. It was not until 1870 that the entire Italian army came under one dress regulation. These regulations were changed in 1890, at which time the present uniform was adopted. The field uniform is brownish gray in color.

In Germany experiments with a field service uniform were begun immediately after Britain's war with the Boers, but it was not until 1908 that a definite uniform was decided upon. The army since that time has been equipped with feln uniforms of brownish gray. Military critics of the war of the nations agreed that it was the most practicel of the uniforms now in the field as far as adaptability for concealment is concerned, though the tight-fitting tunics and heavy helmets are unsuited for modern warfare.

The Think-Tank.

In the preparation of human skeletons for anatomical purposes—for museums, for the instruction of medical students, etc.—resort is had to a rather curious and interesting expedient.

The skull has to be taken apart—"disarticulated," as the surgical phrase is—and the job cannot be accomplished by rude methods.

A human cranium consists of a number of bones, rather intimately interlocked. How to separate them without breakage is the problem.

Experience has proved that the best way to accomplish this is by filling the brain cavity with dried peas and then saturating the latter with water. In expanding they gently force the bones apart.

The method is especially applicable to the skulls of very young individuals, the bones of which are as yet not well naited. It was invented by the French, who have highly developed this [illegible]

In fact, Paris is the world's most important centre for the manufacture, so to speak, of skeletons, which are quite wonderful in their way.

MURRAY STREET CHURCH HONORS MEMORY OF ITS FALLEN HEROES

Rev. J. R. Webb in His Evening Discourse Pays Tribute to Valor of Five Young Men Who Made Supreme Sacrifice.

Large congregations gathered at Murray Street Baptist church both morning and evening yesterday. At the morning service the pastor baptised thirteen candidates among whom were several young men and [illegible] the Sunday School. The sermon was from the text "He is not here, but is risen." The choir rendered its usual excellent service and Mr. Asa Huycke gave a baritone solo.

The Fallen Heroes.

In the evening a memorial service was held to five members of Murray Street Church who have laid down their lives since the last memorial occasion. The service was planned in such a way that the Easter idea was dominant and the atmosphere of gloom so frequently present in such services was missing. The war veterans had thoughtfully volunteered representation and the words spoken by Dr. Wood were chaste and appropriate and noticeably moved the congregation.

The choir sang "He is Risen," in splendid fashion, Miss Florence Scott rendered an adaptation of "Her Son," by Bond, after the remarks of Dr. Wood and Miss Ida Lynn and Mr. Steer were heard in the duet, "He did not die in vain."

All Were Volunteers

The sermon was based on the words from the fourteenth chapter of Romans "Whether we live therefore or die we are the Lord's" Mr. Webb sought to make his audience acquainted with the men in whose memory the service was held by mentioning each one by name and speaking of some traits of his character and saying that each one had by public profession of faith acknowledged his Lord before the call came to service for his King. The speaker remarked that they were all volunteers, men who went to the front when they knew well what going meant, men who were anything but lovers of war but such as felt the pressure of the Divine hand toward this responsibility and arose to their duty. "One of the wonders of this war," said Mr. Webb, "is the fact that in so many cases the men who have rendered the most conspicuous service have been the most unwarlike in all their tendencies, certainly these men went to what they considered their duty because they realized the first truth of the text that living they belonged to the Lord.

The believer must be comforted in his grief by remembering that the "loved and lost" who had committed themselves to the Redeemer were indeed His in death. "I cannot believe said the speaker "in the book before me without concluding that amid the whistle of shells and the smoke of war and the fire of destruction there walks one who was with the Hebrew children in the fiery furnace and has charged Himself with the care of everyone who has reposed his trust in Him. [illegible] with our beloved dead; they have a part in Christ's resurrection, since they are joint heirs with Him. These fair boys who sailed away so hopefully, who sacrificed so willingly who forgot so bravely and died so courageously will by and by meet us again. Then their war-tales will not be like Goldsmith's

"Broken soldier kindly bade to stay
Sat by the fire and talked the night away.
Wept o'er his wounds—or tales of sorrow done;
Shouldered his crutch to show how fields were won.

No—not so—but:
"We'll ask them whence their victory came
They'll with united breath
Ascribe the glory to the Lamb.
Their triumph to his death."

A very touching part of the service was the reading of the names of the soldiers while the entire congregation stood, this was followed by the Committal service when the choir sang softly:

Forever with the Lord
Amen so let it be.
Life from the dead is in that word
Tis immortality."

Special offering

The special offering made yesterday by the congregation toward the building fund amounted to over one thousand dollars besides the regular collection. This was not accomplished by a few large gifts but by the many who were glad to make a gift toward this purpose. The largest individual gift being, according to the treasurer's announcement one hundred and twenty five dollars, and the smallest, one dollar. The mortgage debt on the building is being reduced by these semi-annual offerings at the rate of one thousand dollars every half year.

The decorating of the church was the work of the Bible Class of the Sunday School and the use made of flags, plants and cut flowers was most harmonious.

The Honor Roll

The names of those to whose memory tribute was paid yesterday were as follows:

Fred Stanley.
Joseph Horton,
John Ellam.
Arthur Lewis,
George Collins.

TAG DAY RECEIPTS $1,227.39

An even $1,227.39 is the total sum of money realized by the local branch of the G. W. V. A. as a result of their tag day on Saturday last. The results from Lakefield are not yet known, and no doubt the sum donated there will swell the total considerably.

Secretary Whatley states that the members of the G. W. V. A. should be well pleased with the result, especially when the prevailing hard times are considered.

He wishes to thank the Ladies' Auxiliary and all others who assisted in the money-raising campaign; also the members of the Children's Aid Society, who lent the boxes, and Mr. Phelan and his assistant who counted the cash and tabled the results.

Comrade Sergt. Cooper headed the list of collectors with a total of $76.61.

A detailed statement showing the receipts will be published tomorrow.

How to Attain Old Age.

Sir George Reid's golden rule for the attainment of old age is worth a place in the Office Window as a corrective to all war valetudinarians: "I have aimed at health and happiness and when confronted by a formidable obstacle I have first tried to knock it over; failing this, to get round it; if not, then under it; and if all these maneuvers failed I have been content to lie down in its grateful shade, lauding it as a beautiful blessing in disguise."—London Chronicle.

APRIL 21 TO 26
CANADA'S MUSIC WEEK

MUSIC
Inseparably Associated with EASTER

Music is the means that has been adopted throughout the ages for communicating the joy of the Easter message.

The spirit of the festival is more inspiringly expressed by the music that has always accompanied it than by any other single medium.

The Easter message is conveyed to man's mind by the spoken word of the pulpit and the printed word of the Book but is impressed on his heart by the wordless voice of music.

For music reaches our innermost selves, taps a channel leading to our higher nature and brings us in tune with the Infinite.

Millions go to church on Easter simply to hear the Easter music. They are reached through music as they are not reached in any other way.

Music speaks the language of the soul, but it likewise speaks the language of life—the language of the heart.

When we speak from the depths of our religious nature, we have recourse to music and we sing our praises to God.

When we are stirred by any emotion in secular life, we likewise resort to music for its expression. We sing love songs and patriotic songs. We sing songs of sadness and songs of gladness—songs of home and songs of childhood, and our nature responds and vibrates with the magic of the message brought to us.

Music transfuses joy and softens sorrow.
It should shed its blessings in every home.

Buy a piano, a player piano or a phonograph and celebrate this Easter with music in your own home and provide the means whereby music may be an ever available friend and companion.

SAGE TEA TURNS GRAY HAIR DARK

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre To Hair

That beautiful even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray or streaked, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundred fold.

Don't bother to prepare the mixture; you can get this famous old recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients at a small cost, all ready for use. It is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and lustrous.

FOWLER'S PEBLO GLASSES

REMORSE IS SURE TO COME

Remorse is really a sour memory. Care for your eyes in youth if you would avoid it, and your old age will produce sweet recollections. Age is not the only reason for failing eyes. Children have weak eyes, which often is not known, but should be attended to. If they have trouble with their studies it may be from weak, tired eyes. Bring them to Dr. Fowler for examination.

WOMEN'S COUNCIL FOR CANADA FIRST

LOCAL BRANCH ADOPT RESOLUTION FAVORING HOME-MADE GOODS

The regular meeting of the Local Council of Women was held in the Green Room of the Y.W.C.A. on Thursday afternoon, Mrs. Arthur Stevenson presiding.

After the usual routine business had been attended to a most interesting discussion took place throughout the course of the appeal to the women of Canada in the following letter from the Canadian Trade Commissioner:

The Letter

The Canadian Trade Commission is undertaking an extensive inquiry into conditions in the Dominion for the purpose of promoting an expansion of "after-war" trade. It is felt, for reasons which will be easily understood by all women, that a return to pre-war standards in trade, as in all other national aims and aspirations, even if it were possible, would not meet the new need, as the huge financial burdens of the war and its consequences will have to be borne for many years to come.

The women of Canada, singly and through their organizations, have shown by whole-hearted support given to national effort in food how great their collective influence may be in other directions. In every national undertaking during the war, the sympathy, understanding and active co-operation of women were proved to be essential. For the present and the immediate future, there is on women especially the obligation to see that purchases for the homes are made in such a way that the effect will be to stabilize Canadian trade. Wherever possible, they should buy only Canadian produce and Canadian products, because this will give employment in additional lines of production to returned soldiers and to those, many thousands in number, who were formerly occupied in war work. In this way, they will not only insure employment for our workers, but they will help to lessen the financial pressure which is likely to be increasingly felt.

Will Quickly Realize

Without entering exhaustively into the field of national economics, women will quickly realise that every dollar sent out of the country for commodities which can be produced at home will affect the financial situation adversely and at once. As the women of Canada purchase about 90 per cent of the commodities used in our domestic life, a realization by them of their power to re-make and vitalise Canadian trade and finance is a first step towards relieving the situation and safeguarding the national future.

For every million dollars retained in Canada by a refusal to buy other than Canadian goods, a year's continuous employment can be given to at least 1,000 people.

The Canadian Trade Commission is endeavoring by other means to encourage and develop our domestic manufactures and to utilize every reserve in the Dominion. To do this it will be their aim to turn to the best account the work of Canadians in the factory as well as in the field—to induce our people as far as practicable to make at home the things we need at home.

The figures given on the attached list, taken from the Trade Report of the Department of Customs, show the large quantities of goods, which are of special interest to women, imported into Canada from outside sources in 1918. The Canadian Trade Commission believes that if the majority of Canadian women would study the items of expenditure on this list, the effect would be highly beneficial to the finance and trade of Canada and to the employment of our workers. The same spirit of patriotic support shown from day to day in the purchase of things made at home as was shown during the food campaign and in all national efforts for war, would remedy much of this great adverse trade balance without further machinery. An adverse trade means a lessening of our power to reconstruct Canadian trade, and to maintain and promote good wages and favorable living conditions. It is therefore an immediate and important duty for Canadian women wherever and whenever possible to insist on getting Canadian-made goods, and to help in making the national trademark, "Made in Canada" one of a high standard of excellence in our domestic as well as in foreign markets.

Yours faithfully,
THE CANADIAN TRADE COMMISSION.

The discussion resulted in the bringing of the following resolution: "The Peterborough Local Council endorses the principle of using "Made in Canada" articles. That [illegible] be appointed by the Executive of the National Council, to meet the Canadian Manufacturer's Association at the earliest moment in order to secure a better understanding and co-operation between consumers and manufacturers as to quality and price."

Mrs. Willoughby Cummings was appointed by the Local Council to be their delegate at the formation of a Women's platform which is to be discussed at the annual meeting in June. A case, arising out of the investigation of the deplorable housing conditions in town, was left to the Committee of Public Health to deal with.

Auto Styles Show Great Variety

OVER FORTY DIFFERENT MAKES IN USE IN THIS CITY

Any one who stands on George street and notes the makes and the different styles of automobiles that pass up and down that busy thoroughfare will soon become impressed with the fact that the citizens of Peterboro and vicinity do not like to confine themselves to any two or three or half-dozen makes of cars even although some of these may be extremely popular. It is somewhat astonishing to notice how great is the variety in cars used by the citizens. These range from the small fours to the big sixes and eights and comprise all manner of designs and makes.

The following different makes of cars may be noticed on our streets: Ford, McLaughlin, Overland, Chevrolet, Studebaker, Dodge, Maxwell Grey-Dort, Reo, Hopmobile, Mitchell Briscoe, Russel, Chalmers Buick White Regal, Paige, Bell, Saxon, Menard, Dodge, Grant Six, Willys-Knight and 12 other makes of which there are only one or two of each make in our city. Besides these there are a few second hand American-made cars which brings the number of makes to be seen in Peterboro up to over forty.

Boy Scouts Notes

Parade Tuesday Evening.

The boy scouts will assemble on the market on Tuesday evening, at 7.15, to march to the Armories, arriving at 7.30 sharp. Every boy must wear his uniform as far as possible or his button-hole badge.

The first parade was a great success, 186 boys being in line, with out officers. This is only the start at the revival.

Did you have a chat with the boy who took part in the church parade to All Saints on Good Friday or the troops who went for hikes? These boys have found something good and they cannot tell you enough of the good time they had.

Sir Robert Baden Powell cannot come to Peterborough, but the scouts wish to thank the secretary of the G.W.V.A. for trying to help bring him.

The members of the boy scout local will meet on Monday, April 28th at 8 p.m. It is important that all members be present to make arrangements for the Toronto visit. Scout masters are asked to try and get some idea of how many of their troops are likely to go out and are asked to see that they are handed to the local secretary by Tuesday night as they are holding the settlement up.

LOCAL SECRETARY.

A vote of thanks is extended to The Review for the boy scout item in Saturday's paper.

Fitting Address To Returned Men

VILLERS CITIZENS PAY TRIBUTE TO HEROES OF THE WAR

In connection with the royal reception given returned soldiers by Villiers citizens April 18th, and to which brief reference was made in Saturday's issue, the following address was read by Mr. Alex. Gillespie:

Dear Sirs,—

The people of Villiers have assembled here tonight to extend to you their congratulations on your safe return to our community.

Unexpectedly, the Empire was called to arms a little over four years and a half ago. Before the Mother called the daughter's sons were on their way to join that mighty throng of chivalrous crusaders bent on rescuing the world from the hand of the Autocrat.

It was no selfish ideal nor glory of conquest that called you to exchange the comforts of civil life for the sufferings of war and risk of death. The fires of patriotism had been smouldering in your spirit, and early burst into flames.
